$50 For Mental Hygiene

Great Grandmother, 59, Morgan Grad

"No matter what obstacles may at come, one should never give up."

That, in a sentence, is the philosophy of Mrs. Martha Anne Minnis, of Altavista, Va., who, at 59, will receive her B.S. degree from Morgan State College at the August 10 commencement exercises.

Mother of eight children, all living, grandmother of 15 and great-grandmother of two, this shy, soft-spoken, gray-haired woman who began her teaching career 43 years ago when she was but 16, will realize a cherished ambition when she will don cap and gown for the first time next week and receive her diploma.

Mrs. Minnis, chronologically, is the oldest person in the 49-member class but to see her in action and to hear her talk, one would never guess it.

She has been coming to summer school at Morgan since 1948.

Came With Daughter

That year, she and a daughter, Mrs. Mary Hawkins, entered summer school and shared the same dormitory room. Mrs. Hawkins also came back the following summer, but since that time her mother has been going it alone.

Mrs. Minnis began her teaching career in the fall of 1908 at the Johnson Mountain School, a one-room, log-cabin affair in Bedford County, Va. That spring she had been graduated from Allen High School in Asheville, N.C.

She taught there four years and then went to the Argenda School where Mrs. Edgar Brown is principal. Mrs. Katherine Lee, who lives in Altavista, is the wife of the coach and physical education teacher at the Campbell training school at Bedford and Mrs. Mary Hawkins, now a graduate of Johnson C. Smith University, is seeking an M.A. at Atlanta university.

Mrs. Minnis, a member of Shiloh Baptist Church in the home county, is also organist at the Mt. Plain Baptist Church in the community where she teaches. She also likes to write poetry and has notebooks full of her "brain children."

Moody's Mood Scorned By Vet Who Fought Back

A 30 - year - old slightly inebriated "gentleman," Edward Manns of the 1800 block Mulliken St. "unconsciously" tangled with the law Saturday, and sobered up with a $25 fine to his credit.

Manns clashed with Patrolman Leroy Moody around midnight, after the officer asked him and three other passengers to move their car.

According to the patrolman who happened to cruise by in a squad car, the fender of the car in which Manns was a passenger was resting on the trunk of his car.

He stated that although the driver complied with his request, Manns resorted to cursing and threatened to strike him.

While trying to arrest the passenger, Manns tried to kick him while getting out of the car, the officer said.

In a hearing at Northwestern, Manns stated that she was a disabled vet, and might have cursed the officer, but he was drunk and didn't know.

The $25 fine and a 60-day jail sentence were suspended by Magistrate E. Everett Lane.

JUDGE ADINS SERVES ON MORGAN BOARD

Judge E. Dale Adkins Jr. of the 1st Judicial Circuit has been appointed to the Morgan State College board of trustees to replace the late Judge Levin C. Bailey whose term would have expired in 1955.

From A To Z with Sam Lacy

Baseball fans throughout the nation know him only as "King Tut," the funnyman of the Clowns. Outside of his role as King, the ant-shaped, laugh-producer of the Negro American League is a serious-minded man of 40-odd years who has an uncanny ability to fashion a respectable living out of a strange and unusual job combination . . . Tut is a baseball clown in the summer months and a Pullman-Company linen supervisor in the winter . . . He is the only active member of the original clowns of tan baseball; married to a devoted wife, Beatrice, with whom he maintains a comfortable home in Philadelphia.

SAM LACY

Tut was born in Jacksonville, Fla., but was raised in Philly . . . He derived his nickname from his boyhood love for a T-shirt . . . it was one of those fads . of the - day things, a white jersey shirt for kids with a huge mummy figure worked into the chest - wide lettering: Tut-a-kha-men . . . It was along about the time that explorers were searching the caves of the long dead Egyptian monarch . . . The playground kids with whom young King played promptly took his last name and added the Tut . . . It has stuck ever since . . . The guy sat in a field box the other day and, between minute bites of a hot dog, told me his story:

"A fellow named George Brown and some other guys, Rojo and Poney, and some others whose names I can't remember, oh yes, Joe Dugan and Thad Christopher and Fred Wilson and Winky James . . . We started the Miami Clowns in 1946 and we had played a couple of seasons with the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Sunshine Babies . . . We bought two old Cadillacs at $75 apiece, they were old style, out - of-date cars that the dealers were glad to get rid of . . . We toured the East and Canada and made a lot of friends although we didn't make much money . . . I didn't worry me too much because I had a job with the Pullman Co., putting linen on the New York-to-Florida train. I'd been there and if I didn't make it in the summer I could always fall back on that.

