GLORIA'S DAD—Joseph Lockerman of Darby Township, Pa., father of Gloria Lockerman, the 12-year-old spelling wizard, says he's not sure whether she should take the $16,000 or try the $32,000 word on next Tuesday's CBS-TV show, "$64,000 Question."

Gloria's dad is undecided

Not sure she should go ahead

PHILADELPHIA—Should Gloria Lockerman take the $16,000, she has already won on a television show or try for $32,000?

Her father, Joseph Lockerman, Navy Yard employee, who resides in nearby Darby Township, told the AFRO on Wednesday:

"I'm just about on the fence right now. I think she should continue so long as she is selling along without hesitancy. But the fact that there was hesitancy Tuesday night makes you stop and think. I'm still thinking, so I'd rather not commit myself on that point."

When asked if Gloria had gotten her intelligence from him, he declared:

"GLORIA'S SUCCESS is due to her own ability, talent and intelligence with the proper guidance of her grandparents who have raised her since she was an infant. Her mother also helped mold her character.

"I do not know where she got that dynamic personality. Her mother is active and I am rather retiring."

Asked how smart he was in school he replied:

"I must admit that I had no trouble at all sailing through school when I was Gloria's age, nor as long as I was doing graduate work. But I ran into a slowing down period when I began my graduate studies."

Mr. Lockerman is a native of Centreville, Md. He is a graduate of Maryland State College at Princess Anne, Md. and now a graduate student at Temple University.

He is a member of the Omega Psi Phi fraternity and has lived in Pennsylvania for five years.

—Gloria ponders

the program would be seen "live" in her hometown because a local firm (National Brewing Co.) had relinquished a half hour of its wrestling show.

Although Mrs. Key said Gloria had not been excited but had remained calm during the busy week, the youngster appeared nervous for the first time to persons who have watched her ever since she began her spelling career last April when she took the state spelling championship.

GLORIA SEEMED to pale a bit but quickly put her hands over her eyes and composed herself when she was given the difficult words to spell.

The difficult sentence was:

"The belligerent antignatic anthropologist annihilated innumerable chrysanthemums."

Before Gloria started to spell, she turned to Announcer March and said: "One question, please, the last word 'chrysanthemum', is it singular or plural?"

The studio audience, like homevlewers who have followed Gloria, were tipped off right then that she knew how to spell the words. They laughed heartily at her question.

The announcer said, "I'll take it either singular or plural. Without hesitating, Gloria proceeded to spell correctly the seven-word sentence.

WHEN SHE finished, Announcer March commented: "I don't know how long I'll last."

The studio audience gave her resounding applause. There were even some cheers but as there were last Tuesday when Gloria breezed through a 28 - letter breathtaker — "antidisestablishmentarian," to win $8,000.

On behalf of Revlon, sponsors of the program, Announcer March presented Gloria with a volume of Webster's New International Dictionary, engraved with her name. He said, "The plot (of this book) is very bad, but it's good spelling."

He suggested that if she should decide to try the $32,000 word next week, the dictionary might be helpful.

Revlon has already indicated that should she miss the $32,000 word or the $64,000 word or words, she will get $4,000, for an educational trust fund, instead of an expensive car, which is the usual consolation prize.

Gloria repeats the words and pictures them before spelling

Gloria Lockerman, the Baltimore girl who is amazing the nation's TV audience with her spelling ability on the "$64,000 Question," is a careful student who repeats difficult words and pictures them in her mind before attempting to spell them.

This was apparent on Tuesday evening when she spelled a sentence containing six difficult words to win $16,000.

Announcer Hal March had incorrectly pronounced one of the words — "annihilated." He said: "s-si-lated." Gloria appeared to look up in the air to picture the word.

Viewers could see her lips move as she re-pronounced the word—correctly—"annihilated." Then she went on to spell it and the other five difficult words correctly.

Druggist seeks liquor permit in restricted area

An application for a Class A beer and wine permit for Lillie's Drug Store, at Druid Hill Ave. and Biddle St., will receive plenty of attention on Sept. 6 when it comes before the Board of Liquor Commissioners.

Thomas Schonfeld, of the board that their store is in a restricted area, the applicants, Bernard Lillie and Charlotte Lillie, have gone ahead with plans to acquire the permit.

Protests are expected to be offered at the hearing from more than 100 residents of the community. The Housing Authority of Baltimore City has also shown interest in the case.

THE STORE for which the permit is being sought is located within 400 feet of the McCullah Homes project, and is on a boundary line designated by the Liquor Board as having enough taxerns to serve the needs of the community.

Rumors to the effect that an announcement concerning the intentions of the applicants had never posted at the store were discounted Wednesday.

Notices appearing on the Board stated that a notice was posted in the window on Aug. 4 and taken down Aug. 17.

The announcement advised individuals and organizations wishing to file protests against the applicant to do so by Aug. 17.

The Board declared Wednesday however that protests will be accepted up to and during the Sept. 6 hearing.

Driver jailed for six months

Robert J. Iler, 29, 1200 block McCulloh St., who apparently has a penchant for driving without a license, will spend the next six months at a place where he probably won't even get close to a car.

On Wednesday Iler was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction on charges of driving in excess of 25 miles an hour and driving on a revoked license.

Iler pleaded guilty to both charges before Magistrate John J. Caslin in the Towson Police Court and asked for "mercy" with the explanation that all of his jobs consisted of driving.

In examining Iler's record, the magistrate found that his license had been revoked in 1947-48-49-50-51, which led him to remark:

"This record is the worse I've seen since I've been a magistrate. You seem determined to keep on driving. I'm going to stop you for six months."

