when she referred to the quarrel which led up to the "accidental killing."

In a statement given police ten minutes after her arrest, Mrs. Pryor reportedly said that the two argued while undressing for bed Sunday evening in their apartment at 84 Steamboat Landing Rd.

Both had been drinking beer earlier in the evening.

THE STATEMENT to police added that as the argument progressed, Pryor hit her . . . "used me as a punching bag," and she grabbed a small knife from the dresser to "scare him."

When he grabbed her to take the knife, he hit his head against the bed and fell on the weapon.

Police report he was dead on arrival at nearby North Shore Hospital and that death was due to a stab wound of the heart.

Others who visited Mrs. Pryor here in jail include the Rev. Arthur Harge, pastor of St. Paul AME Zion Church; and her father, Eolis H. Jones of 205 Fleming Drive, Turner Station, Md.

HENRY O. PRYOR JR.
Slain Turner Station bridegroom buried

Honeymoon killing victim is buried

MEANTIME, FUNERAL services for the slain youth were held Wednesday afternoon at St. Matthew Methodist Church, Main St. and Avon Beach Rd., in Turner Station.

The 90-minute services were marked by piercing screams of close relatives who leaned over the casket to touch their son and brother "for the last time."

His mother, cried "Goodbye, goodbye, Henry, goodbye," when Undertaker Charles Law rolled the casket slowly past the front row where the immediate family was seated.

Dr. William Wade, Turner Station physician, who had been summoned to administer to Mrs. Pryor when the review started, was assisted by three nurses who alternately fanned her and administered a stimulant.

Mrs. Pryor has been ill for sometime with a heart condition. The stifling heat in the church, plus the shock of her son's death, had caused the family much concern for her health.

The father, Henry O. Pryor Sr., and two sisters, Mrs. Alverta Knowles, Mrs. Bernice Adams and a brother, Horace, were also seated on the front row.

The two sisters, as visibly moved as their mother, both leaned over to touch the brother in the casket. Mrs. Knowles cried, "I want to touch him . . ."

EQUALLY AS grief stricken as he walked to the front of the church to review the body was Eolis H. Jones, father of the bride.

He cried openly and was assisted to his seat by his wife and a nurse. Earlier, he had told the AFRO he was as much concerned about the feelings of the Pryor family as he was about his own feelings because they had become good friends since their children had married.

The Jones family sat in the middle section of the church along with members of the Pryor family.

Among Jones relatives present was Mrs. James Beard of Washington, mother of Mrs. Jones.

STANDING ROOM ONLY was available in tiny St. Matthew Methodist Church, Turner Station, where funeral services were held Wednesday for Henry O. Pryor Jr., who was slain by his bride of four months in their Great Neck, N.Y., honeymoon cottage. Note mourners standing in aisle.

One of the three dozen floral pieces which surrounded the casket was one sent by Mr. and Mrs. Jones.

Mourners filled every available space in the small auditorium which can comfortably seat only 125—persons. At least 50 additional persons stood in the aisles and vestibule.

Some 100 others stood or sat outside the church. Some were close to the open windows where they could hear the services. Two window fans were in use but they were not adequate to cool the 100-degree temperatures inside the church.

THE REV. J. H. CARTER, pastor of the church, officiated at the services. In his ten-minute eulogy, he said he felt so close to the family he felt he should be sitting with them, but as their pastor he felt he should comfort them. He urged the relatives to "put your trust in God—He will comfort you in the your troubles." The Pryors are longtime members of the church and the father is a church trustee.

One minute talks of sympathy were offered by the Rev. Harold Nixon, New Life Presbyterian Church; the Rev. William Jeffries, assistant pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church; the Rev. J. E. Johnson, pastor of John Wesley Methodist; and the Rev. M. H. Riddick, assistant pastor, Union Baptist Church, Sparrows Point.

THE REV. JAMES E. ADAMS, pastor of Bowen Mission Methodist Church, read the scripture.

The Rev. Mr. Adams married the newlyweds in the parsonage of his E. Preston St. home on March 7, 1955.

