Friedel was and is against the gas bill

An erroneous impression that Cong. Samuel N. Friedel supported an amendment to the Natural Gas Act, was cleared up this week by official documents which showed that the Maryland congressman was strongly opposed to the proposal.

The bill, H.R. 6645, to amend the act, passed the House of Representatives by a close margin, 209-203, and is now awaiting Senate action.

It was submitted to the full House by the 31-man Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of which Mr. Friedel is a member.

• • •

HERE IS where some political observers received the impression that the Maryland congressman from the 7th District was in favor of the bill which proposes to remove the control of the Federal Power Commission over the producers of natural gas — this paves the way for price increases.

When the committee voted to decided on presenting the bill to the whole House, 29 members were present.

However when the acutual vote was taken, Mr. Friedel exphibited this week, one congressman had left to great a delegation from his home state and a 14-14 deadlock developed.

• • •

MR. FRIEDEL said that he then asked for a reconsideration of the vote so that the absent congressman could cast a vote. The Maryland congressman said that the congressman who had been called from the meeting was entitled to vote.

"I had no idea as to how he would vote," Mr. Friedel stated.

Mr. Friedel's proposal was accepted and the following day the proposal to send the bill on to the full body, was again placed on the agenda. This time, the full committee was present and agreed by a scant 16-15 margin to send the bill to the House.

As he had done the day before, Mr. Friedel voted against the amendment.

• • •

THE CONGRESSIONAL Record shows that Mr. Friedel signed a minority report opposing the bill and voted against the amendment when it was considered by the full House.

The Record also reveals that on July 28, Mr. Friedel made a speech before the House in which he "strongly urged" that the bill be defeated.

Political observers, who did not check the Record, assumed that Mr. Friedel's request for a reconsideration of the vote when the amendment was deadlocked in the committee meeting indicated that the Maryland congressman favored the bill.

• • •

THE AMENDMENT, which removes FPC control, would pave the way for producers of natural gas to hike their prices to pipeline companies.

The bill could result in the pipeline companies increasing the price to distributors, who in turn could raise the cost to the public.

Expectant mother says she quits

Too hurt to cry about wrecked home

A 33-year-old housewife, who for the past nine years has gone out of her way to make a happy married life for her husband, threw her hands up in despair this week.

Too hurt to cry, Mrs. Fay Taylor, who is expecting her first child any day now, looked at the ruins in her tiny three-room apartment at 1043 W. Mulberry St.

Strewn from one end of the place to the other were the furniture and clothing . . . the work of Mrs. Taylor's irate husband.

The angered spouse, Sam Taylor, 29, was convicted of disorderly conduct by Magistrate Howard Aaron, in Southwestern Police Court, Tuesday morning, and given the maximum fine of $25 and costs.

He is serving time in jail, however, because he failed to pay the fine.

• • •

MRS. TAYLOR, who has known only two weeks of wedded bliss since her marriage, contends that the damage resulted from an argument earlier in the evening.

"I hadn't seen him for two weeks when he came to the apartment, Monday," she began. "He frightened me so, I went to my father's home.

"Neighbors were awakened at 2 a.m., Tuesday, by the racket from the destruction and called police. Mrs. Taylor, who spent the night with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Robinson at 1012 W. Mulberry St., did not learn of the incident until 7 a.m.

The heart-broken wife stood quietly in the bedroom and picked up a piece of broken wood which lay on a pile of shredded clothing. It was part of the baby crib which she had purchased only two weeks ago.

One side of the crib was bashed in, causing the entire structure to sag in the middle. The baby clothing which had once been neatly folded in the cupboard at the head of the crib, was scattered in torn bits throughout the room.

• • •

MRS. TAYLOR poked at one of the baby blankets on the floor with the piece of wood. "Once," she began slowly, "Once he told me he wanted a family."

She smiled as she recalled the first two weeks of her marriage in May, 1946. "He was so nice and we were so happy," she mused. "We were going to have a home and raise a family. That's all he talked about. We didn't have much then, but we were happy."

At that time Taylor was in the service and scheduled to be discharged in December, 1946. However, he re-enlisted without informing his wife and later was involved in a highway robbery case in Seattle, Wash.

It was five years before Mrs. Taylor saw her husband in person again. And then, he didn't really belong to her. He had been released on parole by the state of Washington in her custody. One slip-up and back he could go.

