Armstrong to play London Symphony

LONDON (ANP) — An invitation to American jazz musician Louis Armstrong to play with a symphony orchestra as background to his trumpet and then to appear in a British movie about backstage life in Britain."

December was extended last week.

Ernest Anderson, Satchmo's representative in London, said "Louis will be coming to London in December. He expects to play with a symphony orchestra as background to his trumpet and then to appear in a British movie about backstage life in Britain."

Strolling the Avenue

Fresh from a jaunt to South America and several appearances at Jazz festivals, Dizzy Gillespie, Mr. Bop himself, will lift his horn on Sunday at Carr's Beach for a spot of music-making.

Diz, who has been credited with more than one innovation in his chosen profession, will come equipped with a trumpet that has the bell pointed at a 45-degree angle.

Ole Diz claims this lets him hear the notes a little better and who's to argue with a man who has traveled all over the world as a musical ambassador for the U.S.

Backing Diz will be a full 17-piece band. And while it may come as a minor surprise, Mr. Gillespie will also come equipped with a sense of humor.

On a recent TV show the maestro announced that he was going to play "Begin the Beguine." He then added:

"But I doubt if anybody will recognize the tune," or words to that effect. He's still the greatest and CARR'S BEACH will be the place to go on Sunday.

One hard-boiled critic in New York commented on Diz's appearance last week at Randall's Island with the notes that the musician had toned down a bit on the wilder notes and had affected a marriage between the traditional beat of jazz and modern ideas for a terrific brand of music.

FOR THE REST of the long Labor Day weekend the beach will offer Family Day on Monday with the music of Billy Fair and Lloyd Monroe's Organos.

The wild outfit, Pete "Crazy Horse" Martin and his Ponies, is rocking the roof down at CHICK'S LOUNGE, Baltimore and Greene Sts., with some of the best sounds in town.

Frank Minion, a singer with a pleasing manner is the star at RICTOR'S RED FOX LOUNGE, Pennsylvania and Fulton Ave., and its well worth the trip to listen to tiffe young man with the soft voice.

George Fox, who developed such artists as Lou Bennett and Ethel Ennis, is really sold on Minion and chances are that the listeners will concur with his opinion that the singer is a coming entertainer.

Like Old Man River, Al Brown and the Tune Toppers, keep right on rolling along at the CLOVER CLUB, Fayette and Wolfe Sts., with their jumping music that rocks and rolls.

The drinks are good and the music is in the same category so you're in for a happy time at the CLOVER CLUB and the long weekend is the perfect time to pay a visit.

CLUB TIJUANA is doing a wonderful job of providing Baltimore with a top brand of modern music every Saturday from 3 to 7 p.m. when the Interracial Jazz Society takes over the bandstand.

The sounds come in all degrees, cool and warm, and in the confines of the comfortable club its a fine way to spend a Saturday afternoon.

At other times Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and his organ trio share the spotlight with Shirley Scott and Charley Rice, a combination of organ and drums.

There's another jazz group that rates above the average over at JONES COCKTAIL LOUNGE, 1724 W. Lanvale St. That would be the Bilal Hakeen Jazz Trio featuring Kenneth Pulley on bass and Andy Booker on the drums.

CLUB GIGOLO has the Dorothy Stearns and her Hammond organ trio; the COMEDY CLUB is offering a fast paced floor show; the EDMONDSON CAFE, 604 Poplar Grove St., features a wonderful atmosphere and a friendly greeting; while out near Severna Park the CASBAR SUPPER CLUB is the place to go.

When the dancing is done and it's time for a Snack, the bar-b-que at Our Bar-B-Que, 2006 Edmondson Ave., is delicious, as is the food at the RICE INN, 1306 Pennsylvania Ave. That's it. Have fun.

Citizens Council leader jailed, Tennessee school integrates

CLINTON, Tenn. —John Kasper, 26-year-old executive secretary of the Seaboard White Citizens' Council of Washington, D.C., and instigator of the unsuccessful attempts to halt orderly school integration here, was in court Thursday and Friday to answer charges that he disregarded a temporary injunction issued by U.S. District Judge Robert L. Taylor.

Judge Taylor's injunction followed Kasper's arrest and subsequent release for lack of evidence on charges of "circulating literature likely to cause an affray in breach of peace" when 12 colored students entered classes Monday for the first time at Clinton High School.

When Kasper refused to abandon plans for a pro-segregation rally Wednesday night, Judge Taylor ordered his appearance in court Thursday.

He was freed Tuesday in trial justice court on charges of trying to incite a riot.

