'We don't have anyone who saw you drive while drunk'

John Lucius Taylor, 31, 1800 block W. Saratoga St., was fined $125 Thursday in Traffic Court by Magistrate E. Everett Lane on charges of failure to stop after an accident and reckless driving.

He was found not guilty on a charge of drunken driving.

"What you did was very foolish, but we don't have anyone to testify that he saw you drive while drunk," Magistrate Lane told the defendant.

According to police Mr. Taylor backed his truck into the car of the Rev. Arthur Boykin in the 1800 block of W. Saratoga St. at 10:30 p.m. July 20. He agreed to pay for the $181 damage of the pastor's car.

Boys in purse-snatching case held on $1500 bail

"I was going to Pennsylvania Ave., when at Eutaw and Wilson Sts., a fellow snatched my handbag. I had it on my left arm. I didn't see his face."

"I had in it a locket, a necklace, a pair of earrings and a compact."

Miss Dorothy Tarrant, 900 block N. Carrollton Ave. was testifying Tuesday in Northwestern District Court.

CHARGED WITH robbing Miss Tarrant of her $3 pocketbook, which also contained 45 cents, were two teen-agers, James Young, 16, 1300 block N. Fremont Ave. and Charles James Cottman, 16, 1800 block Little Walsh St.

A third boy, a juvenile was held for Juvenile Court. Sgt. Joseph Szczepanski said that a fourth person, a 28-year-old man is still being sought in connection with the crime.

Neither youth testified. Norman Young, father of James, said however: "He's never been hungry a day in his life. He set out the trash for his mother and went on with a gang."

Free X-rays draw a crowd

The lady stood on the corner and with her left foot drew an invisible circle on the sidewalk.

The lady was obviously making up her mind about something and having made up her mind she took a deep breath and headed for the white trailer parked in the middle of the 200 block Myrtle Ave. on Wednesday afternoon.

She gave her name to a clerk in the front of the trailer and then moved back to the rear of the vehicle where she stood before a machine which could have been used as a prop in a science fiction show, but was actually an X-ray machine.

In a few moments an X-ray picture had been taken of the lady's chest—a service that cost her not a nickel and was available to anyone who wanted it.

* * *

FROM NOW until September 14 the above scene will be duplicated in the area as the mobile X-ray unit makes the largest community survey of the year.

The area is bounded by Fallsway, Pratt St., Fremont Ave., and Franklin St., and is receiving such concentrated attention because of the relatively high number of cases therein.

It doesn't take long to have one of the chest X-rays made, and on Wednesday the people were passing through in a steady stream.

* * *

ONE ELDERLY gentleman, however, threatened to disrupt procedures. He had been asked by Ira C. Davis, the technician in charge, to drop his suspenders.

Somehow or the other, in the transmission of the message, something was garbled and the gentleman started to drop not only his suspenders but also what they were holding up.

Fortunately he was stopped in time, but it did remind Mr. Davis of another time in Hagerstown, where he wasn't so fortunate.

"I asked this fellow to drop his suspenders and he dropped his pants right there in front of a department store where we had the unit parked."

This did not happen on Wednesday and the X-rays moved smoothly along.

When things are rolling smoothly, the unit can handle close to 200 persons a hour. Anyone wanting an X-ray is invited to visit the unit which will be located at the following places:

Its either watch convention or don't watch television

Politics replaced baseball, "Studio One," and a lot of other shows this week as the three local television stations carried lengthy telecasts from Chicago, site of the 1956 Democratic National Convention.

Television officials, confidently stated that more people saw the convention proceedings this year than at any other time, which is quite possible since about the only way not to see the convention was not to have a TV set.

Here in Baltimore, Democrats, Republicans, and independents, watched the TV spectacle, with resulting emotions running the gamut from those who saw everything to those who went to sleep right in the middle of another speech.

* * *

TYPICAL OF the viewers was Miss Anna Bennett, 1520 Druid Hill Ave., a church secretary.

"Yes, I do watch the televising of the Democratic Convention, as often as possible. I was impressed by the ruling they made about insulting minority races.

"They said anyone addressing the convention and using forbidden words would not be allowed to go on.

"They are aware too, that they have got to do something about the Supreme Court decision. They are afraid if they don't they will lose some of their votes."

* * *

ANOTHER COMMENT on the convention came from Gloria Lockerman, the spelling whiz, who should know since she was right there on the stage at the conclusion of the keynote speech.

Said Gloria:

"I had a wonderful time." Then there was Mrs. Doreen Berry, 1309 Linden Ave., who had this to say:

"I think the most interesting part was when they started talking about how stocks went up under the Republicans. I've been looking at it every night but Wednesday night I fell asleep."