Overlooking the circumstances involved in keeping a parolee, Mrs. Taylor immediately rented the apartment and furnished it completely using the money she had saved while working at a restaurant.

"He was coming home and I wanted everything to be nice for him. I wanted to forget everything and get a fresh start," Mrs. Taylor said.

• • •

BUT THE young, happy-go-lucky husband she had known years ago had changed to a cynical, hardened man who carried a chip on his shoulders.

He took to drinking and began beating her. Finally, when the blows were more than she could bear, she had him arrested and he was returned to Washington for breaking his parole.

Early this year, he came home again. Mrs. Taylor had continued to work and save money. To surprise him, she had redecorated the tiny apartment herself, including the wall papering.

"I thought maybe this time we could work things out," she said.

But they didn't. She went through three nightmarish months of scraps and arguments. Then when she told him she was expecting a baby, he flared up and left her.

He returned off and on to get money, she said and once when she asked him to pay the gas and electric bill he had both cut off. Her condition forced her to quit work and Mrs. Taylor finally had to resort to help from her family.

• • •

MONDAY NIGHT he awakened her from a sound sleep. She hadn't seen him in two weeks. "I had begged him several times to give me back the keys to the apartment since he didn't want to live there, but he never did," she said.

Mrs. Taylor said she left immediately after the argument. According to reports, the enraged husband returned shortly after Mrs. Taylor had gone.

From the looks of the holes in the furniture, the broken lamps, mirrors, tables, bed, refrigerator, washing machine and battered venetian blinds, it is believed he used a hammer.

The kitchen was so cluttered with broken glass that it was impossible to walk in the room. Everything in the refrigerator and cupboards had been ripped out and smashed on the floor.

A mass of broken furniture was strewn throughout the living room. A maternity dress, which hung on the back of a door was slashed to bits.

• • •

THE HEAD board on the double-bed was ripped off and the dressing table and bureau demolished and the linoleum on the floors had been ripped up.

"He didn't leave a thing untured," Mrs. Taylor said as she turned her back on the debris, and left the apartment.

"I guess this is it," she muttered. "It's all over."

Teenager charges assault; accused, 35, gets one year

A 35-year-old man, who admitted that he placed his hands on a 12-year-old girl while visiting at her home in the 1700 block Poplar Grove St., was sentenced to one year in the House of Correction Tuesday.

Harry Lewis of the 2800 block Walbrook Ave., told Magistrate Linwood Koger Sr. that he would file an immediate appeal.

Mr. Lewis also admitted that he brought whiskey miniatures to the house for the girl's parents, but denied that he served her a drink while her mother and father were sleeping.

A medical report introduced at the hearing indicated that the teenage girl had been assaulted.

20-year friendship ends over watch

A 20-year "friendship" between Lewis Byrdsong, 57, of the 900 block Shuter St., and Miss Leola McCarty ended Sunday over the loss of a wrist watch.

At a hearing in Northeastern Police Court, Monday, Mr. Byrdsong testified that Miss McCarty cut him with a can opener when he told her he did not know where her watch was.

"In self defense" he admitted, he cut Miss McCarty with a bottle.

Following the altercation, Mr. Byrdsong continued, Wallace McCarty, 19, a relative, came to his home, started an argument, and struck him with a garbage pail.

Magistrate Simon Schonfield fined all three persons $25 and costs.

'Love crazed' man still eludes capture as victim recovers

Merrill Roosevelt Roy, 1100 block Linden Ave., who was shot wounded by a shotgun blast July-30, has been transfered from City Hospital to the Howard Hospital where he is reported in a satisfactory condition.

The World War "veteran was wounded in the thigh and leg by a man described as a "love crazed gunman." Mr. Roy and three other innocent bystanders were injured.

The assailant escaped and is still at large, though a warrant has been obtained for his arrest.

Accident injuries fatal to man, 35

John Watters, 35, of Lakeland, died Monday night in Montgomery County Hospital from injuries suffered Saturday in a two-car collision on Route 196.

Watters suffered a fractured skull in the accident.

Adults May Enroll In Over 300 Courses

(This is the first in a series of articles on adult education in Baltimore. Another article will be published next Friday on the school page.)

Since the end of World War II, the United States has seen a tremendous growth of interest in education on the part of adults.

