her encounters with Bishop Grace, over a period of years.

As she gave a minute, detailed description of Bishop Grace as he allegedly appeared years ago, mumblings of disbelief came from the spectators.

Despite the warning from Judge Holtzoff against addressing his followers, Bishop Grace, upon leaving the courtroom for upon the recess, announced:

"I feel like preaching." His members exclaimed, "Yes, Daddy."

"All liars shall have their part of the fire," Grace continued, as his attorney, Franklyn Yasmer unsuccessfully sought to restrain him.

"They shall die in fire and brimstone," said the Bishop. "The love of money is the root of all evil."

BISHOP GRACE admonished reporters because several newspaper accounts of his trial omitted reference to the mild heart attack suffered by Max well Ostrow, one of Mrs. Royster's attorneys last Friday.

Mr. Ostrow was excused from the courtroom and was later admitted to Georgetown Hospital.

"Tell the truth so God will bless you," Bishop Grace warned. He also recalled that Mr. Ostrow's illness followed that of Jesse Chessin, chief counsel for Mrs. Royster, by only a month.

At that time, the maintenance hearing was postponed pending Mr. Chessin's convalescence.

"You see what happens," Grace said.

GRACE, WHOSE long fingernails are painted red and white, wore a blue suit, featuring the cutaway coat which is his trademark. Some of his members were attired in black and gold, blue and gold and blue and white uniforms.

As they have since the hearing began last Thursday, members of the cult came early in the morning in order to obtain seats in the courtroom. Some remained inside the courtroom during the lunch recess to assure themselves of seats.

Some crowded outside to peer at Bishop Grace through the glass panel in the courtroom door. One elderly lady was observed barefoot sitting on a bench in the hall. Her shoes lay nearby.

An old man dozed perched on top of a receptacle for discarded cigarettes.

DURING HER TESTIMONY, Mrs. Jones, like her sister before her, was asked to identify the man she knew at one time as John H. Royster and later as James E. Morris.

She waved her hand at Bishop Grace as she approached his chair. He smiled benignly.

THE ELDERLY bent woman withstood a grilling of approximately two hours by the attorney for Bishop Grace, including queries about birthdates of relatives to test the accuracy of her memory.

Mrs. Jones told the court that she first met John Royster in 1925 when he came to Sanford, Fla., where she then lived with her husband.

She said Royster brought with him a letter of introduction from her sister, Mrs. Royster, who was living in New Jersey.

Shortly after his arrival, he told her he was changing his name from Royster to James Morris, Mrs. Jones said.

About four months later, Mrs. Royster joined her husband at the Sanford home, Mrs. Jones said, and lived there with Royster for about six months.

HER TESTIMONY closely corroborated that given by Mrs. Royster last Friday. According to Mrs. Jones' account, a daughter, Kaye Frances was born to Mr. and Mrs. Royster in Aug., 1927.

Royster, who worked for the American Workman Company and had some real estate "dealings," left Florida when the baby was four months old.

Mrs. Jones said she moved to Waycross, Ga., in 1933, and later saw Bishop Grace at the House of Prayer for All People there. She said she recognized him as the former John Royster.

THE WITNESS stated she later saw him at the home of a sister, Nancy Butler, where he resided during his church meetings several times over a period of years.

At one time, Bishop Grace told her he wanted to do more for Mrs. Royster and his child, but he "hadn't got the chance," Mrs. Jones said.

THE MATRON also declared that Grace had warned her not to disclose his identity because it "might cause trouble."

Asked whether she had told Royster's secret, Mrs. Jones responded:

"I'm telling it now for the first time. I didn't tell it because of something within me. There was something within."

a Christmas party from the matron.

Unable to gain entrance to the house the youngsters contacted Mrs. Jones who looked through a window and saw Mrs. Forrester lying on the bed.

Police said that Gregory, the woman's son, opened the door for Mrs. Jones who saw that Mrs. Forrester was apparently not breathing.

Mrs. Forrester was pronounced dead on arrival at Provident Hospital by Dr. S. R. Owings.

ACCORDING to the Medical Examiner her death was due to "asphixia, ligature and manual strangulation."

In addition to Gregory, Mrs. Forrester was also identified as the mother of another child, Elmer Griffin, 14, 1112 Shields Place. The second youngster is the adopted son of Mrs. Mabel Griffin of the Shields Place address and has been with her since she was two weeks old, it was reported.

Following the death of Mrs. Forrester, Mrs. Griffin also took Gregory to her home.

