5,000 at Carr's greet 'the Rod'

The 5,000 persons at Carr's Beach Saturday night got a sneak preview of how the man from Mars might looked on the banks of the Chesapeake Bay.

The occasion was Maurice (Hot Rod) Hulbert's annual birthday celebration.

"The Rod" was in rare form too. He and "Miss Out-of-Space of 1956" (LaFathia Elliott) came out of the black at-night in costumes designed to simulate what the best dressed men and women are wearing on the other planets.

The body of "Miss Out-Of-Space" was painted gold, with gold wings on her head and heels.

Hot Rod, of course, was bedecked appropriately in his space suit. The jargon of his fans described him as "mad," "The most," "The utmost," "crazy," etc.

PRACTICALLY everybody at the beach was lined along the waterfront awaiting the arrival of Hot Rod and "Miss Out-Of-Space."

After their arrival, there was a 3-minute introductory of fireworks.

Hot Rod acknowledged the clamor of the crowd and "Miss-Out-Of-Space" proceeded to give a rousing performance which was free - wheeling dance that was, appropriately, out of this world.

One onlooker was moved to remark, "Well, I'll be . . . this guy really meant what he's been saying." Apparently he thought Rod was kidding when he said he and the fair lady would land on the Chesapeake in the seaplane and change to a yacht to join his fans.

Later that night the crowd jumped to the music of Big Jay McNeely, the popular tenor man whose gyrations also stamp him as a competent acrobat. Danny Taylor, the talented young baritone, was also on hand to liven things up.

The dance is ended but memory lingers

The dance is ended but the memory lingers on.

It was two Saturdays ago that a group of dancers gathered from Washington; Philadelphia, New York, and points in between, for a dance at a hall on Pennsylvania Ave., near Mosher St., and the Avenue has not been quite the same since then.

Police and spectators report that when the dancers started to arrive they were more than a little surprised to find that a number of them were men — but they were evening dresses.

The procession of dancers with their silks and satins and their carefully done hair stylings, created, to put it mildly, a sensation.

Police estimated that there were at least 300 fascinated spectators who watched the dance goers arrive in a succession of high powered cars.

As one officer remarked:

"There were more people outside than there were in."

POLICE ADVISED a number of the dancers not to enter the hall and shortly after midnight they ordered the "dancing stopped entirely, and the colorfully garbed crowd took its departure."

One officer later said:

"They called that their annual dance, well that was their first and last annual dance."

Soldier to appear with musical troop

Sgt. Daniel E. Brown of 2104 Walbrook Ave. is the featured drummer for "Rolling Along of 1956," a military musical revue.

His past experience includes musical comedies of his own, Morgan State College Band, King Draper, Tracy, and the Baltimore City Orchestra.

Sgt. Brown entered the All Army Entertainment Contests as a member of the "Tamettes," a musical group from United States Army Europe. He is assigned to the Third Armored Cavalry Regiment band.

"Rolling Along" in 1955 gave 76 performances for more than 100,000 troops. This year, besides appearing in the United States, the troop will entertain soldiers in Alaska, Europe, the Far East, Hawaii and the Caribbean.

Troy re-matched with Jerry Luedee

NEW YORK—Willie Troy, of Washington, D.C. and Jerry Luedee, of New Haven, Conn., have been signed for a return bout at St. Nicholas Arena for Monday night, August 13.

The two boys fought a sizling ten-rounder at St. Nicks on July 16; Troy was the winner of that one on a split decision.

'He's my baby boy,' somber mother says

"He is my baby boy and I feel that he is a good boy, but he just got lied up with bad company . . . I hope it will change Charles' whole life and that he will stay away from bad company."

Mrs. Addie Banks, 1621 McCullah St., expressed this hope for the rehabilitation of her son, Charles M. Banks, 19, sentenced to 2 years in the Maryland Reformatory for Males last week for robbery.

In an interview with the AFRO Monday Mrs. Banks, a widow, described in a somber voice how she tried to steer her youngest son clear of the youths he went around with.

"I asked him why don't you stick with your two brothers, but he said they're too slow," Mrs. Banks said.

BANKS AND James H. Bristol, 29, 2411 Montebello Terrace, Morgan Park were sent to prison by Judge Cornelius P. Munday, who told the court, "My duty is to protect the public interest."

