Delta Sorors Hostesses at Founders' Day Fete

with Lula Jones Garrett

Patricia Mitchner as matron of honor. Mrs. Mitchner wore blue taffeta and carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

The other attendant, Ruth Jackson, was gowned in aqua taffeta, and carried pink roses. John Hewlett was best man and the usher was James Bartley.

SPEAKING OF FASHIONS

Let's talk about that gray satin, draped at the front and with big puffs forming pegs at the side, and the cute cerise feather trimmed bonnet which Thelma Lawrence wore at the Founder's Day party of the National Association of College Women; of Mrs. Martin Jenkins in a cafe-au-lait felt hat atop a black taileur lined in Jackson in royal blue, with a ribbon hat sparked with a dash of green at the Founder's Day program of Delta Lambda Mu Sorority, a Sunday ago, and her national basileus, Margaret Haywood, the D.C. attorney, setting off her blondness to perfection in brown satin; Flossie Dedmond in swarthed dark taffeta at the same sorority affair; Julia English, with a marvelous tan and an equally marvelous black faille suit, flying in after a sojourn in the Caribbean, Viola Jackson in a pert, much berribboned sailor at ADA's annual Roosevelt dinner, an evening ago; and Theresa Waters in suave black crepe, deeply etched at the neck and much draped at the back, at the same dinner; Audrey Butler in Brown blue frock and matching chapeaux at the board meeting of the Northwest Clinic of Planned Parenthood on Tuesday evening; and the Delta sorors turning out a flock of eye-catching togs at their Founder's Day affair on Saturday evening, including:

Inez Read in a striking rose taffeta cloche, small turned back brim and big bow at the side; Ruth Rose, down in a changeable taffeta in wine with overtone of peach, made with plunging neckline and caught at waist with two huge flowers, and matching hat with flowers, set in material and open crown; Dukye Woode in a gray hat with plume framing the face and turning under the chin; Vivian Chamberlain in wine black moiline enterlaced with rhinestones; and Mae Downs in a brown frock embroidered in bronze beads, and Gloria Basfield, a symphony in brown, her dress of crepe, and hat, plume trimmed.

C. C. CLUB FETED

A trio of hostesses, Miss Kate Sheppard, Mrs. Lena Dickerson and Miss Edythe Myers, entertained the C. C. Club at a bridge luncheon on Saturday.

The group played pinochle, too, with Dellaphine Warrington taking the prize therein, while Marion Webb scored highest at bridge.

About were:

Daisy Jones, Lillian Barnum, Nellie Buchanan, Ethel Hughes, Laura Jones, Louise Whittington, Georgia Chester, Mae Fortune and Mrs. Webb.

Woodson, Mgs. Jane Sheppard of Meyersdale, Mrs. Madge Hurst of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Jackson of Buffalo, and Mr. and Mrs. William Woodson of Washington as other guests.

Children's Dental Health Day to Be Observed on Next Monday

Dental needs of young Marylanders will receive special emphasis on Feb. 7, which has been designated as National Children's Dental Health Day.

This announcement was made last Monday by Dr. Richard C. Leonard, chief of this department's Division of Oral Hygiene and chairman of the committee appointed by the State Dental Association, to direct State-wide observance of the day.

Next Monday's celebration, originated by the American Dental Association, also is being sponsored by the Maryland Dental Society of which Dr. J. Basil Weaver is president.

In Maryland, as in other States, interest in the program extends beyond the dental profession, with the result that numerous individuals and organizations are participating in the day's activities.

Special Programs Planned

Gov. W. Preston Lane Jr. has issued a proclamation requesting the co-operation of Marylanders in special observances of the occasion. Radio and television stations are giving time for dental health programs.

Schools are stressing dental health in their courses of health instruction; and members of the Maryland Dental Society will be available, if requested, for such programs. Dr. Weaver has announced.