Llewellyn W. Woodford, attorney, 17 S. Gay St., said he viewed parts of the televised proceedings. He was not too pleased over the Civil Rights plank approved Wednesday night. On this point he said:

"As far as the Civil Rights plank is concerned, I think the Democrats have tended to show they're more interested in party unity than in the moral aspects of the thing."

* * *

JOHN SMART of 721 W. Fairmount Ave., stated:

"I was impressed by the convention because everyone came out satisfied.

Naturally the civil rights issue was the most important thing, but I think they came through with a pretty good platform.

The convention was so good that it caused me to lose sleep. When I started looking at it on television I forgot all about the time."

* * *

EARL GILMORE mortician, 519 Mosher St., commented:

"Sure I like the convention even if it did cause me to miss looking at the baseball game. I was impressed by it.

"They didn't get into a fight on the floor over the platform and that was good. I wanted them to stay away from that."

MRS. CALLIE HINTON, 2212 Druid Hill Ave., housewife:

"My television set went bad a few days ago and I regret that very much. I have been listening to the Democratic Convention on radio as often as possible.

"Last year I watched it on television. Watching the convention makes it much clearer. We just can't give out opinion on the spur of the moment. I have to think this over first.

"I always vote for the one I think is best suited. I know that when a man is campaigning he can't always say exactly what he feels.

* * *

MISS MATILDA REED, 840 Whitmore Ave.:

"I looked at it the other night but it put me to sleep."

Mrs. Eunice Young, 1152 N. Carey St., hadn't seen the convention but her reason was simple and easy to understand. "I was driving my cab all the week, trying to find the barking dog.

Unable to identify one yap from another, he took out summons for nearly everyone in the block.

* * *

IN THE police court, Magistrate Meredith Hoffmaster, a dog - owner himself, came to the aid of man's best friend by reprimanding the complaining tenant.

The magistrate advised the man that a dog's duty is to protect his home and to do this he has the right to bark at strangers.

As for the dogs, well, the moral to this "tail" is: He who yelps last, yelps best of all.

"HI, UP THERE"—Montress Bowens, looks up at lifeguard (whom readers can see in last three columns on this page) while playing in the water at Carr's Beach, Montress, a fourth grader at School No. 161, is the daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Bowens, 804 W. Lexington St.

Sir Stork wins out, baby born in taxicab

"I was driving my cab as fast as I could (in the city) about 35 miles per hour trying to get her to City Hospitals, but the baby was born just as I turned into Lombard St. I didn't have to stop the cab."

Mrs. Jennie Fincher, 3307 Remley St., cab driver, was relating her unsuccessful race with the stork, last week.

Six-pound baby boy Dowd, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dowd, 815 Dallas St., made his appearance in the cab about 10 minutes before he reached the hospital.

Mrs. Dowd was assisted by her mother-in-law, Mrs. Minnie Dowd, who is gradually becoming an expert in this field.

"I wasn't nervous at all," the senior Mrs. Dowd said. "I had to help another daughter with her baby not too long ago. And it happened to me once, years ago. I have four children."

* * *

THE MOTHER and baby were treated at City Hospitals and released two hours later. hospital officials told the AFRO.

As for Mr. Dowd, he was working at the Gas and Electric Co. when the baby was born. "He was surprised to learn of a new son when he came home," Mrs. Dowd said.

It was the mother-in-law who hailed Mrs. Fincher at the corner of Gay and Caroline St.

While Mrs. Dowd and her son were in the hospital, Mrs. Fincher and the senior Mrs. Dowd washed out the cab.

Mrs. Fincher has been driving a cab for two months. She is the wife of Robert Fincher.

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK, says Mrs. Jennie Fincher, cab driver, who tried, unsuccessfully, to race Sir

'Doc' Woingust recalls 'Old Baltimore' days

Adding his memories to the "Wake Up, Old Baltimore" series this week is Creston "Doc" Woingust. Under the general heading "Do You Remember," he lists the following:

"Jim Robinson's Cafe at Lexington and Forrest St. It was owned by smiling, 250-pound Jim Robinson.

"Coots Jones, who had the bar before Gans won his fight in Goldfield, Nev. built the Hotel at Lexington and Calvin Sts.

"The oldest club in Baltimore above the Goldfield was the Middle Section Club, headed by Eddie Myers.

"I remember the AFRO when it was on St. Paul St. I sold them at the time. (D.) Arnett (Murphy) was a mere lad. Bill Tabbs was there also.

* * *

THE WENONAH Theater on Monument St.—later called the Star Thater, was owned by Thomas Kane. Eddie Green, the late comedian of "Duffy's Tavern" fame, got his start at this movie house as a boy magician assisted by yours truly.

"Walter and William Midge Langley were produce merchants. Walter Langley and his sons were at the foot of Broadway at Broadway Market. He was also a partner of the late Captain George W. Brown who owned the Starlight Steamer and Brown's Grove.

