Unlawful To Ask Jobseeker's Creed

By JAMES L. HICKS

NEW YORK — The power of the New York State Commission Against Discrimination received a shot in the arm Thursday when a five-judge appellate court ruled that an employer had violated the state law by asking a job applicant questions concerning her creed and national origin.

The court's decision came on the first test in which the commission had found it necessary to go to court in an effort to iron out charges of racial or religious discrimination against an employer.

The case involved a woman who brought charges against the Holland vocational service at 610 Broadway, which stated that the agency had asked her questions concerning her creed and national origin and one concerning her change of her name when she applied for work.

Agency Appeals Ruling

Following a public hearing the commission ruled that the agency had violated the law and followed the ruling by issuing a case and desist order directing the agency to refrain from such tactics in the future.

The agency appealed the ruling and the case went befor the appellate division of the New York State Supreme Court.

There, the court not only upheld the findings and ruling of the commission.

It also upheld a provision of the commission's ruling which directed the agency to keep records on all job applicants for a period of one year which would allow the commission to check to see if the agency was complying with its ruling.

Court's Ruling Quoted

In handing down its decision, the court said:

"The decision of the commission, after factual findings which seem to us fully justified by the record, was that the oral and written inquiries described in the testimony taken together expressed a limitation, specification or discrimination as to creed and national origin not based on bonafide occupational qualification."

The court added that inquiry by the agency of the applicant's change of name, "plus inquiry concerning the nature of schooling, the religion (of the applicant's) former employer and his wife, the national origin of one's name may each be harmless under some circumstances asked but questions of unions of applicants, but in their aggregate they have a curiously jarring effect."

Although the commission did not say so in rendering the court verdict, it was apparent that the applicant had been of the Jewish faith and the agency had asked questions of her which would tend to bring this fact out.

Senator Defies Governor, Moves To 'Kill' Pa. FEPC

HARRISBURG, PA.—This state's battle over fair employment practice legislation reached the boiling point July 17 when Senate president M. Harvey Taylor sent a house-approved FEPC bill to a committee that Gov. John S. Fine charged was "notoriously packed against" the measure.

Mr. Taylor, chairman of the Republican state committee and one of the governor's original supporters, sent the bill to the senate judiciary committee for consideration despite a warning from the governor that it would be "killed" as it was in the 1951 session.

In a letter to Mr. Taylor, Governor Fine asked that the FEPC bill be sent to the education committee "where it may be openly voted upon and have a fair chance of being reported to the senate floor.

Methodists Denounce 'Healers' Who Cause Yelling Bedlams

BIRMINGHAM, England — Quack "healers" came in for condemnation at a Methodist conference here recently.

A speaker said certain healing missions provided no lasting benefits to persons who came for relief.

Dr. Leslie Weatherhead of London said that at one service recently a healer treated a blind woman and broke her white sticks were taken up by other and shrieked in dismay. Her sticksewere taken up by other patients until the place was a yelling bedlam.

Mass emotion of this kind had a spurious power of banishing symptoms temporarily, he said. He related the case of a man with a brain tumor who died after postponing an operation because he was told he could be cured by a healer.

CARVER HONORED—A bust of Dr. George W. Carver, famed scientist, was dedicated at Diamond, Mo., Carver's birthplace, last week. Above bust is presented to the U.S. Service in the ceremony in which Robert D. Hobday, Carver Memorial Institute (right), makes presentation to Howard W. Baker (left), regional director of park service.

2,000 Pay Dr. Carver Tribute As Birthplace Is Dedicated As Memorial

DIAMOND, Mo. (ANP)—More than 2,000 admirers paid tribute to the memory of the late Dr. George W. Carver at ceremonies here the dedication of his birthplace as a national monument two miles west of here, Tuesday.

The dedication of the 210-acre farm where Dr. Carver was born of pioneer parents, marked the first time a national monument has been created to a colored person. It also was the first dedicated to any American scientist by name and the first for service to agriculture.