The youths were convicted for the brutal beating of Wendell Robins, 29, 2038 Druid Hill Ave., whom they allegedly robbed of $25 on May 13. Mr. Robins suffered a fractured jaw and the loss of seven teeth in the hassle.

Mrs. Banks described Bristol's parents as "very nice people."

She said she plans to visit her son soon, adding:

"He said he doesn't want us to come very often because he will feel homesick, and want to come home."

Adah K. Jenkins' MOMENTS MUSICAL

A - ROVIN': A fortnight at Philadelphia Fellowship Farm, near Pottstown, Pa., and the always delightful experience of community singing after lunch and following the inspiring Hilltop Silence.

Led by Sonya Garfinkle and her autoharp, we joined in songs of many lands and religions. Each year at the Farm reveals new songs, left as parting gifts, by visitors from Asia, Africa, India and Europe.

One of the new features is the "reading" of musicals and plays, with incidental music. Among these was "Finian's Rainbow," a broadway success and "The Unborn Child," which is a program of Philadelphia Fellowship Chair's Singing City.

This was given first at the Philadelphia Academy of Music. Since then it has been performed by the choir in a number of Pennsylvania and New Jersey communities as well as in Washington, Baltimore and Virginia.

"Count Me In," based on the story of Pottstown, Pa. and written by Nettie Mae Merrill Hayre, was also programmed one evening. This was first done by the Philadelphia High School Fellowship group. The audience participates as members of the cast, with narrator and music furnished by the choir. Miss Garfinkle, who is manager of Singing City, leads the production.

THE INTEREST of a number of choral conductors will be centered on the Choral Workshop at the Farm, from Aug. 20 thru Sept. 3rd. The Boys' Choir, of St. John's R. C. Church, Reading, Pa., will be at the Farm for three days as a demonstration group.

Miss Lois Hannford, head of music therapy at Cedar Grove Hospital N.J., will be the faculty specialist in that area. Elaine Brown, director of Philadelphia Fellowship Choir and "Singing City" is conducting the workshop.

There will be sessions in voice conducting choir, autoharp, recorder, music theory and community singing.

The results of the workshop will be heard in a concert on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 2nd, at the Farm. Interested persons are asked to contact Miss Garfinkle, at Philadelphia Fellowship House Farm, R.D. No. 3, Pottstown, Pa.

AFRO "Cornbread Lady," was honored at a musical and reception held at the Madison Ave. YWCA last Sunday afternoon. The honoree is a native of East Baltimore, having been born there Feb. 15, 1915 of Mrs. Voyd Nixon and the late Rev. L. C. Nixon. She graduated from Dunbar High School, where she acquired an abiding interest in music.

Mrs. Olivia Bates was mistress of ceremonies for the musical, with the Rev. Dr. Marcus Graham, pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church, offering the invocation. In the biographical sketch, mention was made of Mrs. Reid's life - long friends and also her teachers; including Mesdames Laura Boulding, Mary Kendall, Pauline Jones, Ethel Brown, Lottie Chase, Mildred Seaborne and Berlena Rector.

Greetings were extended by Mesdames Mildred King, Irene Evans and Alice Young from Mrs. Reid's Neighborhood Block Club and Mrs. Ethel Woodland, judge of elections and civic leader.

Mrs. Florence Snoden, spoke on behalf of the Ideal Benefit Society and of the Sampson Brooks Daughters of Elks. The Eastern Star was represented by Mrs. Naomi Julius, Grand Worthy Matron. The Rev. and Mrs. O. Graham presented felicitations from the Carribbean Club.

ROBERTA BACOAT, soprano soloist and a friend of long standing of the Reid family, sang "The Lord's Prayer" and Mascagni's "Ave Maria." "I Need Thee Every Hour" was rendered by Thomas Green, tenor. Audrey Cyrus, was piano soloist and accompanist, as well playing Chopin's "Polonaise in A major" and Debussy's "Clair de Lune."

Among those present were Ronald Reid, Mrs. Voyd Reid, husband and mother and Mrs. Fanniejoe Reid; Arleen Burton, Mr. and Mrs. George Holly Patty, Olivia Kirby and Desire Reid.

Loophole detected in Arlington order

Alexandria, Va. (NNPA) —An appeal from the ruling of Federal Judge Albert V. Bryan that the Arlington County School Board must end racial segregation in Arlington public schools by next January would be futile.