Every year increasing numbers of men and women enroll in the adult education divisions of public schools, in colleges and universities, in courses conducted by the YMCA and similar groups, in extension studies, and in study groups.

Their interests run the gamut from the traditional subjects such as English and mathematics, to such fields as child care, jewelry making and ceramics.

• • •

EVERYWHERE PEOPLE are studying. This year 25,000 American adults are taking some type of organized course of study in their spare time, according to Malcolm S. Knowles, administrative co-ordinator of the Adult Education Association of the U.S.A. in Chicago.

In Baltimore alone it is expected that 27,000 students will be enrolled this year in the 31 evening schools located in every part of the city.

This is in addition to the adults who will enroll in the evening classes of colleges and universities, private schools and other agencies.

• • •

SOME OF THE students are motivated by a desire to learn new occupations or to increase their knowledge of their present occupation in order to command more attractive salaries and better positions in the labor market.

With the increasing demand for trained workers in business and industry, educational experts agree that many adults may find the key to the future in a classroom.

In Baltimore as an example, many attractive jobs go begging because prospective employers can not find qualified personnel and yet an interested adult would have no trouble in becoming qualified for a better job by merely enrolling in one of the free courses offered by the public schools.

• • •

SOME OF THE students, who do enroll, are prompted by a desire to improve their educational background for business or some other purpose, while some find that education helps fill their leisure hours pleasantly and constructively.

Whatever the reason, the public schools of Baltimore offer to the adult resident one of the most comprehensive and best programs of adult education in the country - and at no cost.

There are courses in stenography, typing, mechanical drawing, air conditioning, printing, Spanish — in fact there are more than 300 courses available.

• • •

THE BALTIMORE Public Evening Schools will open Oct. 3, and registration will be held Wednesday, Sept. 28, and Thursday, Sept. 29, at the schools offering evening classes.

The non-segregation policy adopted last year also applies to the evening schools, and has resulted in the opening up of new opportunities for all the men and women of the city.

Every effort has been made to plan courses that will meet the needs of the business; offer additional help to those seeking high school diplomas, help improve men and women now employed in business and industry; and serve the the increasing number of citizens desiring noncredit courses for self - improvement and profit.

• • •

AS IN PREVIOUS years a complete roster of courses in elementary, junior and senior high school subjects, vocational, Americanization, and parent education areas will be offered.

Special courses have also been organized in the field of apprenticeship training, arts and crafts, distributive education (retailing and small business) and supervisory training.

Classes will operate 7:30 to 9:30 and 8 to 10 p.m. There will also be many trade training courses offered on a full time and part-time basis during the day.

All classes are free to residents of Baltimore City. (Small shop or laboratory fees charged where necessary.) Non resident students are charged a small nominal tuition fee.

• • •

ADDITIONAL COURSES may be offered upon the request of 25 or more residents provided a qualified teacher and suitable classroom, shop, or laboratory are available.

A completely new brochure on "Adult Education" is now available through the Division of Adult Education. Copies may be obtained by calling, writing, or stopping at 2418 St. Paul St., HO. 7-4000.

The publication presents the offerings for 1955-56 in addition to other valuable information.

The new Mergenthaler Vocational - Technical Evening High School will begin its third year as one of Baltimore's outstanding Adult Training Centers on October 3.

• • •

THE NEW Carver Vocational - Technical Evening School, located at Bentalou and Pressman Sts., will be open to adults for the first time this year.

This beautiful new building and its modern facilities will offer many new opportunities for all adults interested in trade training.

These two new schools will offer more than 50 special trade courses including such courses as:

Acetylene welding, air conditioning, airplane mechanics, architectural drawing, auto mechanics, baking, barbering, bricklaying and trowel trades, business education, cabinet making, carpentry, combination welding, commercial art.

Cosmetology, dressmaking, dry cleaning, electric welding, electric wiring, electronics, engineering, floriculture — green house, Food preparation service, general woodwork, machine shop, oil burner service, painting, decorating, power machines, practical nursing, printing, radio, reading Adult Training Centers' on refrigeration, shoe repairing, sign painting, tailoring, television, etc.

• • •

A NEW SERIES of courses for supervisors and top management is being offered at the Administration Building, Department of Education, 3 East 25th St.

Included among these new opportunities will be Industrial Safety, Effective Speech for management, Speed Reading, and Conference Leadership Training.

