'GOD'S REVENGE' ON PRESSES:

Housewife Unaffected by Success as Author

By DOROTHY GIBSON

"God's Revenge," a 275-page book soon to be released by Meador, a Boston Publishing Company, was written by a Baltimore housewife, Mrs. Amanda Finch.

The fact that her first book had been accepted, was enough to send the AFRO scurrying for an interview; but this reporter found the author-housewife not disturbed one iota and her daily routine unchanged.

Arriving at her neat Washington St. home, I was given the choice of waiting in the living room or having her stop her lunch, which she was having in the kitchen, for the interview.

Her gracious manner resulted in an interview across the kitchen table, in her smart red and white unit kitchen.

Personal Interest Not Expected

Mrs. Finch remarked, "I didn't know the AFRO could be so informal and I never dreamed they would be interested in me. I had hoped they would be in the book, however."

A slight matron, under five feet, with a ready smile, Mrs. Finch, after much coaxing, began, to loosen up and talk.

"The inspiration to write," she said, began when I was 7 years old, in the grade schools. I was always a good reader and could use words well. It was at this time I composed verses for class recitations for myself and class mates.

Book Based on Experiences

"The only reason can give for writing "God's Revenge," which started to call from "Ground To Stars," or "Intolerance," is from my experiences in life," she pointed, out, adding:

The book tells of life as I've seen it. I am very religious. I'm not patting myself on the back," she apologized, "I just am."

Mrs. Finch was very reluctant to tell the contents of the story. In fact she said it wouldn't be fair to her or the public; but she promised the AFRO one of the first copies.

"Oh," she said, as I got ready to leave, "I forgot to tell you that I wrote a story about a family I knew very well and it was published in True Story Magazine in 1925.

"I felt sorry for the woman, and when I received the check for the story, I gave it to her," she revealed.

Eloped From Tuskegee

Mrs. Finch was born in the suburbs of Raleigh, N.C. attended school in Wake County. Later, she went to Tuskegee Institute, Ala., where she eloped and married Needham Finch, 32 years ago. The one son born to them is now deceased.

They moved to Baltimore 15 years ago. Mr. Finch became a steel worker and she was agent for the Continental Accident Insurance Company.

Tiring of this, she took a course in Millinery Art from the Lucy Miller Institute in Chicago. She displayed some of her latest creations, which give assurance that whenever she tires of writing, she may easily earn her livelihood in that field.

Member of First Baptist

"Immediately after I came to Baltimore," she continued, "I joined First Baptist Church, where I still have my membership, and I tried to be a good citizen by becoming affiliated with some of the groups that were working for better things for our people."

She is associated with the East side Community Committee, East Baltimore Democratic Women and is a former board member of the NAACP, having represented that group in Los Angeles, last year after winning the top through membership contributions. She is also a Red Cross worker and a member of the National Council of Negro Women, Metropolitan Area.

Mrs. Finch is a teacher of the Young Peoples' Bible Class and a member of her church's Foral Circle, Missionery Society, Ladies Aid Group and Saturday Night Bible Class.

"I helps out in other things around the church when I can," she added, "also I have another book partly done in the rough."

Keeps Busy in "Spare Time"

Facetiously I asked, " what do you do in your spare time and have any hobbies?"

The unexpected reply was: "I do one or two other things I won't mention. As for hobbies, those are reading and sewing. Recently I learned to crochet and I am really enjoying it."

Needless to say the author of "God's Revenge, has a wealth of experience with people and should be in a position to know some of the things for who God would be revenged.

Mrs. McMechen's Funeral Held

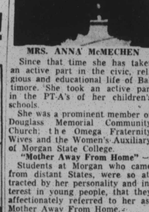
Ill., where she received her education. She taught school in Evansville, Indiana. It was there that she married the Baltimore attorney in 1900, and lived there until 1904 when they came to Baltimore to make their home.

Active in Civic, Religious Life



MRS. ANNA McMECHEN

Since that time she has taken an active part in the civic, religious and educational life of Baltimore. She took an active part in the PT-A's of her children's schools.

She was a prominent member of Douglass Memorial Community Church; the Omega Fraternity Wives and the Women's Auxiliary of Morgan State College.

"Mother Away From Home"

Students at Morgan who came from distant States, were so attracted by her personality and interest in young people, that they affectionately referred to her as, Mother Away From Home."

This interest in young people probably had its roots implanted during her teaching years in Indiana. Her home was always open to the students and other young people of the community.

Many of these former students, now in the professions and making marks for themselves, still refer to her in the affectionate manner.

Celebrated Golden Anniversary

On May 18 Mrs. McMechen and her husband, were honored on the 50th anniversary of their marriage, by a dinner and reception given by their children. Mr. McMechen is also a former member of the School Board.

Besides Mr. McMechen, she is survived by four daughters: Mesdames Mildred L. Allen of Tuskegee, Ala.; Edith N. Blake; Catherine Wilson and Georgeanna Chester, all Baltimore school teachers. Also two granddaughters: Peggy Wilson and Paulette Chester, and three sons-in-law. Burial will be in Arbutus Memorial Park.

How to Enjoy Home Vacation

Have you had your vacation, yet? Or have you gone through the summer preparing meals, doing dishes and all the rest of a housewife's lot in life?

Now's the time to give yourself a break, with summer almost gone and the back-to-school rush looming large. It'll do wonder for you.

You won't have to leave the comforts of home, or neglect the family to have a semi-vacation. Just do a little extra planning, get caught up on the outstanding chores, then let all but the most essential go hang.

In the morning give the house a lick and a promise and do the necessary cooking for the evening meal. Then sign off until late afternoon, when you assemble a quick and easy supper. Big hot meals are superfluous this weather anyway.

Breakfast is taken care of with ready-to-eat cereals and fresh fruit; lunch with sandwiches, including plenty of lettuce and tomatoes as a vegetable. Supper could be a cooked-in-the-morning casserole with a big fruit plate for both salad and dessert.

Then around five or so, when you come in from reviving your soul, pop the casserole and some bakery rolls in the oven, assemble the fruit plate and supper's ready.

Plenty of Fresh Fruit

Stock up on fresh fruits when your vacation begins, both for salad dessert and for between-meals snacks that won't leave stacks of dirty dishes: peaches, cherries, plums, melons, bananas, grapes and pears, all well chilled of course.

Then cut in slices or halves and dip those lickety to turn dark in orange juice. Line a large platter or salad tray with crisp greens and arrange the fruits to look their prettiest.

A dish of cottage cheese, or thinned and beaten cream cheese with chopped nuts added makes the dressing.
