Double-Ring Rites For Army Captain and Bride

CREEDMORE, N. C. — Miss Clementine Coley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus R. Coley of this city, became the bride of Capt. George H. Coblyn, United States Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marius Coblyn of Cambridge, Massachusetts, in an impressive candlelight ceremony performed here recently in the Pine Grove Baptist Church, with the pastor, Rev. G. W. Thomas officiating.

The church was decorated with altar baskets of white gladioli, white asters, white baby's-breath, white formosa and fern with white candles, candles and candelabras. White satin ribbons marked the pews.

Miss June Chavis, organist of Oxford, N.C. presented a program of nuptial music including the traditional wedding marches. Soloists were Miss Helen Chavis, who sang "Through The Years," and "Because," and Cornell Powell who sang "I Love Thee," and "The Lord's Prayer" for the benediction.

The bride, escorted and given in marriage by her father, chose an original gown of candlelight satin and imported chantilly type lace designed with scalloped neckline on an illusion yoke, long sleeves ending in cala points and sculptured bodice fastened down the back with tiny satin buttons. Her full gathered satin skirt styled with scalloped edged redingote flowed into a cathedral train. She carried a white satin covered prayer book topped with a white orchid and showered with baby's-breath and ribbon streamers.

The bride's fingertip veil of French illusion was fully gathered on a bandeau of orange blossoms.

Miss Coley chose all white for her attendants. Her sister, Miss Alene Coley, maid of honor, wore a ballerina length velveray net dress with fitted bodice and gathered fuschia around the shoulders. Her accessories were a scalloped edge velveray picture hat, opera pumps and short white gloves. She carried a bouquet of red carnations and baby's-breath.

Bridesmaids were Miss Geraldine Hicks of Creedmore, Miss Esther Mae Bryant of Supply, Miss Rosie Holloway of Durham, all of whom were college classmates of the bride, and Miss Senora Howell of Raleigh.

Tomi Carolyn Thomas, niece of the bride, served as flower girl and Tommie Satterwhite was ring bearer.

New Yorker Best Man

Captain Coblyn had as his best man Captain Thomas R. Gaines of New York City, and ushers were J. C. Coley, Creedmore, brother of the bride, Captain DeWitt Cooke, LaGrange, Texas, 1st Lt. Albert Gillette, Detroit, Michigan, and C. W. O. Franklin Manning, Charlotte, N.C.

For her—daughter's wedding, Mrs. Coley chose a street length dress of pale blue nylon tricot over blue taffeta and black accessories. She wore a corsage of red roses.

Capt. George H. Coblyn, USA, and the former Miss Clementine Coley, leave Pine Grove Baptist Church; Creedmore, N.C., following their wedding last week.

NACW Official Denies Finagle

TOLEDO, Ohio — Mrs. Ella P. Stewart, who recently retired as president of the National Association of Colored Women, this week denied reports of a political rift during the association's recent 28th Bi-Annual meeting in Los Angeles, California.

The reports concerned the election of Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, Chicago, who was drafted from the floor to succeed Mrs. Stewart. Mrs. Stewart said she did not endorse any candidate, nor did she have any differences with any member concerning her successor.

Says Agreement Broken

Mrs. Gertrude Hicks, Los Angeles, president of the California Association of Colored Women, was quoted in newspaper stories as accusing Mrs. Stewart of breaking her support to Mrs. Gaines after agreeing to back her candidacy of Oklahoma.

Mrs. Stewart said that the only difference between her and Mrs. Hicks was over the latter's handling of convention affairs, contrary to procedure outlined by the national office. The former national president stayed with Mrs. Hicks while in Los Angeles, but said she paid for her housing like any other delegate.

Parisiana

By LENORE BUFORD

PARIS (ANP) — My roommate and I went to the Museum of Modern Art. It is a fabulous place. Before I came I used to hear discussions of people who had visited the one in New York and this one trying to decide which of the two had the better collection.

What I know about art is limited to one art appreciation course I had at school, but some of the paintings were really beautiful. We saw works of Rouault, Picasso, Lautrec, Valladon, and many others, but my favorites were by an artist named Vuillard who died in 1940. I had never read of him at home.

See American Picture

After that we walked up the Avenue George V to the Champs-Elysees where there was a very long line waiting for tickets for "A Street Car Named Desire," which by the way is one of the few American movies that has had its titled translated literally on the posters around town (Un Tramway Nomme Desire).

It took me weeks to figure out "Propre a Rien" literally "Clean as can be") which is the way they translated Bob Hope's "Paney Pierce."

We'd never been to the top of the Arc de Triomphe so we headed for the monument—too late. The elevator stops running at 4 o'clock. So we went to the subway station to head for home.

