Six Danish Boys In Camp

The practice is that six Danish boys are brought to the camp each year so that they may meet and know the American boys of various faith, origin, color and creed.

Was Unharmed

Uninjured, Williams was brought to the Western station house. His wife, Anna Mae, told police that the taxi-cab try was the third such attempt that day.

First, the man had taken rat poison. This only made him sick. Later he tried to jump in front of two on rushing cars at Baltimore and Pine St. His wife restrained him. Mrs. Williams said that her husband had been acting "strangely" for sometime.

—Rev. Holmes to Leave

equipped with a two-way telephone.

The Judge commented further that he had learned that "quite a few people had been mystified by the belief in his (Holmes's) unusual powers, and be sold bottlecombs, and this and that."

Judge Warnken added, "I'm advised that he does not serve a very useful purpose in the relief efforts here, and that the community will be better off without him."

Marital Status Questioned

The report to the judge also disclosed that the minister's marital status was not too clear in that he had only the word of his first wife's mother that a divorce had been obtained.

He was said to have married the former Dolly Dimple Turner in Oklahoma in 1935, and the divorce, he believed, was obtained by her four years later.

Present Wife Sticks By

He married his present wife, the former Carolyn Cochran of Gainsville, Ga., in Baltimore in 1945. Mrs. Holmes stuck by her husband's side throughout the case. The trial was held before a jury on May 22.

Early in 1950, it was said, the Rev. Mr. Holmes had as much as $97,000 in cash in a safe deposit box. The church, Judge Warnken was told, once had several women employed full time counting and parking silver money into rolls.

The evangelist also was described as a gambler and user of intoxicants.

Denies "Holy" Sales

"I never sold any cosmic or anything like that," the Rev. Mr. Holmes asserted in the sheriff's office, after he had been sentenced, and his attorney, S. N. Silverberg, was seeking to have the term suspended on the "get out of town" basis.

Under the terms of probation, the Rev. Mr. Holmes is under threat of the two-year sentence if he should return to Maryland within the next five years.

His attorney asked that he be allowed two weeks to arrange his affairs. Judge Warnken specified that he arrange them in one.

A native of Weed, California, the evangelist was said to have moved to St. Louis at an early age, and to have attended the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago.

He reportedly was ordained by a Bishop Page in Dallas, Tex., in 1938, and is the youngest of four brothers, all ministers.

Will Recommend Sucessors

Asked what will happen to his church in Baltimore now that he must leave, the Rev. Mr. Holmes said he would recommend to the "Bishop" two possible successors, namely the Rev. Felix Norris or the Rev William Thompson whom he described as "fiesl workers."

The Rev. Mr. Holmes first held services in Baltimore in a tent on McMechen St. near Pennsylvania Ave. He then moved to a large church building on Eutaw Pl., but lately, the congregation has been worshipping in a hall on Pennsylvania Ave., near North Ave.

The young preacher landed in his present difficulty when the cab driver, Thomas McQuinn, told police that the Rev. Mr. Holmes knocked him out of his cab and drove off.

"Acted in Fear"

The minister's explanation was that he did not hit the driver, but took off in the cab because he feared for his life and whatever money he was carrying when McQuinn jumped out to argue with another motorist.

The gun be said "just happened" to be in his brief case.

2 Addresses Given

Several addresses for the evangelist were given during the period in which the case was pending. One was in the 1300 block Clifton Ave. and another in the 300 block N. Calhoun St. He said that at the time he and his wife were rooming because the church was purchasing a home for them.

As opposed to the day-long trial when crowds of followers descended upon the courthouse, only a few supporters were on hand when the case was disposed of Thursday.

Club Prexy Denies

The published report of policemen playing the gambling device, coming on the heels of Capt. Alexander Emerson's charges that gamblers were being tipped off on raids by police officers, caused considerable speculation as to the relationship between police officers and gamblers in Baltimore.

Mr. Milburn and Jefferson Gibson, association president, were fined $100 each by Judge Sherbow in Criminal Court May 26 for operating the horse race slot machine in the club.

Profited $75 Weekly

As a result of these convictions the Liquor Board held a hearing Tuesday and ordered a 60 day license suspension. Mr. Gibson told the board that the machine netted about $75 a week.

In an AFRO interview Wednesday, Mr. Milburn said the club was organized in 1916 and that he joined it three years ago. It has 85 members and they are paid $5 a week when sick and $75 is paid the beneficiary when a member dies.

