Medical exam suggested for 'man on rampage'

"This man probably needs psychiatric care.

"I suggest that he be examined before trial."

That was the suggestion offered by Magistrate Simon Schenfield at Northeastern Monday just before he ordered a young man whom police said 'went on a rampage' held without bail.

Although John Donald Williams, 39 of the 200 block N. Pearl St., had requested a jury trial for allegedly breaking into two Morgan State College dormitories and striking two police officers, he was taken by surprise when the court set bail of $11,500.

* * *

SPECIFICALLY, the curly haired candy truck driver and part - time real estate salesman was accused of breaking into Truth House and Tubman House on the Morgan campus.

From Truth House, he was accused of taking four paintings valued at $70.

At Tubman House, college officials reported that the draperies were torn down.

Other charges included: assaulting an 18 - year - old woman residing in the 2400 block McCulloh St.; obstructing a passageway in front of 321 University Pkwy; and striking Patrolmen Donald Plitt and Harry Stevens.

* * *

TESTIMONY WAS given that Williams molested the young woman in the vicinity of her home, and made improper advances toward two other women.

Enroute to Morgan, police said that the former Crownsville State Hospital patient committed three traffic violations.

Before Magistrate Schenfield, Williams declared that he realized that he was intoxicated, but could not recall anything else.

HE CLAIMED that he was sleeping on the campus when three men forced their way into his automobile with the stolen goods and drove into town.

Williams admitted that in addition to Crownsville, he had been a patient at Perry Point Veterans Hospital and had frequently been treated for a "nervous condition I couldn't control."

Edgar Draper, Morgan business manager, was in court to identify the articles taken from the campus.

Robbery suspect runs when struck

An attempted robbery at the Variety 5 and 10 cent Store in the 2700 block of W. North Ave., was thwarted Tuesday by an unwilling salesman, report Northwestern police.

Clarence Overton, 1900 block Harlem Ave., told officers a man came to the store about 7:20 p.m. and asked for a set of ceramic cats. He said when he asked for the money the man pulled a gun on him and announced:

"This is a stick - up, and give me your money."

Mr. Overton said he hit the man's arm and the man hit him on the right forehead and ran out. Police found an unloaded 32 caliber revolver on the showcase.

4 years for heroin

Judge S. Ralph Warnken in Criminal Court Thursday sentenced Nathaniel Little, 24, of the 500 block W. Hoffman St., to four years in the penitentiary for having 147 capsules of heroin in his possession on November 14.

Mr. Little was arrested in the 500 block N. Fremont Ave. Judge Warnken was told, when Northwestern District Officer Richard Cantania became suspicious of his movements and thought he was carrying a gun.

The accused man was described to the court as a "pusher" of the things, because of the point that he had 132 capsules of the heroin in one pocket and 15 in another, in the manner that pushers usually keep a small selling supply aside from their main supply.

Man gets 4 years for theft of auto

William Bryant, 22, of the 1200 block E. Madison St., was sentenced in Criminal Court Tuesday to four years in the House of Correction for stealing an auto last January 21, belonging to Roy S. Osman, of the 8300 block Kavanaugh Rd.

Judge S. Ralph Warnken ruled that the sentence would be added to a three - year sentence Mr. Bryant is currently serving on another charge.

Assistant State's Attorney John C. Weiss told Judge Warnken that Officer Raymond Stankiewski noticed the stolen car with Mr. Bryant in it at Gay and Lexington Sts. shortly after 2 a.m. January 21, after having picked up a report of the stolen auto from Central Police District police headquarters.

Mr. Weiss said Officer Stankiewski followed the auto, and fired his revolver. This attracted Officers George Beinke and Albert Brown, of Traffic Division, who chased the auto to Exeter and Hiller Sts., where Mr. Bryant was captured as he attempted to flee on foot. Mr. Weiss told the court.

2 years in jail

"She slapped me, and I cut her."

This admission in Criminal Court Tuesday by Mrs. Elizabeth Saunders, 37, of the 1600 block W. Fayette St., brought her a two-year sentence in the Reformatory for Women on a charge of cutting Mrs. Celestine Coleman, another tenant in the same house, on November 2.