Special classes for the foreign born adults, Americanization classes, citizenship classes and a new class for foreign born children will be opened by the Division of Adult Education on October 24.

Dr. Katherine Whiteside Taylor, supervisor of parent education, estimates that more than 100 classes for parents will begin on October 3.

Special courses have been planned for parents of pre-school children and courses preparing parents for participation in cooperative nursery schools have also been scheduled in addition to guided observation groups.

Evening classes listed

Here are listed the locations of the Evening School registration centers. In addition to the regular registration, adult guidance and counseling services are also provided at each school.

For further information on night schools, call the new phone number of the Department of Education, HO. 7-4000, Ext. 707, Division of Adult Education at anytime during the day or night.

8 in state schools

Integration is working smoothly in two of the state's five teachers colleges.

Frostburg and Towson are the two formerly all - white schools with colored pupils. Salisbury does not have any colored pupils enrolled, while the two formerly all - colored schools, Coppin and Bowie, do not have any white pupils enrolled.

There is one freshman enrolled at Frostburg, and officials are expecting to enroll another student who has already graduated from Howard University and desires to take additional work to become qualified as a teacher.

R. BOWEN HARDESTY, president of the school, reported Thursday that integration at Frostburg is proceeding "very smoothly."

There are two freshmen and one sophomore enrolled at Towson in addition to three college graduates who are taking qualification courses. The sophomore student is a transfer student, according to Dr. Rebecca Pansil, director of admissions.

Dr. Pansil also reported that integration is working successfully at the school.

Salisbury said that it had no colored students to apply for admission, while Bowie and Coppin reported that they had no white students to apply.

Segregation at the state colleges ended early his year. None of the students enrolled were reported to be living on the campus.

COUNTY DESEGREGATION—The schools in Prince Georges County opened last week on an integrated basis that found teachers and pupils happy about it all. At Carole Highland Elementary School, the children were transferred from the dilapidated Ritchie Elementary School in Montgomery County. Mrs. Phyllis Frye is the reading instructor. Victor Weaver and Marvin Rosier are among the transfer pupils in her class. In the center panel — A typical scene in the cafeteria of Beltsville Elementary School where Reginald W. Gibson and Beverly Ross are among the 30 pupils transferred from a substandard school. Miss Pearl Hart, principal, said that the children will get along fine "if they will just leave us alone." In the right panel — Prestine McNeal is the teacher.

Twelve teachers join Morgan staff

Former NYU faculty member named in history department

Twelve new teachers, including a former New York University instructor, were welcomed last Friday as Morgan State College launched its 89th academic year with a three-day faculty institute.

Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, president, opening the new session at an all-college meeting, announced the faculty total at 120, a five-man increase over last year's total of 115.

A total of 151 staff members places the combined faculty staff strength at 271.

In addition to the regular faculty, nine part-time lecturers have been appointed for the regular day sessions of the college.

• • •

THE FORMER New York University faculty member is Dr. Armin E. Mruck, who has been appointed assistant professor of history. Dr. Mruck is a graduate of the Wilhelm Gym. Gymnasium in Osterode, Germany, and holds the degrees of Staatsexamen and Ph.D. from Goettingen Universitaet.

Other new faculty members are:

Marcus Allen, formerly a teacher at the Bates High School, Annapolis, who has been appointed instructor in modern languages. Mr. Allen holds the A.B. degree from the University of Pittsburgh and the M.A. degree from Columbia University and has taught at the Tyrone de Garcons in Tournon, France.

Mrs. Fannie Chester Alston has been appointed substitute instructor in English. Mrs. Alston holds the A.B. degree from Morgan State College and the A.M. degree from Pennsylvania State University which she attended last year on a fellowship. She is a 1954 honor graduate of Morgan.

• • •

CORNELIUS B. Baytop, formerly instructor at Hampton Institute, who has been appointed instructor in mathematics. Mr. Baytop holds the B.S. and M.S. degrees from Howard University.

Earl O. Embree, formerly mathematician at the Ballistic Research Laboratories, Aberdeen Proving Grounds, who has been appointed substitute instructor in mathematics. Mr. Embree received the B.S. degree from Morgan State College and the M.S. degree from the University of Illinois.

