So take the advice of expert cooks like Mrs. Mitchell. Be sure you get Carnation Milk when you buy. Always ask for it by name. Get Carnation—and you'll always get richer, creamier flavor in your cooking.

Jacqueline Williams, Harry Ross Married

With Lula Jones Garrett

The deep cool fastness of Bai Crest, the shore home of Dr. Maybelle Weaver, was the setting for the wedding of her niece, cute Jacqueline Mary Jane Williams and Harry Richardson Ross, Saturday.

An altar had been constructed on the lawn, with ribboned-off aisle leading from the wide veranda of the lovely mason. Down the aisle swept the bride, in a ballerina length frock of embossed marquisette, illusion veil trimmed with heirloom lace, and carrying a bridal bouquet of baby's breath and orchids.

She was preceded by a bevy of bridesmaids including her cousin, Eva Scott of Washington, maron of honor; Daisy King of this city, maid of honor; Virginia Mann of New York and Connie Randall; and a junior bridesmaid, Catherine Murphy.

They wore gowns of net, the honor attendants in blue, carrying yellow calla lilies igterspersed with blue ribbons and blue delphinium.

Alfonso Scott of Washington was best man. Ushers included James Williams of Philadelphia, Howard Lewis and Earl Grandison of this city.

The ceremony was read by the Rev. A. J. Payne, and music was by Adah Killion Jenkins at the piano and Helen Carter Brown, soprano. Charles Woodland gave the bride in marriage.

The bridal party, joined by Dr. Weaver and the mother of the bride, Mrs. Lillian Williams, returned to the veranda, to form a receiving line, down which passed scores of friends.

For the occasion Dr. Weaver wore white eyelet embroidery and orcandie, the bodice underlined with rose taffeta. Mrs. Williams selected apple green taffeta. Also here for the wedding was the bride's father, James D. Williams of Albany, N.Y.

Later the bride cut her cake, one of the loveliest seen this season, six-tiered and garlanded with faintly tinted roses. The guests returned to the lawn to be served sanwiches, cakes and tid-bits from one-tered, silver bedecked table and wedding punch from a second table.
