the most talked-about motion picture — an unforgettable experience

FRANK SINATRA · ELEANOR PARKER · KIM NOVAK

Otto Preminger's THE MAN WITH THE GOLDEN ARM

REBELLING AGAINST prison guards, Rocky Graziano (Paul Newman, left) is stopped from using the guard's gun by fellow prisoners. It's one of the exciting scenes in "Somebody Up There Likes Me," M-G-M fimization of Graziano's best-seller autobiography, co-starring Newman and Pier Angeli now playing at the Harlem Theatre.

Graziano life story at Harlem

The story of Rocky Graziano, whose rose from an environment of squalor reform school and the New York City Penitentiary to become not onl, mid dleweight champion of the world but a regenerated human being, is unfolded on the Harlem screen in M-G-M's "Somebody Up There Likes Me."

Based on his autobiography, with Paul Newman portraying Graziano and Pier Angeli cast as Norma, the girl who married him and who was largely responsible for his "turning the leaf," "Somebody Up There Likes Me" provides engrossing drama in its story of a no good punk who was determined to be top dog.

Rocky Graziano's real name was Rocco Barbella. An incorrigible hoodlum, street fighter, petty thief, gang leader and cop dodger, he was the toughest kid on the East Side. Up to the age of twenty he spent more than half his youth in various jails, detention homes, reform schools and the prison on Rikers Island. But the turning point in his life came after he had served nine months in the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth for being absent without leave from the Army and for knocking out first a corporal and then a captain. When he left Leavenworth, Rocco Barbella was to become the professional fighter Rocky Graziano.

'King Kong' on Met screen

Kong, gigantic prehistoric ape who created a sensation some years ago, returns to thrill audiences once more in "King Kong," RKO Radio re-release, now playing the Met Theatre.

Featuring Fay Wray, Robert Armstrong and Bruce Cabot, "King Kong" tells the hair-raising story of the screen's most famous monster. He is fifty feet tall, his tread makes the earth, and his hands are capable of crushing an airplane to matchwood. His strength has flourished since before man was born and he ruled, by the right of might, a lost island that time had forgotten.

Also on the bill at the Met Theatre is "I Walked With A Zombie," spine-tingling drama about a nurse who goes to a remote West Indian island to care for a mystery patient who is actually a "zombie," and finds herself enmeshed in voodoo sorcery. This RKO Radio re-release features James Ellison, Frances Dee and Tom Conway.

Ferrer stars in Royal film

One of the most amazing tales in all the history of human courage "Cockleshell Heroes," starring Jose Ferrer and Trevor Howard, currently plays the double feature bill at the Royal in CinemaScope and Technicolor.

It is the astounding story of ten "Canoe" commandos who desperately travelled through 70 miles of enemy waters to blast a giant armada from their own frail craft.

FERRER appears as the major who dreams up the wild idea of taking a small attack force in kayak canoes up a river in France during World War II to destroy the fleet of enemy ships anchored in Bourdeaux harbor.

"Uranium Boom," second attraction, is the explosive story of today's battle for the most deadly treasure of the atomic age. Starring Dennis Morgan and Patricia Medina, it tells the inside story of the atom age boomtowns where desperate men battle for the most fabulous jackpot in all history —Uranium.

Thrill show come to New Albert

A double - barrel thrill show is in store for action fans when American-International's "Girls in Prison" and "Hot Rod Girl" come to the New Albert Theatre.

"Girls in Prison" stars Richard Denning, Joan Taylor, Adele Jergens and Lance Fuller. In "Hot Rod Girl" are Lori Nelson, John Smith and Chuck Connors."

LA VAUGHAN, CANNONBALL Julian "Cannonball" Adderley, saxophone sensation, will hold forth at Carr's Beach tonight (Friday, Aug. 17). Following closely on his heels will be the Divine Sarah "Sassy" Vaughan Sunday afternoon.

Every Friday and Saturday night, a big beach party is held at Carr's with lots of fun for everyone.

NOW PLAYING

'The Proud and Profane' now playing at Regent

Powerful portrayals of two absorbing personalities by William Holden and Deborah Kerr, backed by Frank Sinatra's great handling of delicate themes, have made "The Proud and Profane," now playing at the Regent Theatre, a deeply-moving motion picture. It fulfills all the promise of great story, sensitive performances, and masterful direction and production that made it one of the year's most eagerly-awaited films.

The gallery of arresting portraits headed by Holden's and Miss Kerr's is perfectly rounded out by a supporting cast of Thelma Ritter, Dewey Martin and William Redfield, while the smaller parts are without exception expertly handled.

This time is World War II during the island-invasion phase of the Pacific operations; the setting, New Caledonia, simmering in the backwash of war and a breeding spot for the taut emotions that trouble behind-the-lines personnel.

Miss Kerr, a Red Cross volunteer and a war widow, is just the wrong kind of person to be stationed there. She has put her emotions on ice, but they're ready to explode at any time.

Holden, a Marine Raiders Colonel, supplies the spark that ignites Miss Kerr's fuse.

Thelma Ritter, the local Red Cross supervisor, tries to keep things under control, but they take a turn none of them expects. Between Holden and Miss Kerr grows a love that overrides their initial animosity and finally causes them to throw away all caution and restraint. Too late, Miss Kerr learns that Holden is married and she is caught in a desperate situation.