When an AFRO reporter visited the Griffin home on Thursday, Gregory was playing with the toys his mother had given him for Christmas. There were a fire engine and a wagon.

When asked where his mother was Gregory said:

"In the hospital."

AMONG THE persons who saw Mrs. Forrester before she died was Mrs. Minnie Clark, 1739 Brewer St. She said she saw her in the kitchen with Gregory on Monday evening.

Another friend, Mrs. Katherine Burrell, 1331 Argyle Ave., was quoted as saying she had seen Mrs. Forrester shortly after 2 a.m. on Christmas Eve at Pennsylvania Ave. and Hoffman St.

ton told the AFRO that the teenager is in good health and that he is getting good care.

He said: "He is well, and I am doing everything I can for him. I love him. May God bless him."

THE REV. MR. WEGLEIN also stated that he has great concern for young Braxton.

He said: "I am with him as much as possible. I am the only one he is supposed to trust, and I will do everything humanly possible for him."

Warden Vernon Pepersack also told the AFRO that Braxton has had good care.

He stated: "We feel that the people here are human beings for whom we are supposed to do our best.

"We try to prepare them so that if they should go out into society again they will be good citizens and take their place in the world."

Mr. Pepersack added that Braxton seems to be in good spirits and that he has gained weight.

THE YOUNGSTER was convicted of first degree murder in the death of Patrolman John Phelan on September 28, 1956.

Braxton contended that the gun which killed the policeman accidentally went off as they struggled for it.

The fatal shooting occurred in an ambulance while Braxton was being carried to a hospital for treatment of a gunshot wound. He had been shot by a policeman during the attempted holdup of a North Ave. liquor store.

A Youth Court jury found him guilty in November 1956 and recommended no mercy. On Oct. 23, 1957 the Court of Appeals upheld both the guilty verdict and the death sentence.

An AFRO poll last week showed that a majority of citizens questioned opposed capital punishment and recommended that the teen-aged boy's life be spared.

Governor Theodore McKeldin has been asked by Braxton's mother, Mrs. Bessie Braxton McCloud, to spare his life.

siding Bishop at a church trial last summer which suspended Bishop Nichols from office without pay.

Bishop Nichols appealed to this judicial council to expurgate him and restore him to complete status and salary.

RECENTLY, Bishop Wright as president of the Bishops Council ruled that the decision of the trial court rather than the decision of this court of appeals should obtain.

The Judicial council of the AME church is new. It is patterned on that of the Mother Methodist church.

It was set up by the General Conference over the objections of some Bishops who would like to see it abolished.

The sessions are expected to last today and tomorrow and it is likely that both Bishops Wright and Nichols and others will testify.

However, the law of the AME church is so clear on this matter that it is expected that the Judicial Council will rule against Bishop Nichols.

Restore Bishop Nichols as it did in the first trial;

Declare that the assignment of Bishop Nichols must be by vote of the Bishops Council and that Council itself shall assign him to a district.

at the Central Branch. We have been gaining gradual progress, soon we are letting boys come down and play basketball."

Such progress didn't allow a boy to swim in the pool at the Central Branch, he said. Nor did it give other privileges of membership.

"A BOY was accepted for membership by mail this summer, but when they saw that he was colored, they returned his $10 fee to his mother," Dr. Mazique recalled.

Committee members said there had been other such experiences during the year.

Membership rejection goes to the heart of the need for recreational facilities, or their lack, in the colored community.

"The swimming pool here has been out of commission for more than five years," said an official of the 12th Street YMCA.

A member said, "If you're colored, there's no where in town for you to go swimming in the winter."

The 12th Street Y uses the pools at Cardozo High School and Howard University. They are the only swimming facilities available and are necessarily overtaxed because of the demands made upon them.

This fact was stressed recently before the school board by Col. West A. Hamilton, board member, who pressed for funds to restore the pool at Dunbar. It has been out of use for some time.

DR. MAZIQUE said the integration petition was withdrawn in face of the long period of "dilly-dallying around" by Central Branch YMCA officials.

The committee pledged, however, "to strive even harder to marshal our Christian precepts and apply our resources to society's move structural underpinnings, including issues outside the area of race relations."

Members further said, "To those who dare flirt with disaster, who at this late date dare engage in the luxury of

"Capt. Joe" to "take it easy"

"I intend to take it easy from now on.

"At my age I don't intend to look for any more work.

"I'll devote time to my hobby, photography, and trips to my summer home in Atlantic."

