Powell amendment debate bitter; victory short-lived

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Rep. A. Clayton Powell, (Dem., N.Y.) scored a great victory Tuesday when the House adopted his amendments to the Federal-aid-to-school construction bill.

Rep. Francis E. Walters, (Dem., Pa.), presiding, declared the Powell amendments carried a voice vote. A teller vote was demanded and the count was 164-116 in favor of the amendment.

Rep. Graham A. Barden, of North Carolina, chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, and an opponent of the anti-segregation amendments, and Mr. Powell were appointed tellers.

Republicans voted overwhelmingly for the Powell amendments. Rep. Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, minority leader; Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, Clarence W. Brown of Ohio, and Leo A. Allen of Illinois led Republicans in voting for the amendments.

On the other hand, Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas, voted against the amendments. Allen had voted in the Rules Committee against sending the bill to House for floor action.

A DETERMINED effort was made to defeat the anti-segregation amendments. During the debate, Rep. Richard A. Bolling, (Dem. Mo.), read a letter from former President Harry S. Truman urging defeat of the amendments.

Rep. William L. Dawson, (Dem., Ill.), chairman of the House Government Operations Committee and vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, twice spoke in opposition to the amendments.

Because Rep. James Roosevelt, (Dem., Calif.), spoke in support of the amendments, an attempt was made on the floor to smear the Roosevelt name and particularly his mother, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

The segregation fight began shortly after the House began reading the bill under the five-minute rule for amendments.

Mr. Barden offered an amendment to strike out section 401 of title I of the bill authorizing an annual appropriation of $300 million for five consecutive years.

THE BARDEN AMENDMENT would have deleted provisions for allotment of funds to the states on the basis of school-age population after the U.S. Commissioner of Education has approved state plans outlining the construction projects.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., (Dem., of N.J.) offered an amendment to the Barden amendment. His amendment would have permitted judicial review of alleged violation of "the law" instead of merely "the Act."

Speaking in support of the Thompson amendment, Powell urged defeat of the Barden amendment. He said the Barden amendment would remove the bill from all existing provisions of law, including Supreme Court school decisions.

The Barden amendment was rejected by a standing vote of 124-89. Powell offered three amendments and obtained unanimous consent for their consideration as one amendment. They provided:

1. THAT THE state plan shall provide that the free public schools of the state are open to all children without regard to race, in conformity with the Supreme Court decisions against segregated schools.

Except that if a state plan does not so provide, it shall not prevent payment of funds to any such state for use in school districts that operating their schools on a nonsegregated basis.

2. That the state plan shall state that the school district in which each project is located is operating its school without regard to race, in conformity with the court decisions, but a state plan which meets the requirements of the Commissioner of Education in every other way shall be permitted.

3. Any funds allotted, but not paid to a state because of failure to comply with the court decision, shall be paid to the state at such time as it does comply if the compliance occurs within three years after the bill is enacted.

THE ONLY GROUP that can speak for colored people is the National Conference of the NAACP, (held in San Francisco last week) Powell said, and that convention voted unanimously that any vote against the Powell amendment is a vote for segregation.

Rep. Stuyvesant Wainwright, Rep., N.Y., who was opposed to the bill, said he would vote for it if the Powell amendment was passed and the states were required to match Federal funds.

Mr. Bolling told the House he had written Mr. Truman on April 19 for his views of the Powell amendment. Mr. Truman replied on May 11 that he strongly favored Federal-aid-to-school construction legislation, and "legislation to meet it should be our primary objective."

The Missouri Congressman also pointed out that President Eisenhower had called the Powell amendment "extraneous."

REP. PETER Frelinghuysen Jr., Rep., N.J., said the Powell amendment would interfere with the judicial process, impede rather than hasten school integration, kill Federal-aid for school construction at this session;

Penalize children because of their place of birth, threaten Federal-aid-to-states in many vital areas of social and impose a degree of Federal administrative supervision over local school matters.

Mr. Roosevelt told the House that no Federal money should be spent in opposition to the Supreme Court decisions banning segregation in the public schools.

"It would be an entirely different proposition before us today if statements had not been made over and over again, and taken root to indicate, not whether some states need more time, but that they openly stated they will not conform."

Roosevelt added that as long as that was the publicly stated position of some states, he did not believe that any legislative body "has the right to give public funds to those who are in open defiance of the Supreme Court of the United States."

REP. GEORGE S. LONG, Dem., La., after one and a half minutes allotted to him to speak against the Powell amendment, made a preferential motion to strike everything in the bill after the enacting clause.

