An Unexpected Event

A 39-year-old Madison Ave. housewife, who told police that she had been treated by a Pennsylvania Ave. physician for the past three months for a tumor, gave birth to a full term stillborn baby, late Wednesday night in her home, Northwestern District Police report.

The housewife's husband, upon returning home, immediately asked his wife, "What's the matter?" when he noticed her disturbed condition.

Upon closer investigation the surprised husband saw that his wife had given birth to a baby that was apparently dead. He quickly wrapped the baby in a towel and called an ambulance.

Both mother and the baby were rushed to Mt. Sinai Hospital, where the baby was pronounced dead at 12:15 a.m. Thursday.

Police were summoned to the hospital, Dr. Malcolm Freed of the staff ruled out the possibility of abortion because the baby was a full term child, police report.