Those were the comments last week of Captain Joseph A. Baroch, 49, former commanding officer of the Southwestern District, who retired after 42 years service with the police department.

Known to his men as "Captain Joe," Mr. Baroch was commended seven times for superior services.

And during his tour of duty Capt. Baroch saw service in six of the eight police districts.

EARLY IN his career the then Patrolman Baroch was one of five men in the motorcycle division.

He entered the department in 1914 at the Northern District. Six years later was a mounted officer in the Falls Road area.

Capt. Baroch recalls that the Homeland area was a farm, and the sites where Memorial Stadium now stands was a brick yard when he joined the force.

He took command of the Southwestern District in April of 1953 and altogether, served under eight commissioners.

CAPTAIN BAROCH resides in the 4600 block of Walther Blvd., with his wife, Mrs. Ruth Baroch.

They are the parents of a son, former police Sergeant Joseph J. "Baroch and the grandparents of nine.

On the day of his retirement officers in the Southwestern District presented Capt. Baroch with a portable television set.

A ceremony in his honor at the station house was attended by Police Commissioner James M. Hepbron, Inspector Frank Deems, Magistrate Howard L. Aaron, and his successor as captain, Frank J. Battaglia.

to finish telling was about the desperate efforts she and her husband, Clarence, made to save the life of their three-year-old son, Jackie.

The child was pronounced dead at University Hospital Christmas Eve night at 8:25. The medical examiner's office reported death was due to "asphixia aspiration of a grape."

Mrs. Horne told Officers John Schungke and Bernard Profili that she had just come home from the market when the youngster, one of seven children, took the grapes from a big bag.

Death of the child put a damper on the Christmas spirit in the Horne home.

"I didn't enjoy my Christmas at all," said Mrs. Horne. Neither Mrs. Horne nor her 12-year-old daughter Mary has eaten since the child died.

FOR CHRISTMAS Jackie was to get a banjo, a shirt, a three-piece suit, sweater, gray cap, two pair of pants and fruit especially oranges, which he liked so well.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at the Hemsley Funeral Home.

The six other Horne children are:

Miss Dorothy L. Horne, a nurse's aide; Mrs. Unether Irvin, Emmie, 18; Mary, Isaac, 10; and Patricia, 7.

Mr. Horne is a construction worker. The family attends Gillis Memorial Church.

IN HIS car police said they found a letter addressed to Butts' mother in which he asked her to take care of his children.

The couple had been separated for three weeks, according to police, and apparently on the day that he died Butts and consumed a good deal of alcohol before he approached his wife.

It was reported that the couple has two boys, one 10 the other nine.

they saw Butts holding his wife by the arm.

"I shouted out the window 'what's the matter' and he pulled a gun and started shooting," the officer said.

THE FIRST three shots were directed at Mrs. Butts, Corporal Gonce said, and then the husband fired at him (the officer).

Corporal Gonce said that he fired one shot which struck Butts in the stomach and that the husband then turned the .32 caliber gun on himself and fired the last two shots.

One of the bullets, the one that caused his death, entered his body just above the heart while another went into his arm.

As Butts fell to the ground the officers rushed forward in time to hear him complain about a pain in his chest and to mutter the words: "I love Louise."

Butts was pronounced dead on arrival at Hopkins. The body of the man has been returned to Emporia, Va., for burial.

Words To Live By

BY THE REV. ROBERT NEWBOLD, Jr.

"Look up" could well be one of the key commands in the Christmas stories because a fascinating section in Luke (St. Luke 2:8-15) vividly reveals a choir of angels singing before her, was asked to identify the man she knew at one time as John H. Royster and later as James E. Morris.

"As the strains of heavenly music fell upon their ears the shepherds men wondered: "Where is such music coming from?" They looked up and saw a choir of the heavenly host. (What a choir that must have been!) So the shepherds looked up.

In doing so they saw evidences of the fact that God was still with man. Moreover, they heard the good news of a Messiah who would be the means of reconciling man with God as well as man with man.

And through this ministry alone cometh lasting peace on earth.

A MAJESTIC part of the record in Matthew (St. Matthew 2:1-10) verbally portrays wise men coming from Jerusalem to Bethlehem. The purpose of their trip was to find the Christ child and worship him by way of presenting gifts—gold, frankincense, and myrrh.

"How were they guided?" The answer is "by a star." So wise men looked up. Wise men still seek symbolically suggests their awareness of the power and presence, love and leadership, compassion and concern of God.

