Seven-foot marlin in huge fish haul

BRIELLE, N.J.—A seven-foot, 13-inch marlin was included in a haul of 195 fish brought in by two boating parties over a two day span last week.

The marlin, a 53¼ pounder, was bagged by Jack Murphy Jr., a veteran of 27 years at the sport. It was his first such catch.

Mr. Murphy was a member of both parties, each of which fished well out in the Atlantic Ocean.

They were among a large number of fishing groups which reported unusually large catches for the period. The Murphy marlin was one of two caught during the big two-day haul. It was the larger.

Judge Henry Clements, white of Bluinfield, N.J., reported a catch of a 45-pounder which measured 6-feet, 9-inches.

Also in the haul brought in by the Murphy parties were 65 bluefish, 63 tuna and 31 bonitas.

With him at the time of the marlin catch were Edgar Whittaker, Clifton Gross and Dr. Louis Johnson. They trolled from the Eleanor out of the Brielle Anchorage. The haul was captained by Maurice Stisson and Roy Doakes served as first mate.

Captain was Abe Newcomer.

Tips For Anglers

CHESAPEAKE BAY — Rock, hardhead, spot

CONOWINGO DAM—Catfish

CHOPTANK (Cambridge) Bridge—Hardhead, spot

PATUXENT (Queen Ann Bridge) Perch, sunfish

OCTORARO CREEK — Rock, walleye

Best bait: for stream smallmouth bass, nothing beats helligrammite.

With the spawning season just about over the fish are beginning to find the waters around Ocean City offering bluefish in abundance.

Blues are caught by surf casting, trolling, still fishing and jigging. The fish is excellent for bait, although many anglers use artificial lures, plugs, feathers and bucktails.

The bluefish is a savage fighter and there are some who favor it as the fastest of all salt water game fish to the sport anglers shred.

You Can't Quit

Newcomers to the sport are showing an inclination to get discouraged after a few hours. Fishermen who want to take this opportunity to warn against lack of patience.

It often happens that a fisherman will work all morning and a good part of the afternoon without a bite. Then in one hour, he will have fishing that will justify every minute of his seemingly idle time.

A good tip to remember is: If you have all day to fish, fish all day.

Patience Pays Off

During the past week-end, a party took a trip to Denton, where they went to work in the Choptank River. Five members tried all morning without result. Two of the group returned to the car in disgust, went to sleep.

With an hour-and-a-half to go, this a sure clear example of the reward of patience in this particular game.