Dr. Carver earned international reputation for his development of many by-products from the peanut, sweet potato and pecan. His discoveries were responsible in part for revolutionizing the economy of the South.

When He Played As Boy

The monument to him is marked by a plaque attached to a stone on the site of a plantation belonging to Moses Carver, the German immigrant who first owned, then freed and reared Dr. Carver.

Besides the plaque, the monument also contains the original walnut grove where, as a boy, young Carver began his first studies of botany. A bronze bust of Dr.-Carver is mounted on a base of native stone on the monument.

Douglas McKay, secretary of the interior, made the acceptance speech. Others who participated included T. M. Campbell, federal extension agent in the United States, and six persons who lived near the Carver Diamond Grove plantation when Carver was a boy.

4 Neighbors Participate

The six are Forbes H. Brown of Oakland, Calif., 81; Mrs. Minnie P. Youse, Baxter, Kans., 85; J. J. Brown, Granby, Mo., 90; Mrs. Lzella Hardin of Diamond, 95; Parrish Brown, Joplin, 86; and George W. Jackson, 84.

Mr. Campbell, who worked with Dr. Carver for some 37 years and who received the second annual award of the George W. Carver foundation, said of the noted scientist:

"Dr. Carver was a man for accuracy. He was an individualist, but was not difficult to approach. He always found time to talk with people, although he never would seek out a crowd.

"He made the most difficult scientific experiment seem easy. Dr. Carver had an unpredictable sense of humor. A slight man, he thought it funny when people remarked he did not measure up to the preconceived idea of what a scientist should look like."

TOUR REVEALS:
Farmers Improve Homes And Farming Methods

By SHERMAN BRISCOE

More colored farmers own modern homes and mechanized farm equipment than ever before although many still live in shabby dwellings and operate their farms with old-fashioned one-mule, one-row implements.

This sums up impressions received during a recent tour of colored farms in Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia.

The sight of attractive rural homes almost hidden along little traveled gravel and dirt back roads is a welcome relief from the thousands of tenant shacks one sees bordering the main highways which sometimes run through the plantations.

Attractive Homes

But behind the plantations are hundreds of neat and attractive homes on small farms owned and operated by colored farmers. The farm and home agents of Extension Service have put in long hours helping these family farmers improve their production and raise their level of living.

In Leeds, Ala., for example, County Agent Percy White and Mrs. Ruhye J. Robinson, home agent, are helping to improve a whole community. Already 32 of the 46 homes in this section of Leeds have been touched by the program.

Improvements include painting and general renovation, planting of flowers, seeding of grass, purchase of furniture, and installation of modern kitchen equipment. The school, a store, and three churches are involved in the face-lifting project.

Worked 31 Years

In South Carolina, Mrs. Marian B. Paul, supervisor of home demonstration work; R. C. Smith farm agent, and Mrs. Cammie Fludd, home agent, pointed out many improved farm homes.

One was owned by Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt Benson of Woodruff, who started out as sharecroppers with a borrowed bed and a second-hand stove 31 years ago. Today, they own 124 acres and an attractive home. Mr. Benson is chairman of the community farmers club and a son is state president of New Farmers of America.

In Virginia, Miss Rachel Carter, home agent, singled out Mr. and Mrs. Preston Higganbotham who live near Amherst. Two white wagon wheels front their attractive two-story home.

Efficiency Results

It has usually been the tractor and other mechanized farm equipment such as combines, haybalers, seed drills, and corn pickers which helped to provide the income for the construction, and maintenance of improved housing.

Today, tractors and other implements are seen on a good many of the owner - operator farms. They help the farmer to do his work more quickly and more efficiently. Some are able to plow their entire crops of cotton, corn, or peanuts in a single day.

The homes show it. The many excellent examples of well-kept modern homes give evidence of a growing trend which is a healthy sign. Perhaps a good sign, too, is the increasing number of shabby tenant dwellings now empty and growing up in weeds.

George Chilton Funeral Held

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Funeral services were held recently for George W. Chilton Sr., 62, at the McNabb Funeral home, Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Chilton died at his home on Mooberry st., of a heart attack.