Teenage Philosophy

In the metro station there were two American teenagers, who didn't speak French. One walked up to the ticket - taker and said, "How do we get to Pigalle?" The man didn't understand English, so they repeated.

See he caught the Pigalle part and gave them directions in French. One of the kids said to the other, "That's the only thing I don't like about this place — there are so many foreigners."

Some of the sights that continue to make Paris charming beyond any city are things like the nuns and priests who often ride bicycles to their destinations — skirts and capes flying in the breeze. I have often thought what a commotion would be caused if a nun in Cleveland (my home town) rode down Euclid on a bicycle.

But in Paris the bicycle is a necessity for an many because of the prices of cars. Also practically every form of motor bike and cycle can be found here too. There are frequent accidents because of reckless driving.

Fashions For Babes

Then there are the children's clothes. Though our American rompers are more practical for playing, many shops here still specialize in frilly little outfits that make the children look like dolls.

For the babies there are white soft furry long capes (often much longer than the baby to allow growing and tucking room) with hoods on them. The hoods are embroidered caps — perhaps with a pink background with white, green, and yellow embroidery, and a tassel hanging from the center.

Many of the little girls dresses are adorable too. It is interesting to notice that no matter how poorly clad some of the mothers are, the children (on Sundays particularly) are very carefully dressed. The clothes are expensive, but no more than those at home.

Smocks For All

During the school year and spring, girls and boys wear smocks so that it is difficult to tell which is which. Also the elementary school children wear navy blue uniforms because, of course, the schools are Catholic.

Sometimes in the Luembourg Gardens one can see ways and waves of navy-blue dressed youngsters playing at this game and that.

Sunday is the family day here. The family streets goes to the park, to the gallery, it's met important where — but it is done in a unit. Sunday I watched one family, parents and two children about three and five years old, come into a Tabac (tobacco shop where one can buy wine, pastry, chocolate, tea, etc). The mother ordered tea, the father and children had wine and croissants (crescent shaped rolls);

Abyssinian Prince Visits Navel Academy

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (ANP)—Midshipmen of the United States Naval Academy's Foreign Relations Club turned out in full formal dress to greet royalty in the person of 17-year-old Prince Alexander of Abyssinia.

The African potentate made an informal visit to the United States Naval Academy's Severn River Naval Command. He is a brilliant student at Britain's Royal Naval College. The grandson of Emperor Haile Selassie — arrived on quarters accompanied by an Ethiopian diplomat and John Boots of the United States State Department.

Prince Alexander was escorted through the academy visiting the academic building, the chapel and crypt of John Paul Jones and the museum. He seemed to enjoy immensely the plates' noon formation from the steps of Bancroft hall, and seeing the midshipmen's dormitory.

Miss Ollie Dunbar Wed To Coast Guard Captain

JERSEY CITY — One of the season's most beautiful weddings took place Saturday afternoon at Metropolitan AME Church, 37 Virginia Ave., where the Rev. David Lynch, pastor, administered the vows to Miss Ollie Mae Dunbar and Ricardo DeGregado Jr., both of Jersey City.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Isom (he's a police sergeant) of 134 Myrtle ave., was given in marriage by her father.

An Attractive Bride

She was charming in chantilly lace over skin of satin cut in princess style, and illusion neck line with white tulle veil attached to a helmet, crown trimmed in mother of pearls leaves.

Global Jottings

By LOU SWARZ

NEW YORK (GLOBAL) —Richmond, Virginians are now feting the charming and lovable couple Mr. and Mrs. Leonard McDaniel and their family, Barbara-Talitha Sylvester, after months and they had such a delightful annual vacation here in New York City.

Mr. McDaniel, head tailor at Stein's in Richmond, is the most active as an alumnus of Virginia Union University, a Mason, and a deacon in Ebenezer Baptist Church.

Mrs. McDaniel (Lillian, sister Zeta) leads such a full life' she doesn't have time to look like a mother of anyone over 20, but she is, and is proud to be.

Very Busy Person

She is a teacher of Remedial Reading in Richmond, lecturer on teen-age situations, past matron of OES, youth director of the Federated Clubs of Richmond, president of the Elementary Teachers of Virginia, president of the 3rd District of the State of Virginia, president of the Women Fellowship Bible Class which includes 10 churches, vice-president of the Metropolitan Council of the NCNW of Richmond, and last and most important, an ardent worker in Ebenezer Church along with her husband.

Thus, we salute the McDaniel family today and will be happy to salute a family in your community when life might be inspirational to others all over the country.

Dr. Igal Visits