He formerly pastored in the Turner Station area and knew both before he married them. He remembered that they were "both mighty fine young people," Mrs. Pryor being active in Girl Scout Troop No. 539; and Mr. Pryor in Boy Scout Troop No. 270 and the Sea Scouts.

The church choir sang and there were solos by Miss Doris Norfleet and Mrs. Margaret B. Risher. Mrs. Maude Wheeler acknowledged messages of sympathy and read resolutions from the church.

Twenty six cars, led by a police escort, took the relatives and friends to Mt. Calvary Cemetery where burial was in the Pryor family plot.

PALLBEARERS carry casket of Henry O. Pryor Jr., from St. Matthew Methodist Church where funeral services for the slain Army vet were held Wednesday. His bride of four months, Regina Jones, Pryor, is being held in Nassau, N.Y. County jail in connection with his death in their honeymoon cottage in Great Neck. Both are natives of Turner Station, a small community near Baltimore. Right, front, the Rev. J. H. Carter, pastor of the church.

—Miracle plane crash

tors probed through the demolished wreckage of the C-45, at High Point, spectators lined the banks outside the Murray home in Ferndale and stared in disbelief at "the miracle" that had saved the occupants of the B-25 and the Hunters.

"Twanna and I had been to the store down the road for some soda and potato chips," little Edith told an AFRO reporter as she recalled the tragedy.

Edith continued:

"My sister and I were sitting in the living room eating potato chips and sewing. Momma was in the kitchen fixing some hot soup for lunch.

"Then there came a crash like the world was coming to an end and I screamed for momma. Twanna began to cry We ran to the door between the kitchen and the living room but it was stuck and wouldn't open.

"Momma told us to push hard and finally we got the door open and ran outside."

Mrs. Hunter said that she was standing at the stove when the crash occurred and she was knocked to the floor by the impact.

"I helped my daughters get the jammed door open and then grabbed them and ran out the back door," Mrs. Hunter said. "I don't remember touching the steps at all."

The Hunters were treated at South Baltimore General Hospital for shock.

WILLIAM MURRAY, a bod carrier, who lives at the house with his brother James, said that he was on his way home for lunch from a job up the road, when he heard and saw the B-25 crashing through trees across the road.

"I was about 150 feet from home," Mr. Murray said, when I saw it coming. I just stood and watched. The plane swerved as if the pilot was trying to miss the house."

The B-25 belly-whopped on Hammond's Ferry Rd. and then pancaked across the lawn ripping the structure of the stucco house. The right wing rammed into William Murray's bedroom and splintered. The Hunter children were in the adjoining room.

WILLIAM MURRAY said that the house is owned by him and his two brothers, James, and Kenneth, who lives with his family in the 500 block McHechen St. James Murray was at work when the mishap occurred.

William said that they helped his father, Alonzo Murray build the five-room house before he died in 1945. The brothers inherited the property when their mother died in January of this year, William said.

Asked if this was his worst experience, William replied with a smile:

"I've got four campaign ribbons from action in the South Pacivic in World War II. I saw worst things there."

Douglass Brooks, 15-year-old neighbor of the Murrays, said that he was standing on his front porch when the plane hit.

"There was nothing but dust," the youth said.

The twin-engined military planes involved in the collision that sparked the tragedy were on routine flights from Bolling Air Force Base, Washington.

A complete investigation has been ordered by the AirForce.

Detective Johnson said that the night court would enable the witnesses to testify while the criminal acts were still fresh in their minds.

ON HIS THIRD point, the detective urged greater cooperation between the home, church, school and civic organizations in combating the juvenile problem.

"With a curfew law to get the youngsters off the street; a night court to bring the delinquent to trial immediately; and civic community organizations providing proper supervision and guidance, I believe the juvenile problem can be greatly minimized," Detective Johnson concluded.

criminatory schools as expiditiously as possible:

"Although the problem of providing adequate physical facilities for the rapidly growing population is a major one, additional facilities, where needed, will be planned immediately to permit complete integration of the county schools at an early date.

"To the extent that present facilities permit integration will begin in September, 1955.

THERE ARE 23 elementary schools, one junior high school and four senior high schools affected by the change. In regard to the transportation problems, board members approved a plan to integrate transportation routes to the "extent administratively possible" beginning September 1.

