—Youth Drags Friend's Body

youths went into the kitchen.

"Sam Me-"

Smith sat in a kitchen chair and began nodding as if he was going to sleep. Queen walked over and shook him. His buddy's hand dropped as if paralyzed. Smith's eyes were recessed in their sockets.

Queen tried to talk to him. He tried to make him walk. Smith only grunted. Queen attempted to make him drink milk. He put ice to his head, and smelling salts to his nose. Then his heart stopped beating and his body began getting cold.

For another hour, Queen sought unsuccessfully to revive his friend and then he knew that Smith was dead. He was too exhausted to call police or send for an ambulance.

Feared For Grandmother

Frantic over his aged grandmother, he should come home and find a dead man in the house, he carried the body to the cellar.

"I knew the shock would kill my grandmother" he told police.

At 11:15 p.m., he went to work at the bakery but his mind was troubled at the thought of the body in the cellar. He quit work, punched out and went home. Everyone there had retired for the night.

Queen went down into the cellar and brought his dead companion upstairs. He dragged him out of the house, to the schoolyard where he left him under the weeping willow.

D'Alesandro Says Keep Guard Up

Mayor D'Alesandro warned citizens, this week, not to be "lulled into a feeling of complacency" because of the possibility of settling the Korean situation.

He declared "We must remain on guard against subversive activities and be alert for any eventuality."

Cites Ober Law

Particularly, the Mayor called for the continuing need of enforcing provisions of the Ober Law, the Maryland law enacted to curb communism.

Said the Mayor, "All of us must realize that an enemy of our way of life is a danger, whether he be entrusted with our water supply, the education of our children, or with any of the many services for which people look."

TERROR AFTER MIDNIGHT

Phantom Prowler Stalks Women in Sanford Place

fully. The phantom prowler had invaded her dreams in a nightmare.

A Third Near-Victim

It was after his second actual contact with a victim that it was learned that the night before, Mrs. Cora Falcon, the sister of Mrs. Margaret Palmer of 524 Sanford Pl., who is visiting from North Northumberland County, Va. was a near-victim.

But she slipped from his grasp as he approached her on the corner of Pennsylvania Ave. and Cumberland St. and fled with the swiftness of a deer to her sister's home.

No Money Wanted

Significantly, there seems to be a general agreement that the prowler doesn't want money. It is believed that he is someone who lives in the immediate vicinity and knows the habits of the female residents of the area. Moreover, there is the opinion that the man is a sadist bent on being cruel to women.

Mrs. Rousseau said that she dropped her purse during the struggle and went back and picked it up. No money was missing. Mrs. Milbourne reported that he did not try to take her purse either.

Men in the neighborhood are up in arms but at a loss as to how to trap the marauder. The women are greatly disturbed. The Sanford Place residents are asking the police department to put a police beat in the neighborhood and are asking for more street lights.

Women in Terror

With the tall, dark, muscular man in the palm beach hat, white shirt and light colored trousers waiting in the dark for some lady to walk alone in his victim's direction, the women are living in terror.

If the police department doesn't put a patrolman on the beat in this neighborhood, folks seem to think that they will be just waiting and wondering, who will be next?

—Holmes Leaves in Tears

verse, Holmes worked his listeners into a frenzy as he preached for an hour and a half—first softly, then louder, louder, louder.

Screams and yells pierced the hall. Amens which were soft at first became so loud it was hard to hear what Holmes was saying.

Toward the end of the services, the choir started singing "Move Up A Little Higher," the evangelist's theme song.

Tremendous Roar

Although the choir started the song, the rest of the audience joined in and soon everybody was shouting. There was a great stamping of feet.

Women and women fainted and had to be carried to the cloakroom. Heat inside the packed hall was stifling.

By the time the Rev. Mr. Holmes left the hall, the crowd outside had grown to more than 3,000 persons, and it seemed as though all of them surged forward to say good-bye.

As he entered his auto, hundreds of his followers swarmed around. Many of them actually grabbed the bumper of the departing auto and tried to hold it back.

Visited Gillis Church

From Morgan Hall, the Rev. Mr. Holmes went to Gillis Memorial Church, where at least 200 more persons were waiting. He spoke briefly, thanked them for their courtesies, and promised to return.

Since his trial last May, he has been staying on Calhoun St., directly across from Gillis Memorial Church, and as he swept out of the church, holding his white robe, people poured out of the church after him.