A native of Pomeroy, Ohio, Mr. Chilton had been employed in the State Department of Health since 37. Before moving to Columbus he operated a barber shop in Rendville, where he also served as secretary of the town council and chairman of the board of education.

Survivors include: two sons, George W. Jr., Earl W. one daughter, Mrs. Thomas Cassmotion, sells, all of Columbus; a sister, Mrs. Ruby Florida A. and M College; a brother, Wallace G. Chilton of Martinsburg, W. Va., and St. James School, Md.

Mr. Chilton was a 32nd degree Mason and had been initiated into the Alla Baba Temple of the Shriners. The officiating minister was Doctor Hicks of Mt. Olivet Baptist church.

NAPE Members At Workshop

BRONXVILLE, N.Y. — Out of 40 students of the techniques and science of labor organization and operation of NAPE the white collar workshop of the American Labor Education school here recently, there were five fulltime students from the National Alliance of Postal Employees.

One of them, John S. Sawyer, of Montgomery, Ala., was elected to the board of directors of the workshop, and was used as an example of the manner in which interested young trade union members acquired the working knowledge of NAPE techniques and organizational plans.

Also attending the workshop were: Chester B. Moore of Philadephia; Anthony G. Ward of Baltimore, Leroy C. Johnson of Washington, and John F. D. Mann of Philadelphia, a member of the Philadelphia Alliance Bulletin.

From the national office of the NAPE came W. C. Jason Jr., welfare director and Charles Gorman, chairman of the NAPE national education committee.

Holdup That Failed Brings 90-Day Term

DETROIT — Willie Pickett, 20, of 2863 St. Antoine, was sentenced to 90 days in the house of correction recently by Judge Martha W. Griffiths on an assault charge.

Pickett was found guilty of slugging a cab driver on May 1, in a holdup attempt. He escaped without obtaining any money, police said, after several persons appeared on the scene.

D.C. Women Sue In-Law Over Cleveland Property

CLEVELAND — A suit was filed here July 3, against Castro Jackson, 1786 E. 61st st., by Mrs. Petty of 236 W. st., nw, and Mrs. Della Moten of 426 Q st., nw, Washington, said the property was left them and Jackson by their sister, Mrs. Irene Jackson, who died intestate on April 22, 1951.

It stated that the late Mrs. Jackson left Jackson an undivided half interest and the two sisters an undivided fourth interest each in property located at 1786 E. 61st st.

Since Jackson came into possession of the property, it was said, he has operated the house for lodging of tenants. He has not made an accounting of the income with the other heirs.

The sisters in their petition asked the court to make Jackson give an accounting of the rent collected since Mrs. Jackson's death.

They also want the court to determine their interests and to partition the premises so that they can realize their shares. If this is not done they ask that the property be sold and shares distributed.

London Lords Spurn Anti-Discrimination

LONDON (ANP)—The House of Lords last week defeated legislation that would have prohibited employers in certain African colonies from discriminating against colored persons.

The defeat, 63-21, came after Lord Monster, underscretary of the Colonial Office, had said it was impossible to legislate the color bar out of existence. "You will certainly not abolish that by legislation," he said. "You cannot make the white unions in Africa give a greater opportunity to skilled labor by legislation."

C. R. CONGRESS HITS COAST JURY SYSTEM

OAKLAND, Calif.— The East Bay Council of Congress of Racial Equality has published a pamphlet entitled, "Can You Get A Fair Trial In Alameda County?" containing documentary charges that the county's jury, system discriminates against colored persons and other workers.

69th Anniversary

AUGUSTA, Ga.—The 69th anniversary of the First Mount Moriah Baptist church, of which Rev. L. E. Westbrook is pastor, was celebrated recently. The sermon was delivered by the Rev. E. J. Dyson, pastor of the Springfield Baptist church.

Leaders Eye Va. Schools
Board Promised Equal Facilities

RICHMOND, Va. (ANP)— Colored leaders are keeping a watchful eye on developments for the improvement of colored schools in Nansemond County, since the school board agreed to a program of equalization for colored schools.

