Grandmother tells of matron's life

Says she begged Mrs. Brown not to return to husband

"I begged her not to take him back, but she loved him."

That was the expression of grief-stricken Mrs. Mattie C. Heath Wednesday, four hours after funeral services had been held for her attractive granddaughter.

Mrs. Heath talked about the marriage of Adele Delores Brown while sitting in the living room of her comfortable home in the 1000 block Edmondson Ave.

SHE SPOKE of a marriage which was far from ideal and of the 23-year-old Mrs. Brown at Provident Hospital.

Tragically, it was the second death in the family in 26 days. On Aug. 17, Daniel Heath, grandfather of Mrs. Brown, died at his Edmondson Ave. home.

Held in the death of Mrs. Brown is her husband, Harold (Cookie) Brown, of the 1700 block Appleton St. now awaiting a hearing in Homicide Court.

THE POPULAR Brown, who admitted shoving his wife during an argument, was first arrested on an assault charge and following a hearing in Northwestern Police Court held in $1,000 bail.

He was re-arrested and arraigned in Central police court Monday after the death of his wife. He has been ordered held without bail pending a hearing to be set by the State's Attorney.

Brown admitted to police that he and his wife had an argument in their Appleton St. home and that after shoving her, he called a physician. The doctor ordered her taken to Provident Hospital.

THE HUSBAND called his wife's death an accident. He is now represented by Robert Watts, attorney.

Mrs. Heath almost broke into tears as she related how the body of her granddaughter was found with "so many bruises they couldn't be counted."

She said one large bruise was found on the top of Mrs. Brown's head.

BEFORE relating the facts of Mrs. Brown's death, Mrs. Heath told about her granddaughter graduating from Douglass High School and Morgan State College before taking a job as a clerk in a Pennsylvania Ave. dress shop.

"Adele and Harold had been separated since July," she stated, "and all along he had been pestering her to return home.

"She visited friends in Philadelphia just before Labor Day and on her return we had a long talk. I almost talked myself sick in trying to convince her to stay at home.

"In the end she told me: 'Grandmother, the Bible says that a wife must forsake her father and mother and cleave unto her husband. I'm going back.'"

"ON WEDNESDAY, Mrs. Heath continued, "they attended a baseball game together. When they returned home the landlady in their apartment heard a thud and went upstairs.

"She asked Harold what he was doing and told him she didn't allow fighting in her home. Nothing was heard after that.

"As far as I know Adele remained unconscious from the time she was struck on Wednesday until she was taken to the hospital.

"We tried to get in touch with her all that time but heard nothing. Someone even called on her job and was told that she hadn't shown up for work.

"When a doctor was finally summoned by Harold, Adele was taken to the hospital in an ambulance. She never said a word. She never regained consciousness.

"I don't know what could have happened. Harold comes from a nice family but—she was my granddaughter."

—o O o—

WHILE MRS. Heath talked, another relative brought out a photograph of Mrs. Brown which bore the inscription: "To Harold, the greatest man that God ever created."

Funeral services for Mrs. Brown were conducted Wednesday by Father Cedric Mills at St. James Episcopal Church. Burial was in Arbutus Cemetery.

Mrs. Brown is survived by her mother, Mrs. Laura Dennison, and step-father, James Harris.

Fireman rescues cat in Morgan Pk.

A stray cat trapped in a tree in Morgan Park for two days was rescued on Wednesday morning by a fireman from Engine Co. No. 14 at Harford Rd. and Markley Ave.

The fireman climbed the tree on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sorrell at 2503 Montebello Terrace, and brought down the cat which was later turned over to a Morgan Park resident who agreed to care for it.

A hook and ladder truck from the company was sent to the scene after the cat's plight had been reported by Mrs. Nellie Sorrell. Mr. Sorrell is the principal of the Druid Junior High School.

KINDERGARTEN PUPILS at School No. 60, Gwynns Falls Parkway and Warwick Ave., frolic on the playground equipment under the supervision of Miss Belle M. Laupheimer. Recess periods are providing a new experience in fun and fellowship for thousands of Baltimore school children this term as 52 city schools opened with mixed enrollment for the first time.

THE NEW LOOK as Baltimore pupils go to and from school these days is typified by this group homeward bound from School No. 60 Gwynns Falls Parkway and Warwick Ave. At left is Mrs. Margaret Jackson of 3213 Mondawmin Ave. with son, Craig. Daughter, Marsha, is hidden from camera. At right is Mrs. Hyman Silverman of 2302 Ashburton St. with her daughter, Myra.

LEARNING FROM BROTHER—Helpful instructions on the correct way to fly a kite are given by Joseph Jennifer, 13, of 1218 Shelbanks Rd. to his sister, Gloria, 12. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gibson. Gloria is a seventh-grade pupil, and Joseph, an eighth-grade pupil at Cherry Hill Junior High School No. 180. With her brother's assistance, Gloria was able to fly the kite.

THE TASK OF MOVING—Frank Sorrell, principal of Druid Junior High School No. 137 checks packages of books and other materials which had to be moved this term to the building at Carey and Baker Sts., formerly Douglass High School, and now designated as School No. 181.

ENJOYING A BOAT RIDE at Druid Hill Park are Elliott Smith, 20, of 2328 Whittier Ave., a Morgan State College sophomore and Sgt. Alfred C. Smith, 22, of 2039 McCulloh St. on holiday weekend leave from Camp LeJeune, N.C. In the service for four years, Sgt. Smith returned from duty in Korea in June, 1953.

SAFETY FIRST FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN—Mrs. Constance Knocket of 2305 Bryant Ave. stops traffic at Gwynns Falls Parkway and Pulaski St. while Irving Whitehead, 13, of 3024 Mondawmin Ave. crosses the intersection. He is a seventh-grade pupil at Druid Hill School. In the background is Mrs. Lillian Hall and daughter, Janice, a third-grade pupil at School No. 142. Mrs. Knocket has been a police school-crossing guard since March.

SERVING IN GERMANY—Pfc. Alvia Epps of 1402 N. Bethel St. checks spare parts of Army necessities as supply clerk in the 77th Ordnance Depot Company in Germany. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Epps, he entered the Army in December, 1952, and arrived overseas the following April.

AWAITING BUS to take her into town to attend her cousin's funeral was Mrs. Ivene Hawkins of 2801 Bookert Dr., Cherry Hill.