Attorneys for the school board said Wednesday they will probably appeal. But they admitted that all they would gain by an appeal would be a stay of the injunction.

"But the matter will probably be settled long before January," said James H. Simmonds, attorney for the school board. "The Circuit Court of Appeals is very prompt in hearing appeals."

Judge Bryan granted an injunction in the Federal District Court here against the Arlington County School Board in a suit filed by the NAACP. It is made effective Jan. 31, 1957, for elementary schools and September, 1957 for junior and senior high schools.

JUDGE BRYAN said he has not ruled that all classes must necessarily be integrated, but only that segregation as such cannot be enforced.

Taking notice of the call issued for a special session of the court by Gov. Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia General Assembly, beginning Aug. 27, he explained that the school board may need time to conform to any powers are that may be prescribed by the General Assembly at that session.

The opinion made it clear that conditions peculiar to Arlington County were weighed in fixing the time limit for the

-Arlington schools

the framework of law."

He asked for dismissal of the suit as "premature" on the ground that the persons bringing it had not first sought relief through state administrative procedures.

OLIVER W. HILL of Richmond, an NAACP attorney, replied that to have done so would have been a "vain thing" since "it is a matter of common knowledge that all authorities of Virginia will use all lawful means possible to prevent any desegregation."

Mr. Hill vigorously attacked various moves made by the state in its efforts to maintain segregated schools. It is true, he said, the Virginia General Assembly will meet Aug. 27, "but it's certainly evident that the governor is not going to ask them to do anything to ease segregation."

In calling the special session, Gov. Thomas B. Stanley said he would ask the General Assembly to authorize the withholding of public funds from any desegregated school district in Virginia.

EXHAUSTING state administrative remedies, as suggested by Almond, Hill said, would simply be a time consuming and vain attempt by the plaintiffs "to get what the (Supreme) Court has already said they are entitled to."

Hill said Virginia had been "dictatorial" about integration. The Arlington County School Board had adopted a plan for partial integration beginning this fall but was compelled to junk it after the General Assembly passed a law taking away from Arlington the right to elect its school board.

Judge Bryan interrupted Hill's argument to ask school board attorneys to furnish him with information about the Arlington school population and the county's school facilities.

Figures estimating that a total of 21,030 white pupils and 1,445 colored pupils will be enrolled when schools open Sept. 4 were later read into the record.

JAMES H. SIMMONS, an Arlington attorney representing the school board, argued against the injunction on the ground that it would "put the Arlington school board under a gun."

Assistant Attorney General Henry T. Wickham said the suit against the school board was, "in fact, a suit against the state" and that the state cannot be sued unless it gives its permission. No permission was given, he said.

Spottswood W. Robinson 3rd, also of Richmond and an NAACP attorney, disagreed. He said the school board has a corporate status and can be sued.

Life with Papa means never a dull moment

"Papa came upstairs and said: 'Pauline get down the downstairs beating on Essie.' Papa got an iron pipe and said: 'I'm going to kill him tonight. He's not going to beat my granddaughter."

Mrs. Pauline Monk, 44, 900 block Linden Ave., was explaining to Magistrate Linwood G. Koger, Sr., in Northwestern the early Monday morning 'free for all' at her home.

Algie Conaway, 27, and John Hamilton, 40, both of the 1100 block Park Ave. who were visiting on Linden Ave., were charged with striking each other.

The two women present, Mrs. Monk and her 20-year-old daughter, Miss Essie Estes, also of the Linden Ave. address, were charged with disorderly conduct.

MRS. MONK explained that what started out as a lovers' spat between her daughter and Algie, ended up with each man for himself and the police for them all.

This occurred after her father "Papa," intervened, by giving a baseball bat and an iron pipe to the male defendants.

Police said: "When we arrived on the scene, Papa was in bed asleep."

After Mrs. Monk admitted "Papa" had been drinking wine, Magistrate Koger grinned: "Papa' didn't hit anybody. He just furnished the tools. He must have been drinking wine down the iron pipe."

Jail sentences for both Hamilton and Conway were suspended. Charges against Mrs. Monk and her daughter, Essie, were dismissed. However, Magistrate Koger quipped: "If 'Papa' ever comes before me, I'm going to put him away for awhile."
