—Oakey Jackson

Harry T. Sherry and Joseph Bucher, his aide, for six year terms on bribery charges. They were paroled two years ago.

In testimony before Judge Joseph Sherbow in Criminal Court, Mr. Jackson said he had turned over 25 per cent of his profits from film-flam deals to the officers, in return for their cooperation in allowing him and other members of his gang to operate in Baltimore.

During the period of 1948-51, Mr. Jackson said he paid out a total of $2,100 in "ice money" to the two officers, but found himself in trouble when their traffic officers picked him up as he was swindling a woman out of $220 on July 18, 1951.

* * *

THE STATE introduced evidence of 36 telephone calls between Jackson and the officers in a time when a special and large son himself testified that he would call, the pair everytime he came to Baltimore.

Because of his cooperation, Jackson was given a two-year, suspended sentence.

Appearing more like a business man than a confidence operator, Mr. Jackson explained that the film-flam that brought about his arrest was of the "pocketbook routine."

This, he said, is a swindle in which the swindlers pretend to find a large sum of money and offer to share it with a person whom they make certain has seen them pick it up.

However, the swindlers first insist that the "mark" (a certain term for a victim) puts up money of his own to show that he is a "reliable" person.

As soon as the con man gets his hands on this money he gets rid of it, the victim having him wait outside a building for him to return while he leaves through another exit.

* * *

AT THE time of his arrest in this city, Lt. O'Toole, the arresting officer, said that Jackson was working the game racket on 81-year-old man, listed as Jonathan Garrey, unit block Perry St.

"I was passing by a downtown building and saw Jackson and another man in the doorway with the mark. I sort of eavesdropped and saw the transfer of money and saw Jackson give the old fellow a package.

"I waited till they had finished and I grabbed Jackson, but the other one got away. Jackson had the man's $1,500 and all the man had was a wad of cut-up newspaper."

SWEEPS WINNER'S SON DIES—California Patrol Sgt. Tony Gaetaini examines wreckage of convertible which skidded 600 feet before smashing head-on into concrete bridge near San Francisco Golden Gate Bridge Saturday, killing the driver, Airman Lawrence Lawson, 23, East Orange, N.J. His body is huddled in front seat. He is son of Mr. and Mrs. Redus Lawson, who won $140,000 sweepstakes three weeks ago.

Boy, 16, gets 36 months for striking theft

"I jumped out of the car and I went over and started looking around in the dark. I felt like we're in a pile of garbage, paper, dirt and everything you could imagine.

"I said, 'all right, you are under arrest.'

"When I did that he swung at me and knocked me down and we started wrestling in the garbage. I subdued him..."

This was the testimony of Officer William Crone, Traffic Division, appearing against a Court Tuesday against a husky 16-year-old youth on trial for automobile larceny and assaulting an officer.

Daniel Waters, unit block N. Castle St., was found guilty of both charges by Judge James K. Cullen and sentenced to a total of 30 months in the Reformatory.

Officer Crone stated that on Oct. 25 he spotted Waters and some other youths in the car in the 700 block W. Franklin St. He said he tried to flag the car down to question them but Waters sped away.

The officer said the youths abandoned the car at Schroeder and Baltimore St., when they became tied up in heavy traffic there. He said he gave chase to Waters and caught him in the garbage pile.
