County Refuses to Impose Segregation at Beechwood

The Anne Arundel County Commissioners, this week, refused to act on a white resident's complaint that racial segregation be enforced at Beechwood Park.

Luther L. McKenney of Arnold, Md. made the complaint in a letter to the commissioners after he heard Disc Jockey Hoffby Adams of WASL, Annapolis, say that interracial groups would be welcomed at the park.

The letter said in part:

"Since all other resorts in this county that I know of are segregated, why should Beechwood Park be an exception to this important rule?

'Our Way of Life'

"Is this just another attempt to break down and destroy the standards of common decency and our American way of life?"

Mrs. Hiram E. Smith, who with her husband, the Rev. Mr. Smith, own the park, declared:

"It is no secret that interracial groups visit Beechwood Park. It has been this way since we opened in 1944, and still remains that way."

Mr. McKenney asked the commissioners to investigate the park. He said racial restrictions are "designed to produce permanent values for the good of all."

The park, located on the Magothy River in Anne Arundel County, was the center of a drawn-out restrictive covenant court fight when the Smiths purchased the property in 1943. The Supreme Court has since out lawed the covenants.

A graduate of Carver Vocational High School, he completed a course in general woodwork in February of 1948, and completed a course in auto mechanics in June 1949.

Pvt. Tynes received his basic training at Fort Dix, N.J. and was sent overseas from Camp Stone, Calif.

Mrs. Tynes said that she last heard from her son April 9, when he said that he had been in battle but was in good health.

Philadelphia Has Integration in Fire Houses

CHECKING THE FIRE CALL — Capt. Charles Holland of Engine Co. No. 67 in Philadelphia, checks with Clarence Brogden the location of the fire call they are about to answer. Mr. Brogden has been a smoke-eater for four years and attached to this station for two years. The fire truck is a two-in-one pumper.

ROLL CALL — Members of Engine Co. No. 67 line up for roll call during the shift change. They are being briefed by Capt. Charles Holland, right. Scenes like the one above are repeated throughout Philadelphia in the various fire houses.

AND NOTHING HAS HAPPENED:

Fire Department Proves Integration Works Well

Doubting Philadelphians now have had ample time to admit that the integration policy ordered by the Bureau of Fire two and a half years ago will not wreck the department nor leave the town in shambles.

Instead, Chief Engineer John C. Cost reports that there has not been a single instance of disruption of efficient operaton due to the change of policy.

Chances For Advancement

Before integration, the city's colored smoke-eaters were restricted in assignments to Engine Company No. 11 and Fire Boat No. 1, thereby limiting their chances for advancement.

Under the new system, the men choose their stations; and Mr. Cost maintains that all requests are granted as soon as a vacancy at the station occurs.

Serve in Units

Currently, Philadelphia's 68 colored firemen, serving with Engine Companies Nos. 9, 11, 27, 41, 45, 54, 55, 67 and 69, Truck Companies 6 and 24 and Fire Boat 1, are represented at the top level by Capt. James Davis of Engine Company No. 11 and Lt. Samuel Singleton of Fire Boat No. 1.

The city's first colored fire captain, Peter C. Graham, died June 14 of this year. He had been a fire boat captain until his resignation last November.

With regard to advancement opportunities, there are now 13 men moving up from the ranks, including Zack Clayton, an inspector in the Fire Marshal's office since July of last year.

Unfortunately, there are not more than half a dozen colored fire fighters nearing eligibility for 20-year retirement pensions, but an influx of new men under the new system is expected.

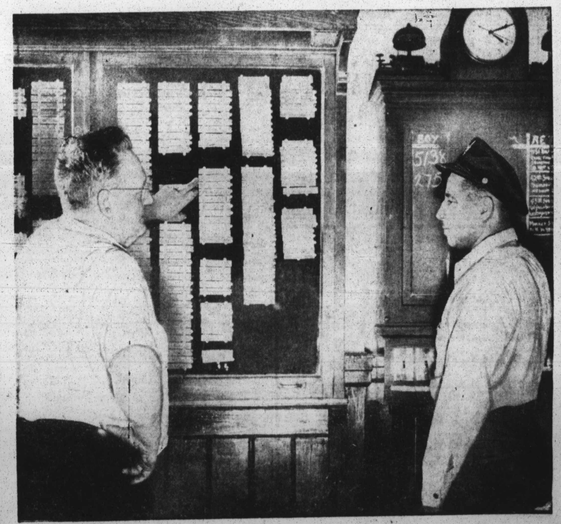
DISCUSSING THE LAST FIRE are Acting Lt. Joseph McGee of Co. No. 67 and Acting Lt. Robert Burns. Mr. McGee, who is married and the father of two children, has been with the fire department four years.



LOCATING THE ALARM BOX — Acting Battalion Chief John Reuter runs down a street list to determine the location of a fire alarm box just pulled. Making note of the box number is David Howard, a fireman for 10 years. Mr. Howard is also a member of the Firemen's string band and has been playing the saxophone for four years.