Dr. Robert Lisle, who has been appointed assistant professor of English. Dr. Lisle holds the A.B. degree from Harvard University where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and the A.M. and the Ph.D. degrees from the Johns Hopkins University. He served last year as a part-time instructor in the department of history at Morgan.

• • •

MRS. EUGENIA Williams Collier, substitute instructor in English. Mrs. Collier received the A.B. degree from Howard University, and the M.A. degree from Columbia University. She has been employed at the Department of Public Welfare here.

Jane E. Enty, instructor in home economics. A former instructor at Savannah State College, Miss Enty received the B.S. and M.S. degrees from Howard University.

Lorraine T. Manigault, substitute instructor in physics. Miss Manigault holds the B.S. degree from Morgan State College and taught last year at the Cardozo High School in Washington, D.C.

• • •

M. SYLVESTER Ryan, instructor in English. Mr. Ryan, formerly a teacher at Howard University and Alabama State College, holds the B.S. degree from Howard University and the A.M. degree from that institution. He also holds the A.M.T. degree from Harvard University.

Carolyn Hill Stewart, substitute instructor in English. Mrs. Stewart holds the A.B. degree from West Virginia State College and the A.M. degree from the State University of Iowa. She has studied also at the Jarvis Repertory Theatre and School and has acted as director of drama at West Virginia State; Charles C. Stewart, instructor in economics and business. Mr. Stewart holds the B.S. degree from Southern University and the M.B.A. degree from New York University. He was formerly professor and head of the department of economics and business at Wilberforce University.

Appointed as part-time lecturers were:

Ellis Ash, director of management, Housing Authority of Baltimore City; Mrs. Adah K. Jenkins; Bernard B. Lobe; Donald T. Ridley; and Harry B. Weiss, chief of tenancy and relocation section, Housing Authority of Baltimore City.

Morgan to offer evening courses

New 'college in the evening' will open doors on Sept. 26

A group of 13 special lecturers will team up with regular Morgan State College faculty members in presenting courses in the institution's new "College in the Evening" program which opens Monday, Sept. 26.

Arthur C. Banks Jr., assistant dean of the college and director of evening studies, has announced that the program will offer during the first semester two courses in 12 areas of study with special courses in education.

The program marks the first attempt of the college to enrich the evening school program so as to enable students to receive the bachelor's degree through combined evening and summer study. All courses will be held on the campus.

REGISTRATION will be held Sept. 21-23, from 6 to 8 p.m. in Room 100, Holmes Hall.

The program is especially designed to accommodate high school graduates, who are unable to attend regular day sessions, in-service, teachers and others connected with the state and city school systems, and adults, who desire to study for self-improvement and for the pure pleasure derived from such study.

Courses will be offered in economics, English, geography, history, humanities, mathematics, philosophy, political science, psychology, sociology, speech and education.

SPECIAL LECTURERS will include Lloyd Davis, A.M., Housing Authority of Baltimore; Mrs. Evelyn Z. Hightower, A.B., Baltimore City school system; Sherman S. Merrill, A.M., the Johns Hopkins University; Mrs. Dorothy H. Ward, A.M., Baltimore City Schools; Harry Bard, D. Ed assistant director, secondary curriculum, Baltimore City schools; Rabbi Samuel W. Glasner, D. Ed., director, Department of Reform Jewish Education, Baltimore; Emanual Averbarch, A.M., the Johns Hopkins University.

Also, Parren J. Mitchell, A.M., probation officer, Supreme Bench of Baltimore City; Miss Olive A. Whildin, Ph.D., supervisor of special education, Baltimore City schools; Marshall Payne, counselor, Morgan State College.

Miss Evelyn R. Girardin, A.M., principal, Montebello Elementary Demonstration School, Baltimore City Schools; Mrs. Sarah I. Mann, A.M., supervisor of special education, Baltimore City Schools; and Miss Dorothy M. Duval, A.M., principal, Woodbourne Junior High School, Baltimore.

• • •

One goes to hospital; one to station in neighborhood fracas

An argument between two neighbors on Tuesday night sent one to the hospital with a stab wound of the chest and the other to the Northwestern Police Station on an assault charge.

Charles Turner, 66, 1900 block Riggs Ave, is being held by police pending the recovery of Gus Byrd, 66, also of the 1900 block Riggs Ave.

Police said the two men became involved in an argument at Byrd's home. They also reported that Byrd was stabbed with a pen knife and is being treated at University Hospital.
