VI governor due next week
To confer with Interior officials

WASHINGTON
Walter Gordon, governor-designate of the Virgin Islands, is expected to arrive in Washington next week for a briefing at the Interior Department.

Mr. Gordon was appointed by President Eisenhower on Aug. 23 as successor to Archibald Alexander.

Mr. Alexander's resignation became effective Sept. 10. Prior to his resignation, residents of the Virgin Islands staged a demonstration in opposition to his administration.

• • • •

MR. GORDON, a Berkley, Cal., attorney, was chairman of the California State Parole Board. He was at one time coach of the football team at the University of California for many years.

According to an Interior Department spokesman, the California attorney is trying to get his business affairs in order before going to the Virgin Islands.

He will confer with Douglas McKay, Secretary of the Interior, and Anthony Lausi, director of territories.

• • •

THEY WILL discuss the problems in the islands and hear what plans Mr. Gordon has for coping with them.

Meanwhile, the AFRO was told, Mr. Alexander has remained in the Virgin Islands awaiting the arrival of the new governor.

Progress Report On Desegregation Front

As the first week of the 1955 school year ended Friday, many communities in the nation's southern and border state areas showed up as a confused patchwork of integration and segregation. A definite pattern has emerged, however, in the South. What integration there was, showed up in communities with relatively small percentages of colored population.

Although eight Southern and border states reported a total of 363 school districts with mixed classes, the overwhelming majority gave every evidence of determination to maintain their segregated systems.

At the present time, Sunday between 2 and 5 p.m. or call VAlley 3-9428.

Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina and South Carolina continued to follow courses of outright defiance and deliberate stalling instead of the court-mandated "deliberate speed."

In Maryland, the District of Columbia and Delaware, where the steps were taken toward integration prior to the Supreme Court's May desegregation order, no serious incident marked the week's school activities.

• • •

IN THE FREE STATE, seven of Maryland's eighteen counties mixed schools for the first time and hundreds of colored pupils peacefully enrolled in mixed classes.

Police rode buses with colored pupils when some Baltimore County's Hereford High. There was no incident.

What were described as "two minor trouble spots" showed up in Carroll County where approximately 100 white parents temporarily withdrew their children from schools at Westminster and Union Bridge after colored pupils were assigned to elementary schools there.

In Baltimore City where pupil integration began last June, 18 colored teachers were assigned to formerly all - white schools and began their teaching duties on Monday, No incidents reported.

District of Columbia

WASHINGTON
Discussions continued over differentials in the test scores of white and colored pupils with School Superintendent Hobart Corning announcing plans for a "close evaluation" of curricula and teaching methods throughout the system.

Last September 119 of the city's 163 schools began operation on an integrated basis. In 36 of these schools there were also integrated teaching staffs.

By November the number of integrated schools had risen to 121, with some 8,100 colored children attending schools which formerly admitted only white students and about 400 white children were attending formerly all-colored schools.

More than 90 colored teachers were assigned to formerly all-white schools and several white teachers received assignments in former colored schools.

While it is admitted that some problems developed, most of the difficulties predicted by detractors of the program failed to materialize.

Alabama

BIRMINGHAM
Federal Judge Hobart Grooms granted the University of Alabama a four month delay on admitting colored students in compliance with a court ruling, handed down in suits filed, by two women applicants.

The delay was granted pending the outcome of an appeal by the university. Arthur Shores, Lucy and Polly Ann Hudson, the plaintiffs, said that he would take the latest ruling to the U.S. Circuit Court in an effort to have it set aside.

SELMA — Alston Keith, chairman of the Dallas County White Citizens Council, claimed that at least 16 of 29 persons who signed a petition requesting integration of Selma schools have been fired from their jobs.

Mrs. Ruby Hurly, Southeastern NAACP secretary, said that the NAACP will investigate the dismissals and take whatever pressures are necessary to alleviate such pressures.

W. E. Scuggs, superintendent of Selma City Schools, said that five of the signers withdrew their signatures in the wake of the firings.