They also quoted Drummond as saying, when the kerosene soaked slips were found:

"I'm done for sure and I would have burned them up."

Miss Shue was arrested as she entered the house with police who said that she was carrying a paper bag containing 45 slips with the numbers representing $52.54 in plays.

Boy, 12, aids deaf mutes, police at court hearing

"One of the smartest youngsters I have ever seen in court."

That's what Magistrate Simon Sconfield of the Northeastern District Police Court had to say Tuesday about a 12-year-old youth who served as interpreter for a deaf mute couple.

Charged with stabbing each other during a "misunderstanding" at their home in the 1600 block Erickson Pl., Norman and Annie Mae Jennings Jr., posed a problem for police and the court until young Frederick Davis of the 1100 block Clifton Ave., came on the scene.

THROUGH HIS knowledge of the sign language, young Davis was able to talk to Mr. and Mrs. sage to Magistrate Schonfield.

Jennings, then relay their messages.

For the past year he said he has been going on shopping trips with the Jennings and serving as their interpreter.

Charged with striking his wife after he allegedly found her in the arms of another man, Yates of their home in the 100 block N. Washington St., Charles A. Kates was fined $25 and costs Monday in Northeastern Police Court.

WHEN ASKED why he struck his wife Mr. Yates replied: "I got out of bed to let the cat out. I looked for her and she was gone.

"I put on my clothes and walked down the alley and found her all up in the arms of a man at Chapel and Sager St.

"The joker's name is 'Sketer' and he's the same man I found in my bed three weeks ago," said Mr. Yates.

With a look of surprise, Mrs. Yates interrupted her husband: "You don't have to lie on me. I'm just sick of you," she sputtered.

With a look of dejection Mr. Yates listened in rapt attention as Magistrate Schonfield told him: "You have no right to strike her. You have a fine wife and the next time you strike her

Lili Sturgis, Dorothy Foster among week's crop of brides

... with Lula Jones Garrett

IN THE SPRING a young man's fancy may lightly turn to thoughts of love.... but give them those June moons and August sunsets and they really do something about it.

Note, for instance, that flocks of weddings of the past week.

COULD THERE HAVE EVER been a lovelier bride than Lili Beatrice Sturgis, who became Mrs. Joseph Lee Boston Jr. Mon-State College Christian Center, Saturday afternoon?

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Logan Kearse, John H. Lee, cousin of the bride, and a student at Virginia State College, was at the console. A soxtet, including Vonzella Murphy, Lois Wright, Majorie Kearse, Dorothy Barrick, Wendell Wright and Myra Wright, wafted the guests heavenwards with the singing of traditional wedding hymns.

Miss Sturgis, given in marriage by her father, Oliver Sturgis, wore a gown of satin trimmed in lace, a matching lace headpiece with veil of antique net covered with appliques. She carried a bouquet of calla lilies.

Mrs. Gloria Sturgis Stokes was her sister's matron of honor. Mrs. Stokes wore yellow lace with matching accessories and carried a nosegay of green tinted flowers. The three bridesmaids, Misses Ruby Jones, Connie Dorsey and Geraldine Fax, wore green lace dresses, cocktail length, and carried yellow flowers. May Wood, tiny flower girl, was in yellow organdy.

George A. Boston Jr., brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers included George Barrick, William C. Johnson, Ernest Stokes and Wendell Wright.

A reception followed in the Center, with the bride's parents as hosts. Both Mrs. Sturgis and Mrs. Boston wore gowns of pink lace with matching accessories and flowers.

For her wedding trip to New York Mrs. Boston selected a suit dress of chartreuse and white linen, with which she wore navy accessories. She and Mr. Boston will be at home on Burleith Ave. after Oct. 1.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of Morgan State College. She has done graduate work at McGill University and the University of Michigan.

Among out-of-town guests here for the wedding were Connie and Paul Dorsey, Ruby Viron and Cheryl Jones of New York; Martha Dixon and Chrystal Carson of Newark, N.J.; Quincy Robinson of Philadelphia; Eli Hoxter and Alvin Williams of Wilmington, Del., and Rowena and Sharon Johnson of Washington.

AND AT NEAR THE SAME HOUR, in Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, Dorothy Mae Foster and Rufus Washington exchanged vows in as pretty a candle-light service as you have ever seen.

The Rev. Reginald Daniels, pastor, officiated.... with the music being provided by Mrs. Bernice White, organist, and Miss Juanita Jones, soloist.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Foster of Farmville, Va., is a Coppin Teachers College graduate, with a masters in education from New York University and is a practice teacher at Harriet Beecher Stowe School No. 118, here.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Charles Evans, Miss Foster wore a gown of imported Swiss embroidered organdy with ruffles of lace and made with a chapel train. Her fingertip veil of French illusion was attached to a cap of lace encrusted with seed pearls. She carried a white satin Prayer Book marked with a white orchid and Valley lilies of the valley and satin streamers.

Miss Evelyn Foster, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her gown was of pale green embroidered organdy and her accessories matched. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Geraldine Fax, Mrs. Carrie Stotts, Miss Reba Brooks and Miss Minnie Dorsey.

Their gowns were of silk organza in pastel shades of yellow and blue. The frocks were made with ballerina length full skirts and the bodices seed-pearl trimmed. Their hats were of matching and glove matched the gowns and they carried cascade bouquets with fall leaves.

Mr. Washington, son of Mrs. Mae Washington of Washington, D.C., was attended by Clyde Rucker of Turner Station, best man. Ushers were: William R. Fax, William Bevins, Dennis Foster, Jefferson and Carlton Douglass.
