Dies talking on telephone

WASHINGTON
While talking on the telephone at 7:15 a.m. last Saturday at 1326 New Jersey Ave., NW, Mrs. Dora Williams, 67, of that address collapsed and died within 30 minutes.
Dr. O. Ersey of Casualty Hospital, who responded to the call for an ambulance, pronounced Mrs. Williams dead at 7:50 p.m.
The elderly woman was found lying on her back at the head of the stairs on the second floor of her home, by her daughter, Miss Mabel Williams.
Mrs. Williams had been suffering from severe abdomen pains, but had refused to go to a doctor for treatment, Homicide detectives said.
The body was turned over to the Horton Funeral Home, 1322 U St., NW, for burial.

Sitter takes tots on all-night tour

A-BOMB VICTIM — Eugene Griffin, seaman who was exposed to atom bomb radiation at the Eniwetok atoll tests in 1946, died last week at the Newton D. Baker Veterans Hospital, Martinsburg, W. Va., of sarcoidosis. Navy Department officials are checking their records to ascertain if he is the first American to have been the victim of atomic radiation.

NEW YORK — Baby - sitter Mrs. Mildred Smith — a 53-year old mother of an Air Force sergeant — calmly took her two charges, white, Rochelle, 4 and Allen 1, on an all-night social tour.
Police who had been looking for the children for 12 hours, caught up with Mrs. Smith the next morning at a restaurant.

Professors Blast Dailies
Evening Star reporters accused of 'slanting' survey articles

WASHINGTON
Dr. Harry J. Walker, professor of sociology at Howard University, told the AFRO this week that newspaper accounts of a joint paper that he and Dr. Robert T. Bower presented last week before the American Sociological Society were "greatly distorted."
Particular reference was made to the Washington Evening Star.
Dr. Walker complained that reporters in writing about the joint paper on the Merger of the White and Negro School Systems of Washington, D.C. reported portions of the survey as a conclusion, rather than as a hypothetical question to be a subject of a survey.
A daily paper account of the sociologists saw certain problems arising out of desegregation.
DR. WALKER showed the AFRO a copy of his report in which it was stated:
The merger of white and colored school systems in the District of Columbia raises a number of problems for sociological research.
Suggested areas for research are the effect of desegregation on the movement of the white population; the impact of school desegregation on other community institutions;
The adjustment of white and colored teachers in racially mixed schools; the adjustment of colored pupils in desegregated schools; the adjustment of white and colored pupils to the racially integrated school system.
* * *
DR. WALKER explained that many of the problems raised by the questions would be studied this fall by Dr. Bower, director of the bureau of social research at American University and Dr. Walker.
The study has been made possible by a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health.
* * *
THE FIRST of the two papers dealt with the early impacts of desegregation in the District.
It reported on findings of a survey based on a small sample of students involved in the strike which occurred last October as a protest against desegregation.
The first phase of the report concluded that nothing specific seemed to have started the strike, that students participated mostly because other students were in it.
* * *
THE SECOND phase of the first paper reported that a survey of attitudes of citizens towards desegregation indicated:
"The people of Washington do not, by and large, condone students demonstrations, and they are able to see, by and large, that integration is going well.
"Their attitudes on race relations have come up against other basic values, a respect for law and democratic institutions," the report concluded.

DR. WALKER said the angled accounts of the second joint