The school board made sweeping concessions to the demands of citizens for equal school facilities to those provided for white children. As a result there was an indefinite postponement of a hearing which had been scheduled for July 6 in the United States District Court on a suit on school equalization instituted in January, 1952.

The suit was filed in behalf of 29 colored school children and 11 parents. It contended that school facilities in Nansemond county are greatly inferior to those provided for white children.

To Meet Demands

In an effort to offset the plans of the plaintiffs, the school board agreed to meet five demands which were presented to the defendants by Commonwealth attorney, Paul Everet. As a request James A. Overton, Portsmouth attorney, said the suit will not be heard "until fall, if ever."

The school board has agreed to close all colored students' one and two-room schools not later than September, 1956; to erect facilities to accommodate all students at Nansemond County Training School; to reduce the teacher load at East Suffolk high school by next September; to provide "adequate" bus transportation for pupils by next September, and to equalize all four-room schools with facilities provided for whites by September, 1956.

The board has agreed to begin construction of facilities for the Nansemond County Training school by April of next year. Of the 26,000 residents in Nansemond county, 15,000 are colored, and 11,000 are white.

She Charges Pastor With Petting Act

NEWARK

It's a $64 question. It is up to the Essex county grand jury to furnish the correct answer.

Question—Did the Rev. John Hooks of 107 Ridgewood ave., rub, caress or fondle the thigh of the mind wife of his next-apartment neighbor?

The question was posed Friday in Third criminal court, Magistrate Anthony Guiliano presiding.

The Rev. Mr. Hooks denied he is guilty.

Thomas English, 45, the neighbor, and the wife, Eliza, say the young cleric is "guilty as sin."

Not only is the minister guilty of thigh rubbing, says English, when "I protested he hit me in the face with a bed slat."

The Rev. Mr. Hooks admits hitting his neighbor. "It was in self-defense," he asserted. "He (English) threatened me with a knife."

Det. Conrad Cykowski of police headquarters squad investigated the case.

"I found their stories conflict," he said. "Frankly, it is hard to say which story is correct."

The incident, the detective said, occurred about 11:30 p.m. July 4 at the Ridgewood ave. address.

Cykowski said Mrs. English gave the following version:

Sought Definition Of Word

She and her husband became engaged in an argument. Husband called her a "wench." She didn't think "wench" such a nice word. The husband insisted it was used in a very bad word. She called the Rev. Mr. Hooks to tell them what the word really means.

After defining the word some what to the satisfaction of both, he conversed with her husband.

Later he told her, "I talked with your husband. Now you come on to the porch and I will talk with you."

"Slapped His Face"

She said he talked with her, all right. But insists that what he said to her certainly was not proper. As a result, she slapped the young cleric's face.

She then went into her room, was almost undressed when the Rev. Mr. Hooks broke the door down and proceeded to rub her thighs.

She called her husband. A fight ensued. The husband was hit with a bed slat, suffering a wound under his right eye which required five stitches.

The Rev. Mr. Hooks told a different version, the detective said.

Minister's Story

He admits his neighbors differed over the meaning of the word "wench." They called him to settle the difference. When he started into the apartment, he said that the neighbor's wife was a nude. He hesitated about entering.

The husband urged him in, and told the wife to put on some clothes. The wife got in bed instead.

The husband sat on the side of the bed, advised him to do the same, He did.

After advising the husband and wife to reconcile their differences, he was about to leave when English accused him of "rubbing my wife's legs."

Ran Through Door

The minister said he grabbed a nearby slat and hit the other man in self defense. He then ran through the closed door, breaking down same.

After the detective finished his testimony, the confused Magistrate also appeared confounded.

Apparently not inclined to make like Solomon, he released the complainants and defendant in their own custody and sent the case to the grand jury.

Now, come September, and it is up to the jurors.