The following day four persons, only one of them a school pupil, were jailed on charges of fighting and disorderly conduct on a downtown street, according to Police Chief Joe Wilson.

* * *

TWO OF THE PERSONS arrested were white, the chief said, one of whom had been picketing the school since the 12 colored pupils were admitted on Monday.

The pupils were escorted home personally by Sheriff Joe Owen Wednesday, one hour before school closing time, "as a safety precaution," the sheriff said. "I did not ask the sheriff to act," said Principal Brittain.

The principal added that he rejected an "ultimatum" from Kasper and his followers that he oust the colored pupils or resign.

* * *

Clinton High School principal D. P. Brittain spurned an "ultimatum" issued by Kasper, demanding that the principal either oust the colored students or resign.

With a 651-0 vote, students at the school (including the 12 colored students) responded negatively to Kasper's demand, giving the Principal Brittain the unanimous vote of confidence.

The vote added substance to the popular belief that resistance to the integration order at Clinton comes almost entirely from instigators from outside the Clinton area.

THE INTEGRATION at Clinton climaxed a four-year legal struggle to provide convenient and equal facilities for colored high school pupils of Clinton who formerly commuted to Knoxville, 2' miles away, and to other towns with all-colored high schools outside their native Anderson County.

This mixing of races in predominantly white East Tennessee's Clinton High School further marked the first integration in a public school in the "Old South" east of the Mississippi. The exception to this is in Oak Ridge, Tenn., a system operated by the Atomic Energy Commission for whose use the city was built.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY General Walter E. Fischer said a more serious picket demonstration probably was averted by the jailing of picket planner Kasper, who, a week earlier broke up a bi-racial meeting in Charlottesville, Va. by planting himself in the meeting room of the Virginia Council on Human Relations at the Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Kasper told the bi - racial Charlottesville group: "We in the Citizens' Council have declared war on you people. We're going to run you out of town."

Police in Charlottesville responded to a call by the Human Relations Council, but not enter the church or make an arrest.

KASPER'S PLANNED mass demonstration on the side walks in front of the school folded when the school bell rang.

Only two pupils, both boys, one a 17-year-old junior who had quit School to join the army, continued to carry their shabbily printed signs: "School Strike, against Negroes" and "We Don't Want Integrated Schools."

Slacks of white - supremacy literature and racial pamphlets littered the school yard where some of the papers had been opened and ripped in disregarding fashion.

* * *

"WE WEREN'T BOTHERED at all," commented 17-year-old Robert Lee Thacker, one of the six boys among the dozen colored students who made the first day's classes.

"But it's hard to say how we feel about this," Thacker continued, then added, "I hope it quiets down."

Principal D. P. Brittain said that the integrated classes moved along in a "routine" manner in traditionally tranquil East Tennessee. He estimated the total absentees on the first day at from 35 to 40.

Undisturbed by the relatively few absentees, Principal Brittain emphasized that "we're not forcing anybody to go the school who doesn't want to."

Bob Robinson gets 8 Years

"Unfortunately for Mr. Robert Lee Robinson, he has a proclivity for throwing lye on people."

John Weiss, assistant State's attorney, was arguing his case against Robert Lee Robinson, 27, 3300 block Burleith Ave., on trial in Criminal Court Tuesday in four cases of assault to maim.

Mr. Robinson pleaded guilty before Judge John K. Cullen and was sentenced to a total of eight years in the Maryland Penitentiary.

The defendant was accused of permanently disfiguring the face of Herbert Boone, 29, 500 block Poplar Grove St. when he dashed the chemical in the victim's face on Oct. 1, 1955.

The incident occurred during a dispute between Mr. Boone and Mr. Robinson over the price of a fish sandwich in a cafe in the 1800 block Orleans St., where the defendant was then employed as a kitchen helper.

Three others with Mr. Boone at the time suffered lye burns.

* * *

JUDGE CULLEN assessed an eight-year penalty in the Boon case and imposed two-year concurrent terms in the other three.

Referring to the defendant's record, Mr. Weiss told the court that in April, 1955, he was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction for assault by throwing lye.

"He remained in hiding until July of this year when police learned he was in town and arrested him, "Mr. Weiss said.

The prosecutor said Mr. Robinson fled to New York City.

The defendant took the witness stand and said he threw the lye on Mr. Boone after the man threatened him with a pistol. This, however, was denied by the victim.

