New Chicago housing riots burst forth

CHICAGO — Twice within a two-day period, squads of police here have been called upon to rout mobs of more than 1,000 hoodlums, attempting to intimidate the family of a colored mail carrier for moving into a South Side housing project, which recently dropped its "white only" admission policy.

It took some 300 policemen, early Tuesday to disperse the jeering assembly, which showered bricks and bottles among the officers and at the occupants of automobiles driven by colored people in the vicinity of the scene.

Five persons were injured, none seriously, and 12 were arrested as roving bands of white teen-agers smashed windows of a neighborhood tavern which served colored patrons.

Donald Howard, the mail carrier, and his family were the first targets of the mob, the third to have broken out in or near Chicago in recent years in attempts to keep colored people limited to living ghettoes.

He encountered trouble Monday night when he moved into the Chicago Housing Authority's Trumbull Park homes project. Police roped off a three-block area around the Howard home and permitted only residents of the units to enter.

The project was built in 1938 and was one of the four designated for "white" residents only. A CHA spokesman said that Howard's application had been on file for several years and was in line with the authority's approved non-discriminatory policy.

The other two housing riots which have upset the metropolitan area of Chicago within recent years were occasioned by a mob's burning and looting the home of veteran Harvey Clark in Cicero, and the bombing of Dr. Percy Julian's new home in Lake Park, Ill.

No money makes strong language

William Green, 40, a cab driver, had the follwoing conversation with a passenger.

Passenger: "What's on your mind?

Driver: "Nothin' man, just tough.

Passenger: "What's tough?

Driver: "Can't make no money.

Passenger: Who's responsible?

Driver: "I don't know, but those damn Republicans, got a hell'va lot to do with it.

Workman ducks copra avalanche

A 40-year-old workman saved his life Wednesday, by diving for a chute seconds before 10,000 pounds of copra began falling on him.

William Andrews, 1000 block W. Franklin st. is recovering at Franklin Square hospital from shock and minor injuries received as a result of his narrow escape.

Mr. Andrews works at the Proctor and Gamble plant in Locust Point. His job is to keep the copra flowing from a large bin through a chute and onto a conveyor belt.

Wednesday, the copra flowing in the bin, got stuck. Failing to dislodge the huge mass with a stick, Andrews climbed into the bin to get a better try at the gluttonous mass.

He was kicking away at the copra stuck at the bottom of the bin when he felt the material overhead give way.

Dives For Chute

Instead following a natural instinct to climb out of the bin, Andrews dove for the chute and managed to get his head and shoulders out before the copra cascaded down.

Although he could get air in that position, it was almost 10 minutes before other workmen rescued him.

Andrews is expected to be back at work Monday, according to a plant official. The same official, refusing to divulge his name because of "company regulations," declared Andrews' job was being surveyed to determine just what safety devices could be erected.

"Was "Usual Procedure"

However the official admitted that it was the usual procedure for workmen doing that particular job to climb down into the bin without benefit of any safety devices.

"We've been burning copra for 50 years now and this was just one of those freak accidents," declared the spokesman. "The man didn't use good judgement and was in a position where he shouldn't have been."

Copra is dried coconut meat and is used in the manufacture of soap.

Veterans shun jim-crow service

Veterans of the armed forces are, to a large degree, apparently shunning both the National Guard and the Army Reserves of the Military District of Maryland until jim crow practices are suspended.

A check of some Baltimoreans discharged from the army within the past year showed none who evidenced any interest whatsoever in further service.

Former Sgt. Walter J. Field of 1225 E. Preston st., discharged last December after serving with a Port battalion in Greenland, said he would go into neither the Guard or Reserve as they are presently operated.

Prefer 'Wide Open' Unit

"I would prefer going into a wide open outfit," he said.

Carol G. Boulware, 1221 E. Federal st., formerly a sergeant with an armored unit, became a member of the Reserve when discharged last November, but had to join an all-colored Ordinance company, and has since lost interest in the outfit and quit attending meetings.

William H. Thornton of 3002 Belmont ave., an infantry sergeant when discharged in November of 1952, is an inactive Reservist who attends a GI carpentering school at night.

"I would prefer to serve in an infantry outfit," Mr. Thornton said.

Guard Ratios

The Maryland National Guard maintains 12 military categories for white Guardsmen and one, a trucking outfit, for colored. It operates 30 armories in the state for whites, and is renovating a building on Edmondson ave. for colored.

An information spokesman at Reserve headquarters in Baltimore said Thursday that there were several Reserve units "all over the state" opened to colored, but asked for time to check on the exact opportunity.

There is only one Reserve armory in operation—on Loch Raven blvd