Adah K. Jenkins' MOMENTS MUSICAL

Music throughout the ages has made steady development and progress thru its teachers. It went hand in hand with religious training through the ancient civilizations of the Orient, in Greece and Rome and during the Middle Ages.

As early as the 4th century, schools for singing were established that were to develop later into famous centers of instruction in religious music.

Many of Europe's greatest musicians were also its foremost instructors.

Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Liszt, and Chopin were among the masters who imbued their pupils with the great traditions of music.

To mention a few noted instructors: Carl Czerny, who taught Liszt; Stephen Heller, celebrated as a teacher in Paris during the 17th century; Ignaz Moscheles, instructor of Mendelssohn and Muzio Clementi (of the famed sonatinas), the highly respected Roman teacher.

WITH THE advance of public education in the United States, music became a regular part of the curriculm, supplementing private instruction and music taught in the conservatories which sprang up in New England and in the Middle Atlantic States.

Instruction in various branches of music and in the latest arrival "Music Education" became standard branches in leading universities and colleges, many of which have highly developed music departments.

Baltimore has been fortunate in attracting to its institutions many musicians and music educators of high cliber.

Among them is Dr. R. Hayes Strider, whose appointment as director of the music department of Morgan State College, was announced recently by President Martin Jenkins.

Dr. Strider, who has been a member of the music faculty at Morgan for some years, holds bachelors and masters degrees from Fisk University and won his doctorate in Education from New York University last year.

He was a member of the music faculty at the Juilliard Institution this summer. In addition to a broad experience in secondary schools and colleges in the West and South, he was Chief Warrant Officer Band Commander, of Headquarters Band at Fort Bragg, N.C., during World War II.

Along with a busy teaching career Dr. Strider has found time to compose.

HIS "MODERN SUITE" for band was performed by the Boston University Symphonic Band in 1956 at the Regional Convention of College Band Directors, Eastern Division, held at Boston.

An outstanding contribution to practical material for band leaders, is his compilation of field-charts for massed presentations. These were the result of "Circus of Bands," done by Morgan State College Marching Band, with eight secondary schools bands from various Maryland communities, including Baltimore.

As chairman of the Annual Fine Arts Festival Committee at Morgan, Dr. Strider has develop this event, now in its 6th year, into one of the leading music education events in the state.

With hundreds of students from this city and schools throughout Maryland participating in the "All State Sing Play," this excellently planned and operated program has attracted notable educators and musicians around the country.

No small credit for this success is due to R. Hayes Strider's ability in organizing and to a genial, unruffled personality, as well as skill in dealing with modern youth.

Realizing the value of music at the community level he has given generously of his own time through the participation of Morgan's Symphonic Band in local and state events.

Last year he served as one of the adjudicators at the University of Maryland All-State Music Contest.

Musicians, teachers and laymen may well be proud of this progressive and able educator and wish him success in his new endeavors.

AMERICAN MUSIC is indebted deeply to the many performers, composers and teachers who have come to us from Europe. Baltimore has attracted a goodly number, many of whom have contributed significantly to the musical scene.

Among them is Prof. Herman Schwarz, who celebrated recently his 70th birthday. This dynamo of energy, belying his years, is a native of Berlin, Germany. His father was director of a conservatory and his mother a concert singer of note.

Prof. Schwarz began his musical career with a piano recital at the age of six. He graduated from the Music High School in Berlin-Charlottenburg and continued his studies with a number of eminent musicians, including Richard Strauss.

His teaching career began at the Conservatory Schwarwenka in Berlin, where he also conducted the Mozart Orchestra and for 18 years directed the Opera Comique and the Lotzing Opera Company. During that period he went on numerous piano and organ concert tours.

UPON COMING to this hemisphere he gave organ recitals at the World's Fair in 1938 and over 200 broadcasts at Havana (Cuba), where he was organist at St. Fraziskus Cloisters. He spent several years as musical therapist at Creetmore State Hospital in N.Y. and Clythewood Sanitorium in Greenwich, Conn.

In 1946 Prof. Schwarz was invited to teach at the Baltimore Institute of Musical Arts, where he later became dean. At present his is director of the Schwarz Studios in Musical Arts, located at 21 W. Preston Street, where he and his talented wife, Mrs. Kate Schwarz, are instructors in voice, piano, organ and theory.

Baltimoreans also know him for his excellent student recitals and performances of the Herman Schwarz Choral Society, which was organized by him several years ago.

With characteristic energy, he continues composing choral, piano and organ music and recently completed the score of an opera "Lil Joe," based on a book written by Waters Turpin, Baltimore author and member of the English faculty of Morgan State College.

Congratulations to Prof. Schwarz, not only on his birthday but on his contribution to the cultural life of our city!

THE ANNUAL concert by the combined Concert Bands and Baltimore City Chorus was held Sunday in Grove A at Druid Hill Park. Charles E. Gwynn, conducted the first part of the program, which featured the bands in "Silver Jubilee," March Supper's "Light Calvary Overture" and Duke Ellington's Rythmoods."

Marshal Waters, baritone sang two groups of songs which have become beloved classics: "Beautiful Dreamer", "Trees", "One Alone" and Mallette's "Lord's Prayer."

Under the baton of Harrison Dodd the bands played several marches, "Zampa Overture," "Roses of Picardy" and favorite selections by Victor Herbert, Weldon J. Irvine led community singing.

The concert, which was presented by the Bureau of Music, Earl F. Forman, superintendent, was attended by close to a thousand citizens.