At least 100 persons stood outside the Calhoun St. house to catch a glimpse of the evangelist as he left town. Holmes disappointed them, however, by leaving by the back entrance.

Only One Bag

The Holmeses' only luggage was one small bag. Their other possessions had been shipped earlier by train.

As a parting word to the intimates who waved him goodbye, Holmes said:

"Those who feel that I have been an asset to the community and city, may in turn communicate with Governor McKeldin in my behalf. I feel the Lord will make a way somehow."

The Rev. Mr. Holmes said there will be no other evangelist designated to replace him. Regular services at Morgan Hall will be conducted by the Rev O. M. Kelly with the Church of God in Christ.

Result of May Incident

Holmes' disastrous scrape with the law came on April 17, when a taxi-driver charged him with assault and stealing his watch.

Magistrate August Kozlovsky released the evangelist in $2,000 bail on the charges pending action of the grand jury.

While Holmes was awaiting trial, Thomas McGuinn, the cab driver, reported that threats had been made against his life.

When a jury found Holmes guilty of the charges, Judge Warnken deferred sentencing him until probation officials could make an investigation of his record. The judge's leave town ultimatum and suspension of a two-year jail term came last week.

Made $97,000

Holmes came to Baltimore in 1945, conducted evangelistic services in a tent at Pennsylvania Ave. and Pitcher St. later, his church, known as the Evangelistic Temple, moved to a large building on Eutaw Place. At the time of his brush with the law, however, he was conducting services at Morgan Hall.

Court testimony indicated that Holmes amassed large sums of money from his supporters and in 1950 made $97,000. It was further testified that Holmes' so-called 'blessings' brought as much as $500 after it became common belief that he would predict numbers for the day.

ing the Spanish - American War when Col. Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders fought at San Juan Hill, Santiago, Cuba.

First in Pacific

It was the first colored unit to fight in the Pacific during World War II. Going into action in 1942, the Regiment fought in the Solomons, the Marianas and the Okinawa campaigns. They joined the occupation forces in Japan in 1946.

Army integration has been proceeding at a slow pace since last year's presidential order ended the quota system which limited the number of colored troops serving in the Army.

An Executive order demanding "equality of treatment and opportunity for advancement" further advanced integration as an Army-wide policy.

Air Forces, Navy Lead

The initiative taken by both the Air Forces and the Navy, which forstered immediate and almost complete integration was followed somewhat slower by the Army.

With the outbreak of the Korean War and the critical need for manpower, plus the successful employment of integrated units like the 2nd and 3rd Divisions, the end of segregation in the Far East Command was speeded.

The 24th Regiment and an artillery battalion which was also attached to the 25th Division, were the largest all - colored units in Korea.

Stateside Integration Slow

Wednesday's announcement by the Army applied only to the Far East Command. Integration in the United States and other U.S. Army commands will proceed slower.

Lunchroom Owner Says Holmes Nearly Landed in Jail Again

Cliff Batiste, 32, proprietor of a lunchroom at 1919 Pennsylvania Ave., told police Wednesday that Rev. M. E. Holmes, under court orders to leave town, came into the lunchroom shortly before 1 o'clock, and created a disturbance that almost caused him to land in jail again.

Batiste said Mrs. Mary Fernandis Burns, Pennsylvania Ave. florist, fled out of the back door of the lunchroom, as Holmes entered in search of her.

Batiste attempted unsuccessfully to accost the woman at Pressman St. and Pennsylvania Ave.

Police assured Mr. Batiste they would keep his place under protective surveillance, but the Rev. Mr. Holmes denied all knowledge of the incident, when questioned about the episode by an AFRO reporter.

Miss Alice White, 23, barmaid in a popular club, of 911 N. Fulton Ave. and musician Eugene B. Washington, 46, 904 N. Fulton Ave.

After being detained at Northwestern police station, the other two were released along with the shapely young singer.

"All this trouble is caused by the colored people," Miss Cox quoted one of the officers as saying when placing her in a patrol wagon.

She said that his remark was not clear at first but after finding that he meant narcotics, "I became indignant, it was bad enough being arrested for no cause without taking insults."

"White people never get into this!" she recalled the officer telling her.

Miss Cox stated that she had left her apartment for cigarettes about 2:30 a.m. Wednesday morning. A white man approached her on the street and said "You're coming with me."

Screamed 'Bloody Murder'

"I screamed bloody murder," said the singer, "I didn't know who or what he was or trying to do. She stated that she yelled for Miss White who was across the street and that they both struggled with the man.