"The machine had been in the club about a year and I didn't know it was illegal until the officers told me. In fact, the license for the machine was issued at City Hall," Mr. Milburn asserted.

The club is located in the 100 block of Arch St. Mr. Milburn said the benefits are paid from profits of the sale of wine and beer, and the twenty-five cents weekly dues paid by members.

This Week

By RALPH MATTHEWS

Ralph Matthews Off to Korea

EN ROUTE TO KOREA—As our big DC-6 climbed skyward and leveled off on the first leg of the journey to war - torn Korea, which would get me down in San Francisco, I thought back on the last time I was in the city by the Golden Gate.

That was a glorious occasion, as representatives of all the nations of the world gathered, still bleeding from their wounds of the last conflagration, like sinners marching up to the mourner's bench, swearing that this was the last time they would go off on a binge.

That was the founding of the United Nations, which according to dreamers, would end war for all time.

Mutual Pledge Goes Askew

As I recall the spirit of good will which prevailed at that time, and see in retrospect such dignitaries as Anthony Eden of Great Britain, Stettinius of America and Molotoff of Russia all happy and agreeable, like fraternity brothers at a class reunion, I wonder just how so short a time our mutual pledges and good works could go so askew that I should now be heading for a battlefield.

Some of my fellow passengers raise their eyebrows when I admit that San Francisco is just a stopping off place and that my real destination is far across the Pacific.

"You'll be there just in time for the peace conference," they say, but I merely smile cynically.

I have already covered what was supposed to be the greatest peace conference the world has ever seen, but still more men lie dead in the paddy fields than under the poppies in France, and still more will die before we see the end of this stanza of what somebody misnamed the Cold War.

In a personal sense, it does not seem right that I should be going off to anybody's war—either cold or hot—because I am by nature a man of peace.

Born and reared in the Quakerlike atmosphere of a Methodist parsonage where there was no violence either in word or deed, I have studiously avoided conflict of all kinds both verbal and physical.

How to Behave Under Fire

That's why it seemed unnatural to me when my friend, Jimmie Hicks, who did a correspondent's stint on the Korean front, attempted to brief me on how to behave under fire.

"First," said Jimmie in an honest effort to be helpful, "you want to get hold of a good carbine and plenty of ammunition and also get a good automatic; and when you bump into a suspicious-looking Korean, shoot first and ask questions later."

Just how do you think this kind of advice sounded to a guy who don't even like to fish because it doesn't seem right to lure a trusting perch to his death under false pretenses and goes around taking cheese out of traps because I don't believe in corporal punishment for mice?

This is not as you might suppose either timidity nor cowardice. It is just that I have an ingrained revulsion against the taking of lives. Now I am supposed to carry an automatic. Now just what would I do with the automatic?

As I look back now, I think I came from a long line of professional pacificists with the exception of our paternal grandfather whom I remember best as a Civil War veteran.

I recall nothing that he did of exceptional valor except beat a drum in one of Lincoln's legion, and I doubt that he could have done much mortal harm with a pair of drumsticks. But until his dying day, somewhere in the ripe 80's, we revered him as a hero of sorts.

Father a Hero Worshipper

If any of our clan got mixed up in the Spanish-American War, it must have been some scalawag whom nobody cares to mention.

Although peace was the modus operandi of our household, I always suspected my father, in spite of wearing the cloth, to have a tendency toward hero worship, because he voted for Teddy Roosevelt.

Teddy was not only a rough riding warrior, but a slayer of wild beasts as well. How my father could support such a bloodthirsty cutthroat for Chief Executive I do not know, unless he feared the public disgrace which befell any person of color who was suspected of voting anything but the straight Republican ticket.

In those days a colored Democrat was as disreputable as a Communist is today.

My father also showed his true colors during World War I when he proudly announced that he had signed up to join the Army as a chaplain. My mother, who was a very practical woman, took him out of earshot of the smaller children and read him the riot act.

The only uniform he ever wore was that of a grand something-or-other in the United Order of Good Samaritans; and whatever souls he might have saved in the American Expeditionary Forces had to struggle out of purgatory under their own steam.

Escapes World War II Duty

By the time World War II was in full stride I was just old enough to sleep without worrying too much about the local draft boards and was therefore spared the hard choice of going to jail as a conscientious objector or developing some malady which would keep me a permanent 4-F.

