POLICE COURT

The following cases were tried by Magistrate Benjamin L. Aaron at Southwestern:

Assault and Battery, where did you get that raggedy car? He talked about my mother and we fought.

Disorderly conduct — Mrs. Mae Williams, 19, of the 200 block N. Stricker, told police when charged with kicking Charles Johnson, of the 200 block W. North Ave.

Pending the release of Johnson from a Pennsylvania Hospital where he is undergoing treatment of a disfigured face, the disorderly charge was postponed until Aug. 7. Miss Williams was released in custody of her mother Tuesday.

"You're young, and I hate to send you to graduate school where there are no women students, but you should have thought about what you were doing."

Those were the words Magistrate Harry Cole addressed to Daniel E. Waters, 18, of the first block Mantua St., Tuesday.

Arrested for creating a disturbance at a dance given at the 1100 block W. Baltimore St., Waters was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Patrolman Elmer Carter testified that Waters's mouth was among a group of boys and girls who had "taken over" the dance attended by about 300 persons. "I knew he's a mean one, but he's big too and he's got to be tender to bear that up," the officer said.

CHARGED WITH breaking and entering an apartment of Joseph Harker in the 300 block N. Pearl St., and taking clothes, jewelry, trousers and six pairs of shoes, valued at $1,000, Leroy Long, 19, tenant at the above address, was ordered held on $5,000 bail Tuesday.

Mr. Harker testified that Hatcher forced a lock on his door to gain entrance to his apartment. Some of the stolen articles police said were found in Hatcher's home.

Allen J. Aye, 23, of the 2500 block Frank St., and William R. McKee, 22, of the 2600 block Huron St., were held in bail of $2,000 each Tuesday on charges of breaking and entering a chemical company in the 2100 block Washington Blvd.

In a signed statement given to police, McKee admitted that he and Aye had stolen a quantity of chemicals which they said they sold the bleach in the Mt. Winans area and divided the profits.

Arrested for allegedly breaking and entering a television shop in the 1500 block W. Baltimore St., Joseph Sparrow, 40, of the 900 block Fremont Ave., was ordered held on $1,000 bail Monday.