The message and meaning of this season should prompt us to look up. If we do, it is to behold a man-made star as it circles the earth more than 1,000 times.

With it comes the thought that such a missile helps bring the danger of human destruction uncomfortably nearer. Such thinking can lead to despair.

SINCE THIS is true, we must not allow the sight of the man-made star to draw attention away from the star of Bethlehem.

For while sputnik may prove to be a star of despair, the other is the star of eternal hope. As we look up, we also hear the beeping sounds coming in on 20 or 40 megacycles.

But these must not drown out the song of heavenly messengers as they seek to point us to peace and goodwill.

When we look up to the star of Bethlehem and also think about the song of the angels, we can subsequently do no less than turn our eyes from ourselves and the gods we make to a power greater than we—the God who created us.

We do well, then, to look up! Look up and worship! Look up and live!

'I did but (s)' bring 6 months

"I did but . . ."

That was the manner in which two men, charged with larceny of nine packs of cigarettes from a car in the 800 block of Park Ave., started their testimony in Northwestern Police Court Sunday prior to be sentenced to six months in the House of Correction.

Sgt. Edwin Lawrence told Magistrate Linwood G. Koger Sr. one was arrested inside the car and the other was serving as a lookout when police came upon the scene.

James A. Hall, 22, 400 block W. Saratoga St., gave this explanation in his defense; "I did enter the car, but I didn't break in."

Said Albert L. Johnson, 27, 800 block W. Vine St.: "I did have that knife open in my pocket but I was not near the car. I don't know anything about the car."

Sgt. Lawrence said Johnson had the open knife in his pocket when arrested and Hall had a screwdriver. He said the men were observe by officers making the breakin about 8:30 Saturday night. Both had previous records.

'You are poor like me'--so gunman leaves

"You are poor like I am so I'm not going to take your money, but don't follow me."

This was the Christmas present of a would-be hold-up man to a clerk in a cleaners in the 700 block of W. Mosher St. after the man changed his mind about the robbery.

Clerk Gloria Meade, 800 block N. Calhoun St., said the unidentified man came in about 3:25 p.m. Saturday and ordered her a note which ordered "Give me the money and don't scream."

She said he pulled open his coat to show a pistol then a friend of hers, Randolph Wiggins, 1900 block of Payson St., came in and asked "why" when ordered to the back of the

One more month all she needed

Just a little more than a month from now this couldn't have happened to Miss Helen P. Strawn, 1400 block Whitelock St.

By then, Jan. 27, to be exact, she would have been 21.

That's the age Iglehardt Keets, manager of a lounge in the 700 block of W. Saratoga St., said the woman gave when she was served an alcoholic beverage at the place Saturday night.

However, Officers John McGee, Vernon Potter and Robert E. Matthews reported the woman admitted to being just 20 when they questioned her before making an arrest.

MISS STRAWN was released in $100 bail at a hearing in Southwestern Police Court Sunday before Magistrate Howard L. Aaron.

The manager and owners of the lounge, Bernard C. and Jeanne C. Newhouse, first block of Cresmer Court Rd., were held in $500 bail each in connection with the sales to Miss Strawn.

The clerk told Officer Raymond Milligan the man then apparently changed his mind and left.

"He told me to get out"

"He packed up my clothes and told me to get out.

"The next time I saw him in the pool hall he cursed me."

That was the comment of Mrs. Maria Towns, 35, of the 800 block N. Bond St., when she accused her husband James of "making a scene" before a crowd at Gay and Caroline Sts., Saturday afternoon.

In connection with the disturbance, Mr. and Mrs. Towns were fined $5 and costs each for disorderly conduct.

A third person, David Perrott, 34, of the 800 block Barnes St., was also fined $5 and costs for allegedly interfering with the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. Towns.

'The girl he goes with' named by wife in divorce action

Mrs. Annie Williams, 28, 1552 Moreland Ave., on Dec. 23 was granted a divorce from her husband, Eugene Williams, 32, a sugar refining company employee.

The decree gave Mrs. Williams custody of the couple's two sons, Robert, 8, and Alfred, 4.

The Moreland Ave. home was also awarded to Mrs. Williams with the provision that she be responsible for payments on the mortage.

Mr. Williams agreed to pay $20 weekly support for the children and in lieu of alimony agreed to pay a sum of $600 in $50 monthly installments.

ALTHOUGH THE divorce was granted on terms of abandonment, Mrs. Williams sued her husband on June 15, 1956 on grounds of adultery.

