Coppin explores new study areas

In an attempt to better meet the needs of the freshman class and other students, Coppin Teachers College has announced several new areas where greater emphasis will be placed during the coming school year.

An entirely new course will be that of kindergarten-primary education. Prior to this year Coppin graduates have been assigned to teach in the kindergarten classes in the city with no special training in this area.

To meet this need, the college is offering a special program. Miss Ruth Outlaw, who studied at the Child Development Center, University of Chicago, will be in charge of this phase of the work.

• • •

MEMBERS OF the junior class who select kindergarten—work will be able to study and do practice teaching.

In the area of counseling, Mrs. Louise Perrin will serve as coordinator, and help to develop a counseling service for all students in the college.

This program will use as its basis the test results obtained at the beginning of the freshman year, and those given at the end of the sophomore year.

• • •

TO HELP carry out the above program, Dr. Clarence Fields, director of the reading clinic and instructor in psychology, will be responsible for carrying on a program of orientation with the freshmen.

This program will include a six week period for each student of the group, with special emphasis will be given to subject difficulties of each, and remedial work will be recommended in each of the areas where needed.

A new course - "The History and Geography of Maryland" will be offered to seniors. In addition to the course - "Community Organization" will be offered.

These courses are being offered to give the student a better understanding of life in the City of Baltimore, and the State of Maryland, areas that are now being emphasized in the Baltimore City System.

Coppin expects to set record

Coppin State Teachers College is expecting the largest enrollment in its history with an estimated 300 students scheduled to be on hand when school opens Sept. 12.

A total of 89 freshman students and 13 fifth year students have enrolled. In addition, 57 seniors, 43 juniors, and 79 sophomores are listed.

Because of the limited facilities at the college, approximately 100 applications were rejected. As a result, the present freshman class is not as large as that of last year.

Dorothy Connor, president, has expressed hope that before registration for the 1956-57 term, the construction of new facilities will be underway to help meet the needs of students seeking admission to the college.

THE READING HOUR—Mrs. Harriett W. Tipton is the story teller for this second grade class at the Columbus Elementary School No. 99, North Ave. and Washington St. The school has one of the largest mixed enrollments in the city. Dr. Mary S. Braun is the principal.

TEACHING GOES ON—Here at Elementary School No. 131, Mrs. Margaret D. Finch, instructs a group of youngsters in one of the oldest schools still being used in the city. Heat for the nine classrooms come from stoves such as the one shown above. The school has 200 pupils in opportunity and ungraded classes. John M. Wood is vice principal in charge of school.

TOMORROW'S TEACHERS—Shown on the steps of Coppin Teachers College are these members of the freshman class and several advanced students who were given a college placement test at the school last week. A total of 300 students is expected at the school. This includes 89 freshmen, 57 seniors, 58 juniors, 79 sophomores, and 13 fifth-year students. Because of limited facilities, approximately 100 applications were rejected. Classes start Sept. 19.

Most eye accidents will never take place with a little caution

An estimated 1,800 children in Maryland are likely to suffer accidental eye injuries this year, Dr. Franklin M. Foote warned today, in a special bulletin issued as part of the nationwide observance of "Sight-Saving Month."

Dr. Foote, executive director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, said that although more than 90 per cent of eye accidents among children are preventable, many of the 1,800 will be "handicapped for the rest of their lives by permanently damaged vision."

"Playing with blindness" in the form of BB-guns, slingshots, and bows-and-arrows accounts for 17 per cent of the more serious mishaps, he said as he called upon parents throughout the State to save their children from needless eye injuries.

Older children can help child's first school day

"Who ever invented a holiday to celebrate going back to school?" the boy groaned. To him, Labor Day meant the end of vacation, not a tribute to the working people of the nation.

Fortunately, the groans are rarely from the heart. It's chiefly a matter of fashion. Many are really glad to be getting back to school. If only they didn't have to hide it like a guilty secret!

This attitude can be the cause of much reluctance, even fear, on the part of young children entering school for the first time.