Another man came up, grabbed them, finally, when a colored plainclothesman appeared and explained that the whites were police officers, the women stopped resisting.

Washington, a musician about town, was arrested separately. They were all booked in North western at 2:30 a.m. and released after questioning at 6:10 a.m.

Didn't Ask Much

"They didn't ask me much of anything," said Miss Cox. "I was back in a cell most of the time, all I did was cry."

The singer, a model at 18 and veteran on the entertainment circuit has been featured performer in cabarets along the Eastern seaboard. She has made several recordings and is winner of beauty contests.

She left the night following her arrest to fill a singing engagement at a York, Pa. nightclub along with Tony Brown's dancing troupe.

College Prexy Disavows Tie-In With Army Bias

Va. State Head Denies Aiding Fort Lee J.C.

Has No Tie-In With Separate Officers Club, Says Daniel

BY JAMES L. HICKS
NNPA CORRESPONDENT ON TOUR OF ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE INSTALLATIONS

FORT LEE, Va.—The names of Dr. Robert P. Daniel, president of Virginia State College, and a small clique of colored officers, were mentioned last week in connection with segregation of colored troops at Fort Lee, Virginia.

This writer talked to both colored and white officers who favor the integration program as directed by the President. They asked that their names not be given, because they say anyone at Fort Lee who speaks out for integration will be immediately transferred and often sent to Korea.

Building J.C. Club

Fort Lee, under General R. C. Graham, is currently building a $60,000 officers' club for colored officers only on the base despite the fact that there is already present a half million dollar officers' club which is adequate to accommodate twice as many officers now serving at Fort Lee. This is a segregation pure and simple.

When Army officials at the Fort were questioned as to why they are building such a jim crow club everyone gave this answer from Colonel Coleman Romain, the chief ordnance officer, on down to the PRO officer: The jim crow club is being built in order that Negro officers and civilians of the "colored community" such as Dr. Daniel may have some place to come and bring their friends and be entertained on the post.

Official Answer

That's their official answer. Several officers to whom I talked said the same thing.

Virginia State has an ROTC program at its ROTC men, like all other white colleges, must come to Fort Lee for summer training. Thus, the president of the college has a close link with the military. Daily in summer training the unit is training there.

He therefore, to all intents and purposes, is always welcome at the Fort and is invited to important events held there under the direction of the commanding general. According to officials of Fort Lee this is true in Dr. Daniel's case.

They say that he is invited to such functions at Fort Lee along with the nine white college presidents. They say Dr. Daniel is invited if ever shows up for such affairs which are held in the white half million dollar officers' club and are attended by white military and civilians.

Fear Transfer

One white officer put it this way: "I know why some colored officers favor that club? One reason is that they know if they oppose it they are going to be transferred.

Lieutenant Leslie Harris, who is the colored club officer and a favorite of the Negro officers, has been here at Camp Lee longer than any other officer with four exceptions. He will not attempt to frequent the 'white' club house because he knows what will happen if he does.

"Another reason," the white officer continued, "is the fact that while we, as white officers are limited to two guests at the white officers' club, at the colored club colored officers can call up fifteen girls at Virginia State and invite the whole bunch of them over.

Rules Differ?

Their rules at the colored officer club were never as strict as ours were and you can imagine some of the things that went on over there. I think it's a shame that Dr. Daniel would permit those girls to come out here like that."

I checked on Lt. Harris who was club officer of the colored club before it burned down. It's true that he has been on duty at Ft. Lee an extraordinary number of years for an officer of his rank.

With the jim crow club burned down, Lt. Harris is now in "school" at the base and officials say that when the new Jim Crow club is built he will be club officer.

On the other hand, there is now a colored captain at Fort Stevens and a colored WAC officer at Ft. Dix, who were transferred after they had been in charge of a club at Fort Lee. The captain's transfer came as soon as he requested and received an audience with the general about the club.

Harris Is Reason

Actually it would appear that the situation boils down to this: Certain people who are friends of the general's jim crow policies, have been pressed by him in a position where they can more or less offer the jim crow officers club to the community as a social gathering place for their friends.

Let it be noted that this is a big attraction to colored people in nearby Virginia. The facilities at the jim crow club at its best were and will be much better than anything which the surrounding community offers them in the way of recreation.

Officials told me that colored people prefer to attend social affairs which they say Dr. Daniel or dom