But having avoided all these brushes with combat, here I go headed for the carnage and destruction growing out of a dispute over a geographical elevation — the 38th Parallel — simply because I happened to chose journalism as a dubious profession.

And so bravely I sally forth, a victim of the gods of war, my typewriter in one hand, my camera in the other and my trusty carbine swung jaunt1y over my back. But wait. With both hands full, when am I supposed to use this automatic?

Well, if worst comes to worse, I'll take some solace in the hope that old reporters like old soldiers never die. They just fade away; and I do mean Fade with a capital F.

Police Halt Violence at Highland Pool

PITTSBURGH — Acting Mayor Howard B. Stewart, who is also director of Parks and Recreation for the City of Pittsburgh, declared last week that city-owned swimming pools are for the use of all taxpayers and has promised protection for bathers.

A four-man party, led by Alexander J. Allen of the Pittsburgh Urban League and former executive secretary of the Baltimore Urban League, w ust two weeks ago was bodily ousted from the Highland Park pool by teen-aged hoodlums, returned and swam while angry whites hurled curses and insults at them.

$1000 Bail for Man Held in $4 Robbery

A 25-year-old man, said by police to have assaulted a man, robbed him of $4 and left him groaning in a doorway, is being held under $1000 bail for court action.

The alleged assailant, Ernest Graham, 25, of the 700 block W. Fayette St., was apprehended by police early Sunday morning after beaten and robbed Harold Kirk was discovered in the doorway of his home, 303 N. Fremont Ave.

Shooting Suspect Faces 8 Charges

An additional seven charges have been filed against the 25-year-old man charged with shooting a policeman in the mouth last Saturday.

William L. Coleman, 25, son of George St., has been committed to jail without bail until 4 p.m. Aug. 1, when he will be tried in Pecourt for shooting hern iloebos Southern Police court for shooting Officer Donnell Lorenz.

Other charges placed against the man beside the shooting charge are: criminal attack of a 17-year-old girl; attempting to shoot Officer Leonard Houck, the 17-year-old girl, and James Miles; carrying a a burning auto.

The mob violence started because Harvey E. Clark Jr., 29, his wife, Johnetta, 26, and two children, Michelle, 8, and Harvey 3rd, 6, moved their furniture into their new apartment, July 10. They had intended to move in later, but mobsmen kept them out.

Climax of hostilities against the Clarks occurred early Friday morning when Gov. Adlai Stevenson was forced to call in the Illinois National Guard to restore order. Since then 400 troops have been on a 24-hour vigil, and the town has been put under martial law.

gonna write our names in clay on some wood."

Mud-splattered children returned with the wood and the youngsters sat down together and went to work on their project.

Two colored boys in the, room were playing ping pong, three others stood watching and making perfunctorily boyish remarks.

Outside, a young white man sat on a bench reading the newspaper account of the Walcott-Charles fight. His sleek red convertible coupe stood at the curb.

On another bench two colored boys sat in the shade, enjoying snowballs and taking a brief rest.

City Springs Playground

The peaceful, typically American scene was duplicated at Eden and Lombard Sts. where the playground known officially as "City Springs," but called "Spring Gardens," by the children, is located.

Three girls played in the swings under the mid-day sun. But most of the children, 28 to be exact, played under a long shed in the center of the playground.

Their activities were supervised by Mrs. Emily Bryant, recreation leader. Asked how the children played together she said:

Blend Right In

"They just blend right in together. The white children come and join right in whatever activities are underway."

The children were playing cards, or darts or checkers. Two white boys, about eight years old, came up and asked if they could "play bean bags." Mrs. Bryant said they could, and the boys busied themselves by immediately starting the game, which coffists of attempting to throw the bags through holes in an upright board.

Cicero Thugs Go to Court

119 Appear Aug. 6; Attorney Probing

CICERO, Ill.—ANP)—The cases of 119 white hoodlums, mostly teenagers, arrested in the riots in Cicero, were held over Monday, until Aug. 6 at the request of Assistant States Attorney Edwin T. Breen.

Breen asked for a continuance of these cases, heard in the Police Magistrate's court here, on the grounds that he needed more time to investigate the story of the riot and more thoroughly. He declared:

"I want to investigate each person arrested thoroughly so that I can present stronger cases against them."