Off-Duty Transit Driver Ran Amok

An off-duty bus driver ran amok at Fremont ave. and Lanvale st., Monday night, and assaulted two policemen before reinforcements subdued him.

John T. Allison, 1800 block Woolcourse ave., drove to the intersection in his car, parked and ran to the middle of the street, brandishing a switchblade knife at passers-by.

Patrolmen Milton Schreiber and William Burk, Northwestern district plainclothesmen, were cruising in the area when attracted to the scene by the commotion.

When the two policemen tried to disarm Allison, a fight ensued. The off-duty man, he fought desperately, but hurry-on call was put in for reinforcements and it took six policemen to subdue Allison.

Charges of assaulting Patrolmen Burk carrying a deadly weapon, and disorderly conduct were lodged against the man at Northwestern Police station.

Classes will be in the company's new recreation room and in the offices of its new training department. The schools will be under the direction of C. O. Hollis, CLU, director of training, assisted by assistant agency officer, M. M. Scott.

Malan's Racial Policy Headed For Showdown In S. Africa

CAPETOWN, S. Africa — The stringent racial policy of Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan appeared headed for a showdown fight this week, as the South Africa Parliament opened a joint session.

Coming on the heels of the April election which doubled the Malan majority in Parliament, the session will test whether the Prime Minister can attract enough votes from the opposition to bring off a change in the country's constitution.

Such a change requires a two-thirds majority vote and Malan's party is 15 votes short of this total.

Legislation Introduced

The Prime Minister has already told Parliament that he will introduce legislation to:

1. Validate and amend the Separate Representation Act of 1951, which places 50,000 colored voters on a separate electoral roll with their own representatives.

2. Define the jurisdiction of the courts of law to pass on the validity of laws passed by Parliament.

If the plan is successful, it will mean that Malan has finally won the fight against the African Supreme Court which several months ago declared that several of Malan's anti-colored laws were illegal.

Whether Malan will be able to command the necessary votes is still open to debate. The main opposition group, the United Party, is itself divided on the racial segregation issue, and Malan is pinning his hopes on differences between the right and left wings of the party.

LOCKED IN COMMITTEE:

CIO Urges House Action On D.C. Rights Measures

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NNPA) —The CIO recently urged members of the House to sign discharge petitions filed by Representative Adam C. Powell, (D., N.Y.), to get his two civil rights bills out of the committee to which they were referred.

One of the bills is designed to end racial and religious segregation and discrimination in the District of Columbia. It is pigeonholed in the House District of Columbia committee, which is packed with southerners.

"The other measure is Powell's bill to prohibit racial and religious discrimination in employment and to set up a fair employment practice commission. It is pigeonholed in the House Education and Labor committee, of which Powell is the third ranking Democratic member.

Society Desirable

Describing the bills as "measures right, economically sound and socially desirable," Walter Reuther, CIO president, in a letter to members of the House said that favorable action on the two proposals would "prove to the world that the United States practices as well as preaches democracy."

The latter said: "No one can condone the twin evils of discrimination and segregation with which the District of Columbia and the United States are afflicted. Nor can anyone condone denial of employment solely because of race, religion or other prejudices.

"Democracy's enemies abroad have long capitalized on this national disgrace. Daily, we provide propagandists of the Kremlin with ready ammunition to be used against us in the crucial battle for mep's minds, hearts and loyalties.

"Therefore, we sincerely urge you to sign these discharge petitions, thus bringing these vital issues to the floor of the House for debate.

The signatures of 218 of the 435 members of the House are required to a petition to discharge a committee from further consideration of a bill and bring the measure to the House for a vote.

2nd Woman Hurt In Augusta Bus Strike

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Mrs. Margaret Dunn was seriously injured by flying glass when one of two pistol bullets crashed into the rear glass window of a city bus in which she was a passenger early Tuesday afternoon.

The incident occurred as a result of a 43-day-old bus strike between drivers and the Augusta coach company, during which time several colored bus riders have been injured and frightened by the throwing of dynamite, tear gas, bricks and other slugs.

One white driver was slightly injured by a brickbat.
