'Preacher' Held in Lye Blinding of Man, Burning of Two Women

Accused of throwing lye that burned two women and caused a man to lose an eye, Arthur (Preacher) Robinson was held under total bail of $2,000 for action of the grand jury.

Robinson, 32, of the unit block Welcome Alley, was arraigned in Southern District police court Saturday, on charges of throwing lye on Misses Ruth Lee and Della Levine, and Melrose Douglass, all of the Welcome Alley address.

He is further accused of mayhem, by maliciously casting the lye solution on Douglass, causing him to lose his left eye.

Police said that the incident took place at the house, after Douglass and Robinson had, argued. Sgt. Henry Cochrane, who investigated the incident, said that Robinson stated he had meant the lye for Douglass only.

Robinson testified, however, that he had picked up the can of lye and dropped it, causing it to splash on the victims. He told the court he was called preacher, because he preached "all around town."

No. 26 Toonerville Trolleys' to Be Retired

15 No. 26 Cars Earmarked for 'From Labor to Reward'

Fifteen trolley cars of the No. 26 line will be retired from active duty on July 30, after 31 years of continuous but rather unreliable service.

They will be replaced by streamlined street cars made available when certain Baltimore City lines were converted to bus routes.

The rickety red street cars, hangovers from World War I days, have been rumbling through Baltimore and Southeast Baltimore County since 1919.

Residents Want Cars Replaced

Since the end of World War II, residents of Turner Station and Sparrows Point, served by the line, have made repeated efforts to have the ancient cars replaced by modern equipment.

Patrons of the 26 line jokingly refer to the cars as "red rockets" and "Toonerville Trolleys." They contend that the street cars are uncomfortable, dangerous, frequently breakdown and are of little protection when it rains.

With the retirement of 15 of the old cars, 23 will be left in service. In addition, 18 streamliners will be pressed into service during week days. On Sundays and holidays these new cars will be used exclusively.

Semi-Convertibles

While the riders call the ancient cars "red rockets" and other names that can't be printed here, the transit company refers to them as "semi-convertibles," because they may be operated in two or three-car trains.

At the peak of World War II, three-car trains were frequently used to transport workers to and from the Sparrows Point steel mills. The two-car trains are still used when workers are going to or leaving work, but the single car is used during the day.

The transit company plans to end the No. 26 line in Baltimore City at Pratt and Grundy Sts., where a loop has been erected. The cars formerly ran west to Fayette and Green Sts.

A company spokesman said the loading platform at Pratt and Grundy will have a modern shelter for waiting passengers.

Passengers will be able to transfer to the No. 26 line at Pratt and Grundy from No. 20 or 23 buses or from special trips of the No. 21 line trackless trolley during rush hours.

A Man's Home Is His Castle, Jurist Tells White Landlord

A landlord cannot enter an apartment occupied by a tenant, without permission even if the house is burning down, Magistrate Thomas L. Fitzpatrick ruled in Northwestern police court, today (Friday).

"You would have to call the fire department," the jurist told the landlord, George Divin, a white operator of a grocery store in the 1200 block Druid Hill Ave.

Mr. Divin had charged John H. Thompson, 34, of the 600 block N. Fulton Ave., of striking him, following an argument when the landlord reportedly entered Thompson's apartment and insulted his wife.

Assault Charges Dismissed

Magistrate Fitzpatrick dismissed assault charges after Mrs. Thompson testified that Divin had entered the apartment without her permission. Thursday and had become abusive when she asked him to leave.

The Thompsons occupied the apartment located in the 1300 block Druid Hill Ave. and moved to the Fulton Ave. address, Thursday night.

Mr. Thompson said that he struck the grocer who he insulted him as he was moving the rest of his belongings, this morning (Friday).

Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, president of the NAACP, who resides in the 1200 block Druid Hill Ave., testified in court that Mr. Divin was angry because the Thompsons had complained to the Baltimore Area Rent Office about the rental they were charged.

"Just because he is white—he can not push our people around," Mrs. Jackson said, adding, "people in this neighborhood have made this man (Divins) rich."

6 Schools to Get $19,200 Paint Job

A $19,200 contract was awarded Wednesday, by the Board of Estimates for interior painting of six schools included in the modernization annex to Dunbar High School.

Other schools slated for painting are Nos. 101, 124 and three white schools. The contract was awarded to the Kilcos Painting Co., low bidder.

The Estimates Board received two opening bids for the installation of new maple flooring at Booker T. Washington Junior High School. Bids were submitted by the George Bartz Co., $3,859, and the R. T. Hurlock Co., $8,900.