THE UNVEILING of this beautiful Memorial Window in honor of Joshua Grant, for 21 years a deacon and sexton at Quioccasin Baptist Church, took place at the church last week. Here, little Jaunice Norrell lowers the drape from the window as the following look on, from left: the Rev. Reno S. Harris Jr., rector, St. Stephens Episcopal Church; Willis Norrell, deacon, Quioccasin; and the Rev. O. C. Perkins, pastor.

Dr. Johnson to speak at Morgan observance

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, is scheduled to be one of the speakers as "Religion - in - Life Week" opens at Morgan State College on Sunday, Dec. 8.

The Howard president will address an all-college assembly on Wednesday, Dec. 11 at 10 a.m. in the Hurt Gymnasium.

Theme of this year's observance is "Who Am I?"

Religion in Life Week is the product of a joint faculty student committee of 100 and is observed annually at the college.

Throughout the week consultants will address classes, hold personal conferences with students and talk at seminars and other gatherings.

* * *

SUNDAY'S PROGRAM will open with a worship service at the Morgan Christian Center at 10:30 a.m., with the Rev. Richard F. Vieth as speaker.

The Rev. Mr. Vieth is now the minister of the Wesley Foundation at the University of Maryland.

Dec. 2 will be a dramatic presentation of "The Bend in the Road," by the Lafridge Players.

* * *

IN ADDITION to Dr. Johnson and the Rev. Mr. Vieth other key speakers will be:

Father Chester Michael, pastor of St. Bede's Parish, Williamsburg, Va.

Maryland awards degree on Okinawa

Capt. Felix L. Goodwin of Lawrence, Kan., has become the first person on Okinawa to complete his requirements for a BS degree with the university of Maryland.

The 37-year-old Army captain, who had studied for his university degree for seven years on four continents, was honored in November at a dinner in the Fort Buckner Officers Club on Okinawa.

Capt. Goodwin, a veteran of 17 years army service, attended classes in Germany, Greenland, Korea, the United States and Okinawa and one time in Germany made two 100-mile trips weekly to classes.

He started his study in 1950 and completed it in the University of Maryland Overseas Program on Okinawa.

* * *

CAPT. GOODWIN, who is the adjutant of the Army Transportation Group in the Ryukyus, received only one "C" grade in his studies, all the others being "B" or "A."

A word of advice from Capt. Goodwin to other prospective degree candidates is that they take their mathematics courses as soon as possible after high school.

A helpful factor in his success, Capt. Goodwin said, was the willingness of his wife, the former Esther Brown, of Wilmington, N.C., to give up social life Monday through Thursday.

* * *

SPEAKERS FOR the luncheon honoring Capt. goodwin included:

Lt. gen. James E. Moore, G. Daly, director of the Far East Division of the University of Maryland's Overseas Program, Brazek, associate dean of the College of Speech and Continuous Studies, U. of M., and Dr. John L. Bastion, USARLIS ed. ucation advisor.

Liberal arts also needed in schools

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — Two Baltimore educators said here recently that the nation must not let the liberal arts suffer as it emphasizes sciences in the public school curriculum.

Presence: Mrs. Lillian M. Mrs. Edythe D. Meyers, both members of the Baltimore Department of Education are among 1,500 educators attending the 7th annual meeting of the National Council for the Social Studies here.

Mrs. Blount is department head of Social Studies at Booker T. Washington Junior High School, No 130; Mrs. Meyers is supervisor of history for the Department of Education.

BOTH BALTIMORE educators voiced agreement with Council executive secretary Merrill Hartshorn, who said, "Science education is not at the expense of the liberal arts."

A grounding in the humanities and awareness of social responsibility make a man educated—whether he is a scientist or an artist."

'Resistence to desegregation may lead to edge of disaster'

"Resistence (to the Supreme Court's 1954 school desegregation decision) may yet bring us once again to the edge of disaster.

"And at the moment we cannot be certain that Faubusism may not yet do greater damage to American democracy both at home and throughout the world than ever did McCarthyism."

This warning was heard in Hurt Gymnasium Wednesday by about 1,500 Morgan State College students as the institution observed the third annual Bill of Rights Day.

THE SPEAKER was Robert K. Carr, Joel Parker professor of Law and Political Science, Dartmouth College, currently on leave to serve as executive secretary of the American Association of University Professors.

Dr. Carr, an authority in American Constitutional Government an executive secretary in 1947 of President Truman's Committee of Civil Rights, was presented by Dr. James Fleming, associate professor of political science.