"When the other guys couldn't take it any longer, we got ourselves bought by Hunter Campbell, actually the first owner of the Clowns . . . he's dead now . . . his widow said she had last year to Syd Pollock (Jewish promoter of Tarrytown, NY). . . . When Hunter wanted to take us off percentage and put us on $100 a week salary, everybody quit . . . That was the best thing we ever did because we then formed a team called the West Indian Royals and promptly got stranded away out West . . . When the war came, I went to work at the Bethlehem Steel Works at Sparrows Point, Md., and played with a team operated by Dr. Joe Thomas . . . In 1942, I was back with the Cincinnati Clowns, now under Pollock, and I've been here ever since . . . My tricks are my own inventions, but I'm handicapped because so many of the ball players won't go along with me when I need 'em to help me put over an act. . . . It's a good life now . . . good money and a good pleasure when you can pull a laugh from folks who need it so badly . . . Best time I have nowadays, though, is when the crowd demands that they let me play and I get into a game . . . Two years ago, I got the biggest kick of my life . . . they put me in a game in Atchison, Kansas, against the Kansas City Monarchs . . . I hit a homer outa the park with two men on . . . Charlestoned all the way around the bases . . . and slid home!

The stuff some of the ever-growing crop of baseball announcers get away with these days is enough to make an old ball player tear at what's left of his hair . . . The other day, a radio guy questioned the logic of a play that was as clear as the nose on your face . . . wondered aloud why Washington's Ken Wood threw to second after taking a deep fly with men on first and second, wanted to know why Wood—with his fine arm—didn't try to nail the runner who had tagged up and advanced to third after the catch . . . "It looked a lot like he could have gotten him," confided the announcer . . . Needless to say, Ken's judgment was right by any baseball standard . . . It was a one-out situation with the Senators leading by one run, and it was late in the game . . . By throwing to third, Wood may have invited the man on first to move to second, thus putting the possible winning run in position to score on a single . . . Had Wood threw to second left the situation at two out and only the tying run set up for an ordinary hit to score.

On another occasion, the announcer handling the Brooklyn Dodgers' games gave Duke Snider a working over for being thrown out trying to go from first to third on a single to the outfield . . . A moment later, the opposing pitcher, Hewie Pollet, threw wildly in an attempt to pick George Shuba (who had hit the single) off first . . . "If Snider," guessed the announcer, had stayed on second instead of trying to go to third, the Dodgers would have a run now" . . . Doesn't that kind of reasoning make you wince? . . . Regardless of the wisdom, or lack of same, connected with Duke's futile try for third, baseball is played in the fourth grade would laugh at a pitcher seeking a pickoff at first base while there was a man on second . . . In fact, the first baseman wouldn't even be covering the bag, since there was no place for the runner to go.

The "behind-the-scenes" bonus arrangement between the Brooklyn Dodgers and their young schoolboy rightfielder, Bob Coles, goes like this: Bob, winner of the MVP contest sponsored annually among New York high schoolers, signed last week with the Brooklyn Class C farm club at Great Falls, Mont., and received $2,500 . . . when he moves up to Class B, he'll pick up another $1,000 . . . when he reaches the A classification, Coles gets another $1,000 . . . and when he makes Triple-A, Bob pockets a final $2,500 of the Flatbush loitiee.

Bob AND ENDINGS: "Satchel Paige Night" at St. Louis last week produced a 14,189 paid gate, largest crowd the Browns have drawn at home since June 15 and their sixth highest attendance of the year . . . Undercover efforts of the New York Giants' brass failed last week when the Army shook its head on the request that Willie Mays be granted leave to be at the Polo Grounds as a "surprise" for Leo Durocher on Leo's "night" Aug. 7th (Thursday).

The Brooklyn Dodger bench swears, to a man, it was not Roy Campanella who was heckling Augie Galileo when the rookie umpire tossed Campy out of the game the other night . . . "All of which proves he can't even hear good, much less see good," asserts Preacher Roe.

The Wednesday Noonday Luncheon Club of the Dallas YMCA honored President Dick Burnett of the Dallas Eagles on Sunday, for pioneering with Dave Hoskins as the first colored player in the Texas League . . . Blaine Denning, college draft choice of the Baltimore Bullets, pro cage circ, is working this summer in his native Detroit as a deputy sheriff. . .

Remember John (Killer) Kane, 1947 all-CIAA grid star from Morgan State College? . . . Well, the Killer's taken unto himself a wife . . . she's the former Vickie Lee, niece of Babe and Chris Zaharias, the internationally-famous wrestling brothers . . . Kane, now a wrestler working with the Western and Canadian circuit of the professional mat combine, met his wife while booking out of Chicago . . . Married in Minneapolis last January, now living in the Windy City . . . the coeds sent them sweet wishes . . . Mrs. Kane is native of Lansing, Mich., is also a wrestler, one of the stars of the American grappling circuit . . . Her aunt by marriage is Babe Didrickson, wife of Uncle Babe Zaharias.

Olympians Rap Racism

Blast Press For U.S. 'Color' Issue

HELSINKI — Olympic champion Dick Jarvis, Norvel Lee and Harrison Dillard blasted the left-for European press late last week for its introduction of racism into closing reports on the Olympic Games.

