—Jackie Robinson

thing I'm telling the AFRO.

"The trade hasn't altered my opinion about baseball one bit. I felt that after ten years with the Dodgers I'd want to finish out my career in the organization. But this is baseball, I guess.

"As far as my plans for this season are concerned, I suppose you can say I'll be playing in 1957. But who knows?

"THE THING struck me with such shock—I knew nothing (Wednesday)—that I haven't had a chance to think about it seriously," Jackie continued.

"Those are the fortunes of the game, though, and who am I to do anything but make the best of it?"

Robinson said he intended to leave his North Stamford, Conn., home "just as soon as I can" and "get away for a rest."

He declined to say where he is going, and added that his family "will join me" later.

GIANTS' VICE president Charles Feeney told the AFRO: "We're delighted to have Robinson. I think that goes without saying.

"We have been talking with the Dodgers about Robinson since early last fall. But it wasn't until Monday that things began to jell. It came to a head at (Dodger president) Walter O'Malley's dinner Monday night.

"Horace (Giants' president Horace Stoneham) and O'Malley closed it at that time.

"RIGNEY (Bill Rigney, manager of the Giants) was happy to make the deal. We plan to play Jackie at first base.

"I might say here, too, that we think very highly of Little-field, and we hated like anything to let him go. But we didn't have any choice in the matter—without including him, we wouldn't have dealt with the Dodgers.

"Both Rigney and Stoneham are sure Jackie is going to help us tremendously. You know I've always loved the guy, personally."

THE POSITION of the Dodgers was explained by Arthur (Red) Patterson, the Bums' director of public relations. He told the AFRO:

"Naturally, we hated to let Robinson go. Jackie has been an institution here in Brooklyn.

"But it was a move that involved several angles. In the first place, we felt very much in need of lefthanded pitching. Littlefield figures to help us a lot in that respect.

"IN THE second place, we have reached the point where we realize we've got to begin making room for some of the fine young players in the organization.

"Three other clubs wanted to deal for Jackie. I'm not able to identify them. But I can say they made rather attractive offers.

"We felt we owed it to Robinson to get together with the Giants if it was at all possible. This way," Patterson concluded, "it doesn't uproot his home or interfere with his other New York connections."

THE TEAMING of Jackie and Willie Mays on the same club could be the shot in the arm the Giants need for their sagging gate. Even though they won the National League pennant in 1954, and followed it with a four-straight win over the Cleveland Indians in the World Series, the Giants have felt a pinch at the turnstiles.

After their pennant-winning year of 1954, the New York club drew 854,113 paid admissions for the 1955 season. Last year, however, the attendance fell off to 629,267. This was a drop of 194,845, largest in the NL.

Aside from Mays the team had little or nothing in the way of excitement to attract the fans. The impression is that the presence of Robinson—on the same team—will serve to hypo both Willie and the Giants.

ALTHOUGH HE hit only .275 last year, Robinson recorded a lifetime batting average of .311 in the ten years he was at Brooklyn.

During that time, he won the batting championship in 1949, and was named the most valuable player in the league in that same season. In addition, he was selected to play in six all-star games and five times was picked as the outstanding second baseman in both loops.