Similar economic reprisals have been visited upon integration advocates in Mississippi and South Carolina.

Kentucky

LOUISVILLE — The first suit to force integration in Kentucky public schools was filed in Bowling Green last week for a group of Adair County parents whose children now attend classes in a 4-room house.

A committee of white and colored parents recommended that the colored high school pupils be allowed to attend the Adair County High School. When they returned down by the Board of Education the NAACP decided to file suit through its attorney, James A. Crumlin.

Colored and white blind pupils were scheduled to attend classes together for the first time at the Kentucky School for the Blind when school opened Monday, Sept. 12.

The school's 16 white and three colored teachers will also be integrated.

Paul J. Langan, superintendent of the school, said he expects an enrollment of 16 colored and 135 white pupils from 80 Kentucky counties at the 113-year-old institution.

Board, room and tuition are free.

Georgia

MACON — A Macon daily suggested the holding of a "summit conference" on integration of Georgia schools.

—Invited would be five of the state's leading white and five of the leading colored educators. Not invited as participants, but permitted to attend as observers, would be representatives of the NAACP, States Rights Council and Ku Klux Klan.

Ga. Atty. Gen. Eugene H. Cook gave an official "thumbs down" on the proposal, declaring that such a meeting would be "inappropriate" and "not the scope of the Supreme Court decision."

Arkansas

HOXIE — The public schools of Hoxie, which opened in July on an integrated basis, but which closed down when a group of pro - segregationists demanded that the school board resign, remained closed.

—Herbert Brewer, the head of White America, Inc., an anti-integration group, declared that if the board persisted in trying to integrate the schools that it would have no white pupils to teach.

Louisiana

NEW OLEANS — Louisiana schools operated under a new law, passed by the 1954 legislature, under which new and transfer students must apply to local school boards for assignment.

All assignments to date have been to segregated schools.

RALEIGH — Plans for seeking the admission of colored pupils to white Raleigh schools on Tuesday were dropped last week by the Raleigh Citizens Association.

Earlier the organization had requested parents and children to put in appearance at the school nearest their homes, but decided against the idea because of "the tense climate of our local situation."

The Rev. George A. Fisher, Episcopal clergyman and chairman of the Citizens group, said that the decision does not mean that the "Raleigh community has given up the fight to carry out the Supreme Court's decision and implementation . . . a new legal attack will be used in this matter."

GUILFORD — A group of 34 white parents at Guilford, N.C. last week signed a petition urging integration of the schools in order to avoid the "inevitable bitterness of litigation."

On Tuesday, segregation proponents, armed with a petition said to bear 350 signatures, showed up with a petition which declared that "for the continued peace and betterment of our community, county and state, segregation must be continued, and we do bitterly oppose integration."

OLD FORT — Albert Joyner, who attempted to register a group of five colored children at the Old Fort Elementary School last week, was beaten and knocked into a fountain in the town's business district Saturday.

Mr. Joyner, who is employed at the Veterans Hospital at Swannanoa, was struck by a white assailant who continued to pummel him until pulled away by bystanders.

Mr. Joyner did not swear out a warrant and no arrest was made.

Police Chief Bill Autrey said that the segregation issue was not involved in the incident.

North Carolina

ROCKY MOUNT — Despite early announcement that a school advisory committee composed of parents with children in school would be set up to study Rocky Mount school integration, the three colored members named are not parents, it was pointed out this week.

Edgecombe and Nash County schools opened last week under the previous segregated pattern. "Study group" have been set up throughout Nash County to ascertain feeling on the question and a county-wide meeting is scheduled for September 19.

HIGH POINT — Dr. Murray B. Davis, High Point physician, reported by a local newspaper last week to have said that the majority of the town's colored citizens did not seek desegregation, but equality, said that he was misquoted.

Dr. Davis said: "It was my opinion that the majority of my people did not wish their children to attend schools with white but to mingle and be with white students, but rather, colored parents were interested in erasing the stigma of segregation."