The program was presented to the board by Dr. Edward J. Stapleton, superintendent of schools and secretary-treasurer of the board.

It was moved to be adopted by Dr. A. M. France and seconded by Mrs. Alexander P. Rusk, both members of the board.

The elementary schools affected are Arbutus, Back River, Baltimore Highlands, Berkshire, Chesapeake Terrace, Cockeysville, Colgate, Essex, Fifth District, Consolidated, Fort Howard, Halethrope, Loch Raven, Maiden Choice, Mars Estate, Merritt Point, Oakleigh, Rodgers Forge; Rosedale, Seventh District Consolidated, Sixth District Consolidated, Sparks, Sussex and Villa Cresta.

The junior high school is Hereford.

The four senior high schools are Catonsville, Dundalk, Hereford and Kenwood.

All these schools were previously all-white.

friend, obtained a warrent for his arrest on an assault charge.

Police said that when they took Gatewood to the Northwestern District station to answer the charge lodged by Mrs. Gwen Barber, 25, 600 block Pitcher St., they found fottery slips on him.

Judge Niles convicted "Simey" for lottery, but returned a not guilty verdict on the assault count.

"SIMEY" JOINED two old friends at the House of Correction.

They are Willie H. (Blue Top) Wynn, 300 block N. Calhoun St., and Walter L. Dew, 1600 block N. Appleton St., both of whom were formerly employed at a night club of which "Simey's" brother, Askew, is part owner.

Wynn and Dow, also convicted for lottery, began serving six-month terms each on May 31.

THEY WERE also convicted by Judge Niles who in addition to the jail terms fined the men $1,000 and costs each at a two-day trial, Oct. 28-29, 1954.

Their cases were also taken to the Court of Appeals with that court affirming the lower court's judgment on April 18.

Dow paid his fine in cash on June 1. If Wynn does not pay his before the end of his House of Correction term he will have to spend an additional three months in default of same in the City Jail.

Mother of 3 tries suicide

Takes poison as check is delayed

Despondent because a relief check did not arrive on time, a 21-year-old mother of three children tried to take her own life Monday by drinking two bottles of mercurochrome.

Mrs. Geraldine Hester, of the 1700 block E. Eager St., was admitted to Johns Hopkins Hospital after asking a neighbor to call for an ambulance.

Her husband is serving a 25-year sentence in the Pennsylvania State Prison. The three Hester children, ages 2, 3, and four months, were left in the care of a neighbor.

MRS. LILLIAN Canada, a tenant in the building where the family resides, said Mrs. Hester became extremely nervous when her relief check did not arrive on time.

Later, she received a letter asking her to report to the State's Attorney's office before seeking anymore relief.

According to Mrs. Canada, the young mother had made numerous attempts to get a job but had failed because none offered enough money to take care of her and the children.

Following an examination at Hopkins, Mrs. Hester was taken to Crownsville State Hospital.

Juvenile delinquency conference

Eleven workshops will make up the Governor's Conference on Juvenile Delinquency to be held Monday, through Wednesday at the University of Maryland.

Objectives for the workshop are:

(1) To provide practical ideas and inspiration for doing a better day to day job.

(2) To emphasize the necessity for practitioners in various fields to work closely together.

SEVERAL HUNDRED of Maryland's county, state and Baltimore City agencies; civic and religious groups; and a number of departments of the University of Maryland have organized for the three day meeting at the request of Governor Theodore R. McKeldin, to discuss the prevention and treatment of juvenile delinquency in Maryland.

The National Conference on Juvenile Delinquency held in Washington, D.C., in 1954 recommended "that state conferences on curbing delinquency be organized as early as possible to continue the work of the nationwide conference."

'Other man' helps husband get divorce

Mrs. Hannah L. Smith of 1714 Braddish Ave. took the "Other Man," went into court and obtained a divorce for her son, Edward, from Mrs. Dolores Smith, last week.

She told the court that her daughter-in-law had been unfaithful and that her son was in the Army and serving overseas.