Each man a winner of a gold medal in the Olympiad just completed, took a swing at the Finnish Vapaa Sana (meaning People's Democratic—Front) and at Russian organs for suggesting that the sweeping American victories in the Games were accomplished, in the main, by "Slaves."

Said Vapaa Sana:

"American colored persons, which at home live as bad pariahs, now in the Olympics are good for saving medals for the American banner . . .

Happy—But

"We are happy about their victories but they should do it for their own part of the world — Africa."

Other papers played up the role of American Colored prominently and referred to what they call "persecutions of the black man in America."

Russian papers, in detailing American triumphs, never failed to emphasize the role played by the colored.

"This is ridiculous," said Davis, heavyweight weightlifting champion from Brooklyn, N.Y.

"What do they think we are? Do they think Italy should get the American gold simply in the 100-meter dash because Lindy Remigino was Italian? Ridiculous.

"If you followed that theory, the United States wouldn't sent anybody over here but Indians."

Lee, Dillard Speak

Lee, of Washington, D.C., American light-heavyweight weight lifter, said such writings are "a lot of bosh."

"Why, my—American ancestry traces back five or six generations," he said.

Said Dillard: "We won the right to represent the U. S., in a fair competition with athletes of other races. We came here as representative of the country where we make our homes; where we live and breathe and work and eat and are happy with our families, the same as other people are in other solid nations of the world. That's all there is to it."

All Hail The Queens Of Speed

Bias Bars Panama From Title Play

BALBOA, CZ.—(ANP)—Carl E. Stotz, Commissioner of Little League Baseball in the United States has not yet arrived on the Canal Zone in response to an invitation by Rufus M. Lovelady, president of Pacific Little League, a team of white boys who had been denied a waiver by a colored team.

Last month at the close of the local tournament, Pacific Little League became champions of USArate or white Canal Zone teams, while Isthmian Little League were the champions of Local-rate or colored teams.

Stotz, in fairness to the champion teams, refused to issue a request invitation to the white team to represent the Canal Zone in the Little World Series, except the Isthmian Little league colored granted a waiver or lost in a play-off tournament with the white team.

Rufu Lovelady, president of the white team, refused to have his boys play the team of which Hamilton Lavalas, a La Boca school teacher, is president, culminating in the Canal Zone being not represented in the Little World Series.

NAL Returns To Briggs Stadium

DETROIT — Syd Pollock's Indianapolis Clowns are anxiously awaiting the decision of the owners of the Kansas City Monarchs scheduled for Briggs Stadium here Sunday afternoon.

It will mark the first time since 1945 that Negro American League games have been staged at the Tiger Stadium, and the first appearance at Briggs Stadium for the Clowns.

Some sharp doings are in store for Detroit fans when the Clowns and Monarchs trade the Motor City and between 25,00 and 30,000 are expected to turn out.

The NAL twin bill will be augmented by the rollicking entertaining Clowns diamond Fun-Show, headed by the inimitable King Tut and his stooge, Spec Bebop, plus the one-man band, Boogie Woogie Paul furnishing the musical background.

The Clowns have won 9 out of their last 10 NAL games, while the Monarchs have also gone on a pace and both clubs will be nearly even on the season's series when they hit Detroit.

Joe Louis Preps For N.C. Exhibition

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Joe Louis, former world heavyweight champion, is in training here for his Friday night exhibition bout at Bowman Gray Stadium.

Louis who is trimming down said he would try to look impressive against his young opponent, Joe McFadden of Winston-Salem.

McFadden's lifetime record to date is 31 fights, 27 wins (22 by knockouts), three losses all by TKO's, and one draw.

McFadden, in his five New York fights under the management of Ray Arcel, was technically knocked out in three straight fights against Gil Newkirk, Newark, N.J., slugger; Nino Valdez, Mexican heavyweight champion, and Roland La Starza.

McFadden won a revenge fight over Newkirk and scored a dopesupsetting draw with Valdez in Brooklyn.

Louis and McFadden will come to blows Friday at 8:15 p.m. The advance sale is reported brisk.

It's a 32-round boxing card. Supporting fights under the main go to Louis and McFadden are:

Lamar Jones, 135, of Washington, D.C. in a lightweight eight-rounder against Arthur Persely, 137, New York City.

An eight-rounder will feature Angus (Go-Go) Lowery, 147, Winston-Salem, and Kid Johnson, 148-pound welterweight of Lumberton, N.C.

A four-rounder pits George Powell, Winston-Salem 146-pound welterweight, and Fightin' Kid Althea Gibson, the world's premier woman tennis player, shown accepting another of many trophies which have, and will, come to her this summer. Award is being made by Dr. Kenneth Robinson, of the Somers Isle Lawn Lennys Association, following Miss Gibson's recent victory in the