"William Midge Langley, the brother who now is retired, was located on Camden and South Charles.

"Eubie Blake lived in the 1500 block of Jefferson St. near Dallas. Lyston Taylor, a young pianist, lived next to Walter Langley at 1418 Jefferson St.

* * *

"STEPHEN COOPER, who had a large hauling business, lived in the 1400 block of Jefferson St.

"Do you remember Alfred Stanley's Barber Shop on McEldery—and Trad Henry's Barber Shop in the 600 block of Dallas St. and Josiah Diggs when he was a salesman for C. D. Kennys and lived in the 1400 block of Jefferson St.?

"The Rev. Fred Allen of the 500 block Short St., lager changed to Somerset St., was the father of the late Dr. George S. Allen—the city's first colored coroner.

"Do you remember Dr. William 'Horse and Buggy' Harris of the 1400 block of Jefferson? He was the brother of the great band leader Charlie Harris.

"And do you remember the fine, fiery doctor from Sierra Leone, W. Africa, Dr. E. Mayfield Boyle? He once lived in the 1400 block of Jefferson and then on Caroline St.

* * *

"DO YOU remember the late Dr. John Prather, the first colored immigration doctor? He also lived in the 1300 block of Jefferson St.

"Do you remember Tom and Harriett Hilliard's China Store on the northwest corner of Orleans and Spring Sts. They also sold coal and wood in the rear of the store."

And with the closing words, "I'm just a youngster but-Gee I can remember things!" Doc Woingust closes his letter.

If you have memories of some of the sights, sounds, individuals and incidents of the days gone by, just write them in to "Wake Up, Old Baltimore" and your memories will be printed and shared with Baltimoreans both old and new.

'HELLO, OVER THERE'—That's what Joseph Lee, lifeguard at Carr's Beach, seems to be saying to swimmer whom readers can see across this page in the first two columns. Mr. Lee, who lives in Washington, has been a lifeguard for 15 years. During the winter, he works at the recreation center at Crownsville Hospital.

Dog's bark hounds tenant; owners summoned

Every dog has his day, "tis said, and the canines in the 2500 block of Madison Ave. had theirs last Saturday in Northern Police Court.

That is, their owners and a few non-dog owners were summoned to the station house to tell which dog, in the block, had the loud bark that was annoying a white tenant in a nearby apartment house.

According to the residents, (all of them home owners) the tenant had scouted through the alley of the block, earlier in

'Enough to make you mad,' says young snowball seller

"A lot of kids come by and say they want a snowball, but you know one thing, they don't want any snowball.

"That's enough to make you mad."

It was pleasantly cool under the big tree in front of 311 Cherry Hill Rd., but Frank Mashack, 15, was getting a little warm under the collar as he spoke of the difficulties involved in being a dispenser of snowballs.

* * *

JUST FOR the record, snowball is a concoction of shaved ice and syrup, with the latter poured over the former, and the resulting delicacy being either sipped or eaten with a spoon.

And snowballs are just what Frank, his mother, Mrs. Louise Marshack, and his three sisters, sell from the stand located in front of their home.

In fact, for the past two years the Marshacks have been providing a goodly portion of the Cherry Hill Community with the icy treat, and in that time, Frank as a good businessman, has learned what his customers like.

"Most of them ask for Davy Crockett," said Frank as he picked up a bottle of the reddish mixture.

"This," he said in explanation, "tastes like strawberry, but they call it Davey Crockett."

It was plain that the young Mr. Crockett wasn't quite sure why they called it "Davy Crockett" but being a good businessman he was content to let it go at that.

"Next to Davey Crockett they like lemon and peppermint," said Frank.

* * *

ON A TYPICAL morning this week, Frank had sold 15 snowballs in a short period of time and he promptly jingled the money kept safely in a baking powder tin.

"We use 150 to 200 pounds of ice a day," said Frank with a smile that made it clear that everyone should know that all that ice adds up to a heap of snowballs.

When Frank is busy, which is most of the time, he doesn't talk too much. All he does is grind the ice in an electric shaver, spoon it into a paper cup put on the desire flavor or flavors, and hand it to the customer with a great big smile.

Frank is a 9A pupil at Cherry Hill Junior High No. 180 and one of these days he hopes to be a painter.

"Not a house painter," he is careful to note, "but a painter who poaints pictures and travels."

* * *

FRANK SAID his mother acts as treasurer for the family business and the proceeds are used to help the children buy things for themselves.

It may seem a bit strange on a hot summer day to find a youngster happily shaving ice, pouring flavors, and making change for a group of tots that barely come up to his knees, but Frank is perfectly happy to be doing just this.

The reason is quite simple.

JUNIOR BATHING BEAUTY — Cute 22-month-old Sheila Marshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marshall, 1022 Edmondson Ave., flashes a big smile for AFRO while playing in the