They're led to expect nothing less than a fire breathing dragon for "teacher" and a workload that couldn't be borne by an elephant.

• • •

THE FIRST school days mean tremendous changes in a child's life. He has to get up, dress, eat his breakfast, and cover a distance to school in a certain space of time.

He can't stop to dream or listen to a bird or watch the carpenters building a new house along the way.

He meets a group of strange children in a strange place where he must stay whether he likes it or not.

He sees new things in a certain way at a certain time, depending only — as far as he can see —on the "teacher's" whim.

It's hard enough, but worse if older children have frightened him in advance.

• • •

GETTING THE full cooperation of older children in the family and in the neighborhood is an important part of getting Junior ready for school. It appealed to on the basis of their superior age and experience they will usually be glad to help. They can talk about school in a way which will make him look forward to it with pleasure.

They can take him to the school for prevue visits, so that on opening day the trip and the building itself will not have the terrors of unfamiliarity.

And, on that opening day, there will be nothing so comforting to him as the warm hand of an older friend, or brother or sister leading him into the classroom and the reassuring words, "I'll be just across the hall."

Dot's Nook

To Gloria Lockerman

If I mispell psychology
I offer my apology.
For though I try my best, you see
I'd hardly win a spelling bee.
If I could spell chrysanthemum
It would aid my spelling some,
And maybe I'd find it necessary
To lug a heavy dictionary.
When someone says, "spell something big"
I think it elegant,
To pause with mischief in my eyes
And spell them elephant.
I more than often add an S
My spelling is a nuisance, I guess;
But I am like the cheering crowd
You've made me very, very proud.
And though my spelling isn't great
I guess I'll just assimilate,
And study through the medium
Of a new encyclopedium.

• • •

But laying every joke aside
You make my chest stick out in pride;
So please accept this dedication
And lots of luck with your education.

THE COLUMNIST would like to say congratulations to Charles "Hoppy" Adams for his elevation to regional salesman at WANN where he has been employed for almost five years.

Hoppy was the first colored staff announcer employed by the station, back in 1951 and has paved the way for others as there are three announcers and two top flight engineers.

Bill Williams of Baltimore was the first engineer hired in March of 1950. Hoppy, in addition to handling his radio programs, can see his duties carry him to the District of Columbia, the Eastern Shore, Maryland and Delaware.

ONCE AGAIN the County Commissioner spiked approval of a Board of Education request to sell $400,000 in construction bonds last week, demanding extra information to the cost of operating school programs.

This was the second time the proposed bond sale has been turend down despite Dr. David Jenkins having submitted individual figures that the population of the County has swelled considerably in ten years.

This means two of the colored elementary schools in the county, Parole and Stanton, will have to wait for additions to their schools

THE GRAND family excursion given annually by members of the Masonic Temple Lodge, was held Wednesday on the S.S. Bay Belle. Calvin Wilson provided the musical entertainment.

Charles T. Duncan of Arundel-on-the-Bay was among the new Countians to pass the State Bar examination for July.

Autumn is heading this way and that means Annapolitans, as well as the rest of the country will have their nails set on football for the next three months.

Already amateurs and small fry are hauling out their equipment for the oncoming football season, with the Annapolis Athletic Association leading the pace since they have started a gridiron clinic for all boys of various ages.

The clinics consist of fundamentals of the game, the rules and how the game of football should be played.

WITH BATES High School, the only colored team in this area, fans are still doubtful about whether the Capital City A's C's will continue operation this year. Since the pride of the Washington Conference, the Annapolitans only played one encounter last year, but sports fans would like to enjoy the return of their hero.

Fairness, approachability and friendliness were few of the subjects stressed of good teaching by first grader preceptor Mrs. Josephia Morselle in the two-day institute for faculty members of the Parole elementary school.

Second grade teacher Miss Marita Carroll discussed the purpose of the institute following a short greeting by Walter Mills, the school's principal.

Others having important roles in the program, its first of the year, were Miss Mary Isaacs, Mrs. Mary Queen, and Miss Jean Queen.