In her original petition filed on that date, Mrs Williams accused Mr. Williams of committing adultery with "divers and lewd" women.

She said: "Although he makes a good salary he has lost all interest in meeting the obligations of a father and husband.

On Sept. 7, 1956 she testified before Examiner George W. Hill and told the court that her husband came home with lipstick on his shirt sometime in November, 1956.

IN REVIEWING intimate details of their life together Mrs. Williams also named Mrs. Beatrice Hines whose husband is a co-worker of Mr. Williams, as correspondant.

She told the Examiner: "She is the girl he has been going with."

Asked how she knew, Mrs. Williams made the following testimony:

"In December, 1955 he had a lady's wallet in his pocket. It belonged to Beatrice Hines.

"In February, 1956 he had a traffic ticket in his dresser drawer. He said the car belonged to one of the boys at work but I investigated and found it belonged to Beatrice Hines.

Continuing to tell the court of difficulty she had in her married life, Mrs. Williams also revealed that in December, 1955 she discovered more lipstick on her husband.

She said: "I put the lamp on over the bed and asked him what was wrong with his lip.

"He said "Nothing." But I took a tissue and wiped it off and it was lipstick."

FURTHER ALLEGED incidents with Mrs. Hines were given to Mrs. Williams by Mrs. Hines husband, Louis Hines, Mrs. Williams told the court.

She said: "In May, 1956, Mr. Hines came to my house and told me he had something to tell me about his wife and my husband.

"He said he had caught them together three or four times.

"Once my husband was coming out of his house. Another time his wife and my husband were in a car together and he saw them.

"He also said he had seen them in night clubs together several times."

AS MR. HINES and Mrs. Williams exchanged what they had seen between his wife and her husband, they discovered that they had been "put out" town together, Mrs. Williams testified.

She said: "My husband began staying out more and more from Nov., 1955 to May, 1956 and during that time he spent only three week-ends at home. He would stay out sometimes from Friday to Monday.

"Mr. Hines said everytime my husband was out of town, Mrs. Hines was out of town.

"He said they were in Chester, Md.

"He told me that once she called him from Chester and told him she would be home on Sunday.

"My husband called me from Chester and told me that he would be home on Saturday."

MRS. WILLIAMS testified that she told her husband what she had learned from the conversation with Mr. Hines and her husband admitted the allegations.

She revealed that her husband said: "Mrs. Hines has been running after me."

She also told the court that Mr. Williams disclosed to Sgt. Violet Hill Whyte of the Police Department that Mrs. Hines meant nothing to him.

Mrs. Williams quoted her husband as saying: "She is just throwing herself over on me."

Although Mr. and Mrs. Williams resided in their jointly owned home on Moreland Ave. until Sept., 1956, she told the court that she had moved into the children's room where she continued to sleep with them.

The Williams were married in 1948 in Baltimore.

James Robinson, teacher, and wife agree on divorce

James M. Robinson Jr., 26, 1008 Rosedale St., a city school teacher, was granted a divorce on Dec. 23 from his wife, Mrs. Vivian M. Robinson, 24, 1304 Shellbank Road Cherry Hill.

Under the terms of the divorce Mr. Robinson is to pay a sum of $80 monthly, $40 for each of their two children, directly to his wife.

Divorce papers show that Mr. and Mrs. Robinson were married on May 8, 1951 in Baltimore.

They have two children, Yuette, 6 and Karyl, 4, who were given in custody to their mother.

MR. ROBINSON filed petition for divorce on Oct. 8, 1957 through his attorney, Senator Harry Cole.

He told the court that he and his wife were separated on Sept. 5, 1954.

He said: "We lived separately and apart for three years.

"Because of certain differences we had my wife and I decided to sit down and talk about it and we agreed to live separate and apart."

Testifying that Mr. Robinson's statements were true was Milbern Boyer, 1411 Division St., a city engineer.

He said: "She (Mrs. Robinson) is a good mother in my opinion and will provide her children with a proper home."

Three held in lottery case

"There is no conversation that led to the fact they saw nothing to prove there was a lottery operation in the garage . . . There is no adequate description of any person in the warrant.

"We maintain that the warrant was insufficient."

This argument in Northwestern Police Court on Monday evening on behalf of three men charged with lottery was made by Jay G. McRae Jr., attorney.

Before continuing bail for the trio at $2,500 each Magistrate Linwood G. Koger Sr. told Mr. McRae he thought he was "making a good argument" but suggested he hold it for a higher court.