U.S. to Probe Riot in Cicero

National Guard Cut to 3 Companies

CHICAGO (NNPA)—The Justice Department indicated in Washington on Monday, July 16, that it plans positive action against persons who engaged in rioting in Cicero, a Chicago suburb noted chiefly as a hangout for gangsters. The rioting took place July 11 and 12 following the renting of an apartment by Harvey E. Clark Jr., a colored bus driver for the Chicago Transit Authority.

Cicero is now quiet. The National Guard force on duty in the vicinity of the building was reduced July 16, from five companies to three.

The reduction was ordered by Governor Adlai E. Stevenson after a conference of guard officers and officials of Berwyn and Cicero in the office of Sheriff Babb of Cook County.

"While it is true there has been an abatement of activity in this area for the last thirty-six hours, it does not indicate that there could not be another outbreak," said Sheriff Babb.

Civil

In opinion that a Justice Department spokesman expressed the opinion that Federal civil rights statutes have been violated. He did not say, however, what action is planned. Representatives of the NAACP who conferred with Justice Department officials been them as saying the department would take "appropriate action."

In Cicero cases of 117 persons arrested during the rioting were continued to Aug. 6 pending the State's Attorney's office investigation. James A. Brown, Assistant State's Attorney, told the court that five members of the State's Attorney's staff have been assigned to the case.

While the hearing was in progress, several persons passed out handbills of the White Circle League, an organization headed by Joseph Beauharnais, whose charter was revoked recently by the State. One side bore a picture of Beauharnais with the legal "This is my tribute to the brave youth of Cicero." The caption on the other side read "Go, Go, Keep Cicero White."

Over and beyond the riots at Cicero, a Chicago suburb, being a great for the Soviet propaganda mill, the New York Times sees it as a "moral problem." Under the caption, "The Cicero Riots," the Times last Sunday said editorially:

"Mob violence in Cicero, Ill., stemming from anti-colored prejudice, is a national disgrace. Most of us knew the name of Cicero primarily because of its traditional repute as a hangout of gangsters. Perhaps, justly or unjustly, we were not too surprised when it appeared, also, as the point at which single and irrational behaviour made itself manifest.

"If there is a shred of community pride left in Cicero among decent-minded persons, it is high time that it be asserted.

"Notable advances in race relationships have been made in this country in recent years. We are all agreed that the problem is not simple and that its happy solution requires patience, tolerance and much good sense.

"Frames of mind and states of heart cannot be created by mere legislation or by court decrees. What we have to learn is how to live with our fellow human beings in peace and amity and understanding.

"An episode such as that in Cicero and the rioting which preceded it makes us, morally and politically skeptical of its possibilities. If he feels aggrieved at what has happened, his grievance surely is just.

"We can only hope that he will not hold responsible for this hurt those multiplied thousands throughout the country who look on such events as outrageous and intolerable.

"There will be those who decry the Cicero riots because they give propaganda aid and comfort to our ideological antagonists. We may be very sure that the Communist machine will take full advantage of this display of weakness in our social fabric. This argument is cogent within its limits, but isn't nearly good enough.

"The outbreak at Cicero would be just as nasty and reprehensible if Karl Marx had never been born and if no Communist had ever made a broadcast. This is a moral problem in its own right, and we ought to face it as such."

Under the heading, "Disgrace in Cicero," the St. Louis Post Dispatch last Saturday commented editorially:

Law Breakdown

"The race rioting in Cicero was the result of a breakdown in law enforcement at the municipal level where it is most important. True, order was restored by the militia sent to the scene by Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois.

"It is in the nature of things, however, that state troops cannot be expected on the scene of a disturbance until it has gotten beyond the control of local authorities. Ninety-nine per cent of law enforcement rests on them. And in Cicero they simply did not take action commensurate with their responsibility.

"The Governor deserves praise for prompt intervention. But the damage occurred none the less. And what a nice bit of propaganda it supplies for the Communist mills."

Citizens Backed by Liquor Board

The Liquor Board backed up home owners and school officials this week, in denying an application for a package goods license at a grocery store in the 1500 block Laurens St.

Opponents to the application, including the Parent-Teacher Association of School 107 at Gilmor and Laurens St. pointed out that the store is but 400 feet from the Gilmor Homes and 300 feet from the school.

4 Liquor Stores in Area

They added that the area already is serviced adequately with alcoholic beverages by six other liquor stores in a two-block radius.

Sixty-one residents of the area filed a petition against the application which was sought by Mr. and Mrs. Leon Parson of 3607 Rosedale Rd.