Mrs. Smith said that her son and his former Dolores Wright were married on Jan. 15, 1953 when he was 19 and his bride, 16. Five months after the marriage, she said, her daughter-in-law left and went to Philadelphia.

Upon her return home she told her husband that she had been intimate with another man.

Mrs. Smith cited a similar trip to New York nad said that the young Mrs. Smith finally deserted entirely and went to live with her father on Robert St.

The mother-in-law produced as witness Rivo Adams of 2109 Ellamont St., who testified that Mrs. Dolores Smith had held herself out to be single, and had stayed in his apartment overnight on occasions in November, 1954 and April of this year.

HAROLD E. WARNER of 232 S. Ann St., won a divorce from Mrs. Pauline E. Warner and custody of their 4½ - year - old daughter.

He testified that he and Mrs. Warner were married on Dec. 28, 1946 and that she left him and the baby on July 4, 1953.

SEVENTY-ONE year - old Joseph Morsell found marriage a disappointment, according to his wife, Mrs. Linda J. Morsell of 1822 Druid Hill Ave., who charged him with desertion, last week.

Mrs. Morsell, who had her maiden name, Linda Josephine Pullman, restored, said that her husband deserted her in June, 1933, after telling her that things just weren't going the way he expected them to. She is 64. They were married in 1948.

HERBERT JACKSON of 1316 Argyle Ave., who divorced Mrs. Grace Jackson of 1538 Argyle Ave., this week, agreed to her having custody of their three children and to provide $25 per week for their support.

The divorce was granted on technical desertion after he testified that Mrs. Jackson, who lives at 1538 Argyle Ave., put him out of the house.

"She stayed out all night, Dec. 15, 1948, and until four next afternoon. When I asked where she had been she went upstairs, threw my clothes down the steps and told me to get out," the husband said.

William Gosnell was attorney for Mr. Jackson.

JOSEPH GAITHER, 244 N. Mount St. also testified that he was put out of his home by his wife, Mrs. Esther Gaither, and won a divorce.

The couple was married in 1925.

Mr. Gaither said he was locked from the home in Feb., 1942, but that their marriage, as such, had actually ended in 1939 when Mrs. Gaither moved out of their bedroom and into another room of the same house.

In Feb., 1942, he said, his wife had him arrested on a charge of beating her and a hearing took place in Northwestern Police Court.

His wife's testimony so disgusted him, he said, that he put on his hat and started to leave the courtroom. The magistrate sentenced him to three days in jail for contempt of court, for this.

When he returned home after the three days, Mrs. Gaither wouldn't let him in the house, he said.

Mayor calls meeting on Broadway area

As the request of Mayor D'Alesandro, the Redevelopment Commission and the City Planning Commission will meet next Wednesday with the Mayor to explain the holdup in the Broadway and Area 12 redevelopment projects.

The Mayor said Wednesday that reports of delays have reached him from several sources and to avoid any undue criticism he thinks a full discussion is in order.

The Broadway project has been the source of irritation both to Eastaldie residents who were forced to move and to store owners in the area. Because of their protests several changes have been made, in plans for the use of the 30-acre tract near Johns Hopkins University.

THE BOARD of Estimates approved the most recent changes and they are now being studied by Federal agencies.

Residents of the area, especially the Eastside Community Committee have expressed strong disapproval of the latest changes, mainly because more plans are being considered for parking space, dormitory-apartments for Hopkins students and playground facilities than for homes of the displaced persons.

More than 1,000 families, the mapority of them colored, were moved from the area so that old dwellings there could be razed. Very few of those persons will return to the area as far as the present plans are concerned.

Civil defense gains listed

Baltimore's Civil Defense setup is "100 per cent better qualified now" than it was a year ago, according to an official evaluation of the June 15 mock air attack on the city.

Civil Defense officials reported that "considerable progress" had been made in the training of staffs at various levels within the city organization, and that the actual exercise "was worthwhile and developed the abilities of the services to control a continuing situation with excellent results."

The report also noted:

"That with the changing dip-lomatic situation and the blowing hot and cold on possibilities of conflict it is difficult to maintain the interest of the public generally in Civil Defense."