This gave him an additional five minutes. When he finished speaking, he asked unanimous consent to withdraw the motion. Dawson objected. This entitled him to five minutes.

Dawson reminisced about his birth and childhood in the South "when schools for colored kids were open a few months in the year when they did not need us in the field."

"I recite these things to you to let you know that I know something about the system, but I believe in America and I believe in her institutions, and that is why I am opposing the Powell amendment.

"A SURVEY SHOWS that hundreds of thousands of schoolrooms are needed in these United States. Those who claim the states have the ability to build them are met with the proposition that they have not done it and a national crisis now faces this nation of ours."

Dawson said education of the young "is as fundamental for the preservation of this nation as the maintenance of a standing army."

"I am of the opinion, and that opinion is based upon 14 years of experience, that if you adopt the Powell amendment to the school bill you will have no school legislation at this session of Congress."

REP. L. MENDEL RIVERS, Dem., S.C., attacked Mrs. Roosevelt in his one and a half minute speech.

"No family in the history of the nation has done as much to hurt my people than that from which he comes," Rivers said, referring to Jimmy Roosevelt. "He speaks with authority."

"Every day we see articles written by a member of his family talking about my people," Rivers said, referring to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

Following Rivers, Rep. Marguerite Stitt Church, Rep. of Ill., said she wanted to "pay tribute to a great lady with whom I seldom agree politically. I know no heart that beats harder for the children of American than Eleanor Roosevelt's."

Mrs. Church added that she could not vote against the Powell amendment and "stand consistently for those things in which I have believed — the common brotherhood of man."

REP. CHARLES C. DIGGS, Dem., Mich., said he could not see how "any reasonable or prudent person" could oppose the Powell amendment. He challenged anyone to bring forth a better approach to the desegregation of the schools.

Rep. Hugh Scott, Rep., Pa., general counsel for the Republican National Committee, said it was "shocking" to him "to hear the distinguished vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee (Dawson) argue against the Powell amendment."

Rep. Barratt O'Hara, Dem., Ill., referred to Dawson as "the real leader of 15,000,000 colored people."

Rep. Clare Hoffman, Rep., Mich., yielded his one and a half minutes of speaking time to Diggs, who said no one in the House holds Dawson in higher esteem that he, but said Dawson spoke as an individual and not the leader of colored people.

USING THE one and a half minutes of time allotted him, Dawson spoke a second time. "If I believed that this school bill would pass this Congress with this amendment, I would be for it," he said.

He added that he was "never do anything that I conscientiously believed would deprive any child of education." Even if an individual would deprive his child of an education, Dawson said, "I would still want his child to have an education."

Rep. Edith Green, Dem., Oregon, also deplored Rivers' attack upon Mrs. Roosevelt. "No family has done more for America than has the Roosevelts," she said.

Rep. Chet Holifield, Dem., Calif., a member of the House Government Operations Committee, of which Dawson is chairman, said he stood behind the girl and her mother. He said Dawson showed great courage day in bringing his case on the ball, and that ball is getting $400,000,000 a year for the school children of America."

Life sentence

PHILADELPHIA

A life sentence was imposed Monday on John Thomas White, 27, for the shotgun killing of John Coley during an argument in a North Philadelphia taproom in December 1955.

Wins freedom from mate who once 'blinded' him

George Payne, who took his wife, Mrs. Julia T. Payne back after she had thrown lye in his face and blinded him, ended the union permanently, Tuesday.

Said the husband:

"On Sept. 18, 1948, after an argument, she threw lye at me and as a result I was blinded. Later, we became reconciled and resumed our marriage.

"But in April 1949 we agreed, after other differences, to separate."

He was granted a divorce. The couple had been married on Dec. 28, 1945.

morally and legally.

He pleaded with the Congress to back the Supreme Court decision in the school cases with necessary legislation and defended his amendment as being good American democratic practices.

On the other hand the argument of Representative William L. Dawson was to the effect that we should surrender to the South.

Mr. Dawson, who apparently cherishes his position as vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee more than he does the aspirations of his constituents, talked like a politician rather than a statesman.

The Illinois congressman voiced the opinion that no law is needed to enforce the Supreme Court desegregation decisions.

The Fourteenth Amendment guarantees every citizen equality. It's clearly evident that Mr. Dawson, lawyer, has not looked at it recently.

For the Constitution says quite plainly that Congress shall (not may) have the power to enforce the Fourteenth Amendment by appropriate legislation.