Speaking from the subject "A Decade in Civil Rights," Dr. Carr pointed to the strides made in the past 10 years, but taking note of the wide-spread resistence to desegration progress, he said "much remains to be done."

TURNING BACK to 1947 when President Truman appointed the 15 - member civil rights committee, Dr. Carr said:

"Harry S. Truman realized that if the United States wished to have friends and influence in a world two-thirds of whose population is colored, it could not much longer tolerate racial prejudice.

"The tragedy is that a decade later there are still men in high public offices and millions of their supporters who do not yet appreciate the truth of this simple fact."

Dr. Carr said some "of the spectacular gains" of the decade can be seen in the falling of barriers in the armed services, the nation's capital, in urban housing, professional sports and the 1954 school desegregation decision of the Supreme Court.

"Both law and education are useful and complementary means of attacking civil rights problems," Dr. Carr said.

SOME OF the fallacies colouring thinking about racial relations in the United States, in the expressed opinion of Dr. Carr are:

1. The tendency to magnify the legal validity and historical importance of the separate-but-equal doctrine, handed down after the 14th amendment was adopted.

2. Widespread use of the unsound and dishonest argument that race relations cannot be controlled by law.

3. The wide - made assertion that the recent Supreme Court decision provides for compulsory integration of the white and colored races.

4. The oft - made argument that the race problem is a Southern problem and thus one which should be left to the good people of the south to work out in their own way and at their own time.

IN ANSWER to those who talk of Federal interference in the area of civil rights, Dr. Carr said "let it be remembered there is such a thing as improper state interference with community rights."

Virginia's denying the people of Arlington the right to elect their own school board, Alabama's gerrymandering of Tuskegee to change the voting pattern and Arkansas' interfering with a carefully made program in Little Rock for public school integration, "are far more serious interferences by outside authorities with local group desires and patterns than anything the federal government has done in its handling of the race problem," Dr. Carr said.

Original play set at Houston

The Charles Houston Junior High School No. 181 faculty will be featured in a play on Tuesday, Dec. 10, as part of the fourth annual Book Fair at the school, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Written by James Harrison the play is entitled "It's in the Book." It tells the story of little Mary Jane LaLivre who is disturbed over the fact that her family has seemingly forgotten everything they ever learned.

The family is often referred to books which they may learn. Finally, Mary Jane convinces her family to attend the Book Fair where they may get a good start toward building a family library.

THE LIBRARY - PTA sponsored Book Fairs have been bringing enjoyment to the parents and pupils at No. 181 for many years. In December, 1954, two authors, Mrs. Jessi Roy and Mrs. Geneva Turner, co-authors of "Pioneers of Long Ago," were featured.

In December, 1955, Baltimore's own Augusta Baker, editor of the "Talking Tree" and supervisor of story-telling at the New York Public Library, was the guest.

Last December, as is the aim this December, the committee seeks to get each child in the school to purchase at least one book of any price so that he can be proud of owning and adding to his home library.

Mrs. Dharathula Millender is the librarian. Frank Sorrell is the principal of the school.

Douglass Red Cross

By DAISY WILSON

The Junior Red Cross sponsored a program for the 10th graders at Douglass High School recently. The purpose of the program was to acquaint the newcomers with the vital function that are a necessity to the Red Cross in carrying out its work.

Pupils who made this program possible were: Sonia Lynch, Joan Jackson, Janis Fits, and Carmen Boston.

In an effort to share her travel experiences with others, Mrs. Lottia Ashe, an English teacher at Douglass, lectured to a group at Solters Point High School last week.

School No. 162 studies how to improve subjects

Faculty members of the Johnson Diggs Elementary School, No. 162, are studying ways to improve language arts and arithmetic in the school's program.

Since listening exerts influence in our lives but is poorly done, a faculty group decided to explore this area.

A panel recently discussed and demonstrated ways to improve listening in the classroom. A lesson in social studies was demonstrated to show opportunities presented in a lesson where listening is necessary.

LISTENING activities were demonstrated and teachers acted as pupils placing emphasis on the fact that listening is a part of all activities throughout the day.

The aim of the discussion was to help teachers realize that listening means more than paying attention. There must be a readiness, a purpose and an atmosphere that is conducive.
