BURIED IN PINK—These are scenes from the funeral on Thursday afternoon for Mrs. Pearl Arledge, postal clerk, who was slain early Monday morning. Shown leaving the George G. Kelson Funeral Home, 1348 N. Calhoun St., is one of the mourners, Mrs. Virginia Jones. The center picture shows the casket as it was carried out of the chapel. The pallbearers were: Robert Hall, William Collins, John C. Mason, Albert Orange, Preston Hurtt and Joseph W. Brown. The last picture shows some of the passengers in the first car. Included were Herbert Giles, the Rev. Samuel Giles, an uncle; Miss Dorothy Esdore, Mrs. Rose Giles, and Paul and Bessie Dorsey. Attending the services inside the chapel were approximately 70 persons while about 100 more stood outside unable to enter for the brief services. The 45-year-old postal clerk was shot five times in the head and once in the neck. Under arrest and charged in her death is her husband, ArthurR. Arledge, 52, who is being held in jail without bail pending a hearing to be set by the State's attorney. Death for the attractive and stylishly dressed Mrs. Arledge came in the second floor bedroom of her home at 415 N. Calhoun St., reportedly as she lay in bed. After the shooting, police said her husband walked about six blocks to the Southwestern Police Station where he surrendered. Mrs. Arledge, known for her good taste in clothes, was buried in a pink negligee.

DEATH STRUCK HERE—A view of the 400 block N. Calhoun St., a quiet residential block in Northwest Baltimore. Arrow points to 415, comfortable home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. Arledge. Police found Mrs. Arledge, the former Pearl Dorsey, dead of six bullet wounds early Monday after her husband surrendered. She was a postal clerk.

'SEMED HAPPY' — Edward H. Brown, next door neighbor of Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. Arledge, made this comment about the couple Monday morning. Mr. Arledge is in City Jail awaiting a preliminary hearing in connection with his wife's death. Mrs. Arledge was buried Thursday. Mr. Brown told AFRO reporter shown here: "Both were from fine Baltimore homes. They both seemed to be happy people."

'Virginia has done nothing'

By RUFUS WELLS

RICHMOND

Virginia has done absolutely nothing" toward compliance with the Supreme Court ruling on desegregating public schools, Thurgood Marshall, chief NAACP counsel, declared Wednesday as a hearing was held in the five-year-old Prince Edward County school case.

Mr. Marshall described legislation passed recently by the Virginia General Assembly as "an onerous procedural plan devised to perpetuate racial segregation despite the high court ruling."

At the end of arguments by attorneys for the NAACP and the Prince Edward County School Board, Federal Judge Sterling A. Hutcheson asked that the school board attorneys file an additional brief before he ruled on the matter.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY T. Justin Moore Sr. said he would file the brief within 15 days.

The brief is to answer one submitted Tuesday by NAACP attorneys that called Virginia's newly enacted school laws, "invalid on their faces."

Judge Hutcheson said he would take the case under advisement after receiving the state's brief and would return his decision in "due time."

Three major developments highlighted today's hearing:

* * *

1. MR. MARSHALL CALLED for a September 1957 deadline for the beginning of desegregation of Prince Edward County schools.

2. Mr. Moore sought to delay a test of the constitutionality of the recently passed laws by asking that a three-judge special court be convened.

3. Mr. Moore indicated that the state was relying on colored citizens of Prince Edward County to accept a plan of voluntary school segregation.

The hearing opened in a half filled courtroom at 10 a.m. with Mr. Moore explaining that the state's comprehensive scheme of "school legislation" (the public assignment plan and other bills passed) represented an attempt by the state to comply with the court order to desegregate.

* * *

"MR. MOORE pointed out that the new legislation "represents a consistent approach to a solution of the problem" and said the state is relying especially on the pupil assignment law.

* * *

OLIVER W. HILL, Richmond NAACP attorney, was first to break for the plaintiffs. He quoted Governor Stanley as saying he wanted to "preserve the segregated school system and was calling the special legislative session for that purpose.

Mr. Hill continued:

"The sole purpose of the legislation is to prevent any elimination of separate schools. It doesn't require an oracle to see that this is no effort to comply, but an effort to see that colored people do not get the education been guaranteed by law they are entitled to."

Referring to the pupil assignment bill, Mr. Hill said:

"It doesn't specifically mention race, but it is part and parcel of a comprehensive scheme which does mention race and its sole purpose is to continue race as a factor in the assignment of pupils."

* * *

MR. MARSHALL told the court that the "only prompt and reasonable start made by the state of Virginia was to pass legislation for the sole purpose of perpetuating segregation."

"When the Supreme Court ordered a prompt and reasonable start, I don't believe it meant a prompt and reasonable start to defy its orders. Virginia has done absolutely nothing toward compliance.

He continued:

"We prefer to believe the school board members, (Prince Edward) are working under a misunderstanding that the state can interpose itself between them and the U.S. Constitution and save them from having to comply."

He asked the court to issue orders to the school board ever."

* * *

A BIT OF HUMOR was injected into the tense hearing when Attorney Hutcheson asked if the original plaintiffs in the suit were still in a Prince Edward County school.

Mr. Marshall replied:

"I don't think so. They are graduated by now or they are mighty stupid."

Mr. Marshall explained that new plaintiffs are put into the case as the original ones are graduated from the schools involved.
