Coppin students donate food baskets to the needy

"THEY REALLY help a lot," is what Sgt. Viojet Hill Whyte said Thanksgiving Eve as she busily prepared huge baskets of groceries at Northwestern Police Station for Baltimore's families.

By "they," Sgt. Whyte referred to the students at Coppin State Teachers College.

At a Wednesday afternoon program entitled, "We Give Thanks," held at Coppin State Teacher College the future teachers presented 15 baskets of groceries to Sgt. Whyte, who graciously accepted them on behalf of the Police Department.

The 'cheer baskets, 'which contained all types of good food, came from the students' personal donations.

* * *

FIRST PRIZE FOR the best basket went to the Sophomore Class. Their basket was in the form of a Pilgrim high hat. Second prize went to the Freshman Class.

Their basket was distinguished by an attractive turkey design.

Judges for the occasion were Mrs. Parlett Moore, Mrs Barrier and Captian Millard Horton.

A Thanksgiving message was given by Dr. Howard L. Cornish director of Morgan State College Christian Center.

Remarks were also made by Dr. Parlett Moore, president of Coppin State Teachers College.

Mrs. Whyte said that this is the second year the students at Coppin have donated food baskets for the city's indigent and that they are planning on doing the same thing again next year.

Jeweled mace presented to Morgan by alumni

By ROBERT L. FOWLKES

A 41-year employee got a rousing, standing ovation and mace from the alumni in highlights of the 90th founders Day at Morgan State College Monday.

James H. Carter, 1916 graduate and now assistant to the president, Martin D. Jenkins, crew from a packed assembly one of the highest tributes ever paid a Morgan speaker—enthusiastic and yet deeply respectful standing applause.

The veteran employee brought more than 2,000 students, faculty and visitors to their feet applauding after concluding a Founders' Day address.

(ED. NOTE—A mace is a staff borne by, or carried before a dignitary as a symbol of his authority. It is usually carried in college preecssions by the marshal of the school.)

It is symbolic of Morgan, containing a piece of wood from the now condemned Dust Bowl, once the chapel for the college, and polished granite taken from the stone quarry once located on the campus.

It has three metal strips of sterling silver, each stripe signifying a period in Morgan's history—the Centenary Biblical Institute, Morgan College, and Morgan State College—and is engraved with the Morgan seal.

Twelve jewels are set in the mace, one for each month.

* * *

THE MACE was financed by contributions from individual alumni and a donation from the General Alumni Association. It was designed by Dr. Charles W. Stallings, associate professor of art at the college.

Edward N. Wilson presented the mace to Dr. Jenkins, who in turn presented it to the college marshal, Dr. George H. Spaulding.

Present for the presentation was Frank J. Ellis, president of the General Alumni Association, and Josiah F. Henry Jr., attorney, a member of the board of trustees.

Interestingly, Hayes Banks, president of the class of 1960, who entered the college just 40 years after Mr. Carter graduated, introduced the veteran career man.

Dorm girder downed by wind at Morgan

High winds that lashed Baltimore Wednesday evening and night blew down the steel girders on a dormitory building under construction at Morgan State College.

Residents of the neighborhood said the girders, designed to support the second and third floors of the building, "came down with a resounding crash that could be heard all over the neighborhood."

No estimate of the damage had been given at presstime. Brickwork up to the second floor had been completed.

Morgan family 'must work as never before'

"Using the newly-forged tools of an integrated society, the men and women of Morgan must work as never before lest the great opportunity now before us will have vanished before we completely grasp its import."

As Morgan State College celebrated its 90th anniversary in Monday, these words of James H. Carter, assistant to the college president and the oldest Morgan employee in terms of service.

For 41 years Mr. Carter has been employed at Morgan and when he spoke on Monday in Hurt Gymnasium before students, faculty members and guests, he recreated the story of how Morgan was organized in 1867 and grew to its present position.

* * *

TURNING TO the present, Mr. Carter advised the students that though the school has made a great deal of recent progress:

"Let none be so rash as to assume that the job is now complete and the day of rest at hand."

