Hurricane Death Toll Set at 150

JAMAICA, BWI — After making an airplane tour of hurricane-battered Jamaica on Tuesday, the Governor, Sir Hugh Foot, reported that the death toll probably will amount to 150 killed.

Reports of casualties from the worst-hit town of St. Thomas are still being received and it is believed that the number of lives lost in this community alone will exceed 50.

The heaviest damage occurred through the area between Morant Bay and Kingston. Appalling devastation was seen in the town of Morant Bay, where all the public buildings collapsed, including the hospital.

As bridges were washed away, communication by road is impossible but a military party aboard a launch is attempting to reach the town.

The Governor stated that the areas worst affected are Saint Thomas, Kingston, Saint Andrew, Saint Catherine and Clarendon. The damage was much less in Westmoreland and Saint Elizabeth. No casualties have been reported from Savanna-la-mar.

At Montego Bay in the north of the island, normal conditions are existing and the situation in all northern centers is believed to be satisfactory.

Services Being Restored

Essential services in Kingston and Saint Andrew are being restored as fast as possible and although stagnant water is causing anxiety, some electric power is now available; the local newspaper is being dropped by air.

The food situation is not yet serious but destruction of crops will soon create a major problem. Loss of banana trees alone is estimated at 100 per cent.

To provide relief and assist poorer people to reconstruct their homes, a Jamaica Hurricane Relief Fund has been set up and is being administered by a special committee.

Contributions from outside Jamaica should be sent to: The Governor's Hurricane Relief Fund, King's House, Jamaica.

The rest of the Red Cross and other organizations such as the St. John's Ambulance Corps is "beyond praise" according to the Governor. "Everywhere the people have behaved excellently and even the homeless have been wonderfully cheerful" he added.

A NEMESIS RETURNS:

Powell Must Look to His Political Laurels in '52

By CHARLES PEARCE

NEW YORK (ANP) — The political fight brewing in Harlem democratic ranks over district leadership foretells an even bigger battle in the same party, for bigger stakes, next year.

Election of district leaders this month sees the return of Hubert Brown in the struggle for a post from which he was ousted, or walked out of in 1944.

Bruce, never popular at Tammany Hall, was the first colored person elected to a leadership in the Democratic party in New York. That was in 1935 when the open rebellion against white leadership and insufficient patronage rocketed Bruce into office.

Fill-In Candidate

His election was not without difficulty for Bruce was really second choice of the insurgents. Their original candidate was Henri Shields, a lawyer and former aide-man under the old regime. But at the last minute, for some unexplained reason, Shields withdrew, leaving the rebels without a candidate. Bruce was approached at his famous Monterey Restaurant at 137th St. and 7th Ave. and accepted the challenge.

Now Bruce is heading back to politics, blasting away at everything with his ultimate goal Adam Powell's seat in Congress in 1952.

Now Bruce is returning and raising the already organized group in the 12th District, which he hopes to recapture. Observers are aghast the action of Joe Ford, former leader and one time bitter opponent of Bruce and solid supporter of Powell. Ford has surrendered and joined the Bruce camp.

So once again Harlem is confronted with a "divide and rule" policy greatly pleasing to political bigwigs. They love to have Harlem folk battle and scrap among themselves—it relieves the command from putting elected colored persons in strategic spots where they can help the people they represent.

New York University Has Largest Colored Professional Staff

NEW YORK — (ANP) — New York University probably tops collegiate universities in the nation in its quota of colored faculty. In NYU classrooms at Washington Square, teaching students of all races and creeds, were 10 instructors:

Associate professor of education, Hale Woodruff in art; Dr. Kenneth Clark and Dr. Deborah Patridge of "The Human Relations Center," along with consultants, Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk, and Thurgood Marshall of the NAACP;

Assistant professor of education, Estelle Massey Osborne, nursing education; Ardelle A. Llewellyn, secondary education, and D. Roscoe C. Brown (noted trackman), physical education.

Is This Liberian Dictatorship?

Ex-State Department Official Hits Tubman

Liberia is Mr. Tubman's "and anyone who disagrees with Mr. Tubman or his dictatorial policy is ignominious and seditious and forced to become a fugitive," states John R. Ross, formerly acting chief of the Liberian Desk of the State Department.

As a case in point, Mr. Ross cites Didhwo Twe, a native Liberian, who announced his candidacy against President William V. Tubman and asked the United Nations to send observers to Monrovia to witness the May 1 presidential election because he believed opposition would not be treated fairly.

For this action, Mr. Twe allegedly was denounced by Mr. Tubman as "a traitor to your country, a consummate liar, a senile visionary, a sophisticated bigot and an uncompromising egotist." Mr. Twe fled into hiding to escape imprisonment.