This Story Festival of the Moon
The moon is the goddess Queen of Heaven, and, on the fifteenth day of the Eighth Moon, when she gracefully rises full and at her brightest immediately after sunset, her worshippers take place in her honor. Dinner is gay, colorful and happy circles are given under the light of the harvest moon; refreshments, sweets, and round moon cakes, garnished symbolizes the moon, are served; rabbits, fish, and frogs are served.
Many ancient legends present varying tales regarding the habitant of this serene heavenly abode. Chinese tell of a rabbit living under the shade of a cassia tree, spends his time pounding and grinding of gold, jade, and cinnabar into what goes to make up the Precious Elixir of Immortality. Others say that once upon a time, Hang Ngo, the wife of Hou Yi, ruler of the west, Buy Wang Mu, gave the Elixir of Immortality to a handsome chieftain by the name of Hou Ieh. His exquisite wife, Sheng Ngo, however, stole it one fright and, in order to escape his hands, swallowed it and fled to the moon for safety. Once here, the merciful gods of the heaven took pity and changed her into a three-legged toad, the symbol of unhappiness. Since the Moon Festival, as the Chinese call this festival, it is said that her outline may be traced as it is very best upon the surface of the cool silvery moonlight.

'Our Constitution is color-blind . . .'

"Our Constitution is color-blind . . ."

Quoting from the 1896 Plessy vs. Ferguson Supreme Court decision, John J. O'Connor Jr., attorney, included this phrase in a 12-point motion to dismiss charges against a 20-year-old blonde indicted after giving birth to a child fathered by a colored man.

The motion to dismiss was filed in Criminal Court Tuesday.

Miss Shirley Ann Howard, 500 block Collington St., was indicted by the grand jury on Aug. 1, under a 1716 Maryland law which makes it illegal for a white woman to bear a child by a colored man or mulatto.

* * *

IN A reference to the 241-year old statute, it is contended in the motion to dismiss that: "Its hoary antiquity condemn it to extinction because subsequent federal laws have withdrawn from the states their original authority to discriminate on the basis of race or color.

The motion attacks the indictment as being "so vague, general and indefinite that it fails to set forth with sufficient certainty and particularity a criminal offense on the part of the said defendant."

The law under which the young woman was indicted states that:

"Any white woman who shall suffer or permit herself to be get with child by a colored man or mulatto, upon conviction thereof in the court having criminal jurisdiction, either in the city or county where such child was begotten or was born, shall be sentenced to the Penitentiary for not less than 18 months nor more than five years."

IT IS ARGUED in the motion that the indictment against the defendant "arbitrarily invades her property, personal and civil rights."

Referring to the archaic law as "brazenly discriminatory," the motion contends that "it is an example of vindictive class or caste legislation — a law which seeks to burn the 'brand of inferiority' onto one race."

Further, it is pointed out that: "The statute on which it is predicated is unenforceably vague and void in that it fails to establish any standards or norms to serve as a guide for determining what is a 'white woman.'"

The child's father, John Moses Billy, 500 block N. Chapel St., has agreed to pay $7 per Week toward the support of the infant, born in Johns Hopkins Hospital on June 7.

'I'm going to see that you stay in the house'

"I can't get the medicine I want. The gentleman came along and spoke to me and asked: 'What's the matter?' I told him I'm sick and said, 'Give me a cigarette.'

"He said, 'I don't smoke. Here's a quarter.' I took the quarter and went in the bus terminal for coffee."

Tall, lean, John Evans, 47, 700 block Druid Hill Ave., Tuesday in Northwestern District Court, was trying to prove that Officer Charles Bauers was wrong in arresting him Monday at Howard and Centre Sts. for begging.

"I'm not able to do anything but stay in the house. It's been six months since I was here," Mr. Evans added feebly.

"Since you can only stay in the house, I'm going to see to it that you stay in the house," the magistrate said and sentenced Mr. Evans to 30 days in jail.

Freedom for Johnson but 4 months for Mitchell

"I was sitting on my steps. He stopped in front of my door using bad language. I asked him to move on. He struck me and I struck him back. The next thing I knew the police came."

This testimony Monday in Northwestern District Court didn't save 25-year-old Bertie Mitchell, 400 block W. Biddle St. from four months in the House of Correction, his sentence, for cutting James O. Johnson, 45, also of the 400 block W. Biddle St., with a pen knife.

Mr. Johnson, who was found not guilty of striking the defendant, Mitchell, explained matters this way:

"It happened a little after 9 p.m. just as I got to the steps. I lipped my hat and said, 'Good Evening, everyone.' He called and said, 'I heard you said a lot of things, about me, and cut me."

The magistrate told Mr. Mitchell, "That was a dastardly thing you did to call a man, and cut him for what you heard was said."