Then he told the audience: "The founders are you and you and I—all who in the past, in the present, and in the future shall work earnestly and all together to build these walls a bit higher and a bit more firm to the end that our beloved Morgan may be the better to serve those for whom it was conceived."

Great taste—great whiskey. No Manhattan tastes quite like a Manhattan made with Calvert Reserve. People with an instinct for the finest insist on smoother, flavorful Calvert. It's the American whiskey of good taste that's always in good taste. Great on-the-rocks, too!

Here's how to make a Calvert Manhattan: Pour 3 parts Calvert, 1 part sweet vermouth over ice cubes in mixing glass. Add dash bitters, stir, strain into cocktail glass. Add cherry.

COLORFUL AND STYLISH are fashions for ladies during the holiday season. Left is Miss Ann Evans in a red chiffon cocktail frock which sports a diamond dog collar. Her hat, an original by Nell Sheridan, is a cascade of pink ostrich feathers. Both can be found at Pauline Brooks North Ave. salon. Center, Mrs. Jeannette Leath wears a peacock blue and green short evening gown which features the new outside bra effect delineated by a green velvet ribbon which cascades down the back in streamers. The overlay is of blue nylon tulle splashed with a velvet floral design and sprinkled with star dust. It is available at the Charm Centre. Right, Mrs. Melinee Yerrell wears a pale blue lace sheaf sparkling with rhinestone stars and set off by a blue organza sash tied in a giant bow low to the hip. Her hat is an original by Nell Sheridan. Made of baby soft white velvet, it dips over the eye and is accentuated by a red American Beauty rose. Both are at Pauline Brooks.

Holiday clothes are pretty and colorful

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

Christmas time is holiday time and shops are featuring all kinds of pretty garments to make the ladies look their glamorous best.

There is a veritable winter wonderland of high fashion at the Charm Center, 1811 Pennsylvania, and at Pauline Brooks, 2126 W. North Avenue.

And exquisite frocks are shown at Sarah's, 2600 W. North Ave., and at Hendin's 1725 Pennsylvania Ave.

It's Levie's, 1809 Pennsylvania Ave., for shoes, and Travis too, at 3118 W. North Ave., for fine footwear.

* * *

THE TREND this gay and exciting season is that your garb must be fresh, feminine, and artfully pretty.

Whether you wear the sleek, lithe sheath or the fluffy, sassy and youthful bouffant, fashion experts claim that the materials of your best frocks are many, from fine cottons to dacron, nylon, and wool.

Party finery ranges from the new alluring sissy blouse of white cotton or dacron, beruffled and pearl buttoned, with a red cumerbund belt added to skirt, all the way to the backless new short formal with many, many petticoats.

By far the smartest ever is the new high bosom dance bands, the skirt swishing into floating panels in back-bouffancy.

Pauline Brooks has this one in black and white satin at about $40.

* * *

ANOTHER eye-catcher for the ballroom floor is to be found at the Charm Center.

Iridescent in blue and green, this dress has an accordian pleated green tulle outside-effect bra and outlined with a blue velvet ribbon which is caught in the back with a puri streamers.

The full, full skirt is green taffeta with an overlay of tiers and tiers of ruffled tulle, and then an overlay of blue nylon net splashed with a velvet floral design, and sprinkled with star dust.

The nipped-in waist over yards and yards of full skirt makes for the fairy princess look and is under $50.

THE RADIANCE and magic of mi-lady's shining hour can be made lustrous and glowing by her furs.

Mitchell's Fur Salon at 227 N. Howard St., has some fabulous ones beginning with a mouton lamb at $55 to $150, and ranging through mink at around $800 to $2,000.

Chinchilla, which is now almost a rarity, is fabulously expensive.

An utter dream of a stole is one Cerulean mink which may be had either in dark or light shades for around $2,000.

Simply maddening are full-length coats in reasonably priced beaver, muskrat, seal, et al, which may be had for $100 to $500.

Something new is the fitted beaver or seal with the smart tuxedo collar. It is belted and about $250 to $500.

* * *

AT ANY of the mentioned stores you may purchase fine, fur fabric coats that are so smart this year.