That desire, he said, is for "Re-organizing of our local school system into one system and the removal of all the existing differentials between all the various schools."

Virginia

CHARLOTTESVILLE — The University of Virginia's School of Medicine will have its first Negro woman student when Anna J. Franklin begins classes here this fall.

A spokesman for the university said that six colored students will be admitted to the university this fall. Three were admitted as undergraduates by the School of Engineering.

They are the first undergraduates ever admitted to the school and were accepted because the engineering school is classified as a professional school and no equivalent courses are available at the state's colored colleges.

Of the two dozen colored students who have enrolled at the university since Gregory Swanson was admitted in 1950, only three have received degrees. Most of these enrolled have been on the graduate level in the School of Education.

South Carolina

SUMMERTON — S. Emory Rogers, Summerton attorney, said that Southern states should hire special lawyers and band together to oppose integration of schools.

He said that by following this method they could gain at least 25 years' "segregation," this by ing the length of time it would take the courts to consider all the problems involved.

"There should be unity of plan, action, and procedure throughout the states holding similar views. This will permit one plan at a time to be tested and will gain a greater overall length of time for all," he said.

Rogers argued the Clarendon (S.C.) County school case before the U.S. Supreme Court. He lost.

Texas

SAN ANTONIO—No incidents were reported by school officials last week when white students attended classes together for the first time in the third largest city in Texas.

Four colored children went to classes at the high school and an elementary school in the South San Antonio independent school district. They were the first schools in the county to open.

San Antonio is one of 64 Texas school districts which decided to integrate classes this fall.

HOUSTON — The Board of Directors of Texas Southern University voted to delay action on the admittance of white students to Texas Southern University "until further study" according to an announcement to the press by Chairman Mack H. Hannah, Jr.

George L. Allen, Dallas businessman and business college head, cast a dissenting vote on the delay.

Earlier the board had heard a report from a sub-committee of the board favoring immediate admission of all qualified applicants without regard to race, creed or color.

The committee was headed by Dr. W. R. Banks and had on it George L. Allen and Dr. H. D. Bruce. Dr. Banks and Mr. Allen voted for the admission of all qualified persons. Dr. Bruce abstained from voting. According to Mr. Mack H. Hannah, Jr., four white students had applied here.

48 county teachers get scholarships back

Forty eight county teachers who lost their out of state scholarships last May got them back this week in time to attend college this fall.

Hooper S. Miles, State Treasurer, and J. Millard Tawes, State Comptroller, sitting as the Board of Public Works in the absence of Governor McKeldin, announced the decision Tuesday.

The board had cancelled the scholarships for the 23 teachers on the grounds that by taking courses which calls for "continuous education" to remain on the scholarship roll.

The request for the reversal was submitted by the Morgan State College trustees.

In appealing to the board for the reinstatement of the teachers, Willard W. Allen, Josiah Henry, Carl Murphy and Edward N. Wilson, secretary, stated:

"The directive that they combine their work into one semester instead of two was given these teachers by the scholarship committee in order to save the state money heretofore allowed as carfare.

"If there is any deserving violation of the State Board of Public Works' policy of continuous study' it is the fault of the scholarship commission and not of the teachers themselves."

The following teachers are affected:

Pearl H. Brooks, Venzella G. Caldwell, Edith S. Clement, Sallast E. Craft, Mary E. Eaton, Pearl T. Furey, Francis W. Gates, Minnie C. Hill, Anna Q. Holmes;

Freda R. Magruder, Estelle G. Estelle B. Lee, Henry H. Lee, Mann, Mary Manne, Mary B. Miner, Mary B. Neal, Rachel G. Quander, Margaret F. Quillen;

Lorenza Y. Robinson, Ida W. Rogers, Arabella P. Rose, Irene Carter Saunders, Vivian H. Sharpe, David H. Smith, Eugene B. Turner, Elizabeth S. Williams, Elizabeth C. Wood, Charity Q. Young.