Light weight, warm and serviceable, they range in price from $59 to $150.

Just elegant is the beautiful black velvet the most luxurious of evening cover. They are dramatically hooded or wide-collared in silhouette or loose fit.

Charm Center, Pauline Brooks, Hendin's and Sarah's have them priced to fit your purse.

* * *

AND SHOES, come five o'clock, are pretty, little, delicate and the dancing prancing kind.

Poised on thin high heels set with jewels, they make a dazzling sight as mi-lady retreats.

Get these at Levie's and Travis.

The under-cover story is the ace in the wood pile. Unless you have the correct foundation to control and support and give the correct hipline, your holiday mood may be spoiled.

At all of the stores mentioned here, you will find the new torsolette which bares your back, flattens your waist, lifts and rounds your bosom, and cuts the wiggle out of your hips.

And these same stores have the new exciting girdles with the non-roll and light bones.

* * *

THE TOUCH which makes one feel like a pampered beauty is the lingerie.

This season it is delicate in white or pale pink and blue, in silk and satin, or in nylon tricot, appliqued with pale pink and green roses, if your prefer.

The low-neck waltz gown is featured for sweet dreaming of a white Christmas.

You may get one with the tie-neck, if that's your desire, and all these and more too may be purchased at Pauline Brooks, Hendin's, Charm Center, and Sarah's.

Cocktail's for two by candlelight may be made more exciting than ever if you have on one of Nell Sheridan's original hats.

She does them for Pauline Brooks and they are among the most fabulous in town.

Mrs. Battles, 81, dies in fall

"She was a grandmother to everyone . . . young and old, friend or stranger, no sooner had you met her, than you called her 'grandma'.

"Her door was open to everyone who wished to come in. Everyone was welcome in her home to share whatever she had to offer."

These touching words of memory were told to the AFRO by Mrs. Bessie Higgins, 1723 Edmondson Ave., about her mother who died as the result of a fall last Saturday evening, at the age of 81.

MRS. BATTLES, a native of Rocky Mount, N.C., attended Union Christian Church for a number of years after coming to this city in 1929.

In addition to Mrs. Higgins, Mrs. Battles is survived by four other children: Mrs. Bessie Hill, of New York, Alfred Battles, Mrs. Rose Freeman, and John Battles, all of Baltimore.

Also surviving are nine grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at Trinity Church on Tuesday followed by burial at Arbutus Cemetery.

Democratic Viewpoint

By ROBERT WATTS

From one end of the country to the other it was found that the colored vote shifted to the Republican cause.

The white vote did likewise as witness the fact that Eisenhower captured 41 of our 48 states.

Naturally the colored vote changed in may instances for the same reason as the white vote, but in most cases, you will find a general dissatisfaction with the question of Civil rights.

I am not too sure colored people are pleased with the Republican treatment of this problem, as I am that he is displeased with Democrats.

In the months to come the Republicans have a wonderful opportunity to capture many votes if they will push for advancement in this field.

The Democratic party on the other hand must reorganize itself to the end, that the Eastland and the Talmadges will have little say in the workings of the party.

COME JANUARY if the Democrats organize the Senate, there will be the motion or resolved by burial at Arbutus Cemetery.

The Republicans who used Eastland's possible chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee as a campaign argument, will vote unanimously to seat him.

I also imagine there will be a fight on to change Rule 22 which allows for the filibuster.

Again the Republicans and Southern Democrats will join together to defeat any such move, and we will be back where we started.

We should keep this in mind for sometimes we allow these great issues to go by without a fight or vote entitles us to.

The status quo will remain unnoticed by most of us.

* * *

TRUE THE Clarence Mitchells the Joseph Rauhs and others will be on the scene.

The NAACP will send representatives to Washington to urge a change in Rule 22 or the passage of a civil rights bill.

However, the guys who claim credit for the Eisenhower victory, the guys who tell you they carried their precincts, or who are leaders in the great movement that elected Eisenhower, will not be found pushing these bills.

Yt this sam mn will b

Yet these same men will be telling you four years from now, that we must get rid of Eastland and therefore you can't vote the Democratic ticket.

SOME MEMBERS of the Senate on the Republican side campaigned on the theme that a vote for a Democratic Senator is a vote for Eastland.

Yet you will find not one of distinguished gentlemen taking the floor of the Senate denouncing the Eastlands, for appearing before the judiciary committee pushing for these bills to come to the floor.

Watch to see if the Republican members of the judiciary committee will take Eastland to task if he carries the bills around in his pocket as he has been doing and has threatened to continue doing.

These are the things we should watch for.

If the colored vote went to the Republicans then we should be paid by the enactment of civil rights measures.

We should insist, that these Republicans and Democrats who won with our vote use their influence whereeve possible in civil rights measures.

New teeth to await growth of new tooth

Although Milton Baker of 326 N. Gilmor St., had four teeth removed more than three months ago, he still has quite a bit of waiting ahead before his dentist can supply him with replacements.

When he revisited his dentist Tuesday night to have an impression made for a plate, it was discovered that a new tooth was growing out in the place of one of those extracted.

Mr. Baker, who is 48 years old, said that the dentist told him that he would have to wait for his new teeth (artificial) until his new tooth (natural) has finished growing.

Court says inspections did not infringe on rights

"When the truck was zigzagging I was checking my addresses to make time. I was not drunk. I had a bottle of beer along with my lunch. That was all I had, one bottle of beer."

William Otis Daves, 901 Rosedale St., was telling Judge Paul Mason in Criminal Court how it was that the arresting officers may have thought he was drunk while driving a lumber delivery truck on Monroe St., Oct. 25, about 3 p.m.

Officers DePaula and Puratt testified that Daves got out of his truck staggering when they stopped him after three blocks pursuit.

Daves explained that he has an artificial leg and staggers for that reason.

* * *

WHEN ASKED what indication other than staggering Daves presented to the arresting officer, they replied that Daves eyes were "bleary."

Daves claimed that his eyes were that way all the time.

Judge Mason said that due to Daves previous traffic violations, which included several cases of reckless driving caused him to give Daves a sentence of thirty days in jail although the man's sister was present in court prepared to pay a fine.

Daves stated that he had not lost his job, but that because his drivers license had been suspended in traffic court, he would not be able to work.

Construction man dies on the job

"Oh, it was such a shock! I was at work . . . he dropped dead on the job . . .

"He had gotten up in the morning the way he always was . . . he hadn't been sick or anything."

Mrs. Thelma Marshall, of 2554 Pennsylvania Ave, was talking about the sudden death of her husband, Waller Marshall, 58, who died while working on a construction job in Oakleigh Village, last Tuesday.

Mr. Marshall, a native of Virginia, is survived by two brothers, John and Edward, and seven sisters.

Funeral services were held on Saturday at Kelson Funeral Home and burial was Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

Despite 'one bottle of beer and wooden leg'—30 days

"The inspections were authorized as a valid exercise of police power, were reasonable and not unlawful. They did not infringe on any constitutional right of the appellant."

This was the decision rendered by Chief Judge of the Maryland Court of Appeals in the case of Abraham Givner, who filed a suit against the state charging that its representatives had violated his right to privacy by seeking to enter hi. Linden Avenue home for the purpose of fire, health, and electrical wiring inspections.

* * *

ON THE morning of Feb. 1, 1955, when representatives of the foregoing departments attempted to gain entrance to Givner's property at 1735 Linden Ave. and were refused, a court order was granted and and Givner was tried shortly thereafter in Criminal Court.

He was found guilty of violation of the city code and given a suspended sentence of $50,000 and the costs of trial.

The verdict was appealed and heard before the court of appeals which upheld the lower court's ruling.

As one of his legal supports, Givner used a decision made in Maryland Supreme Court at least 30 years ago, but the actual date was not available.

It states: If a general search warrant is condemned, how much more obnoxious must be an authorization to conduct a general and indiscriminate search of property without a warrant."

Although this was mentioned at the hearing, the decision was issued against Givner, and still stands.
