Dixon wins $1,000 suit against Miles Davis

Chief Judge Allan W. Rhynhart granted Howard D. Dixon of the Comedy Club, 1474 Pennsylvania Ave., a $1,000 judgment last Thursday in People's Court against Miles Davis, popular orchestra leader, for his failure to properly fulfill a March engagement at the night club.

Mr. Dixon charged that Mr. Davis, famad modern jazz trumpet player, had contracted to fill an engagement at the Comedy Club with five musicians, including himself, from March 26 through March 31, a Tuesday through a Sunday.

Mr. Dixon stated that the group played Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, as per contract, but that the pianist, Red Garland, failed to appear for the Thursday show.

He charged that the pianist did return for the Friday show, but that Mr. Davis did not appear for this show, or for the rest of the contracted engagement.

• • •

IN SEEKING the judgment, Mr. Dixon complained he had lost a total of $1,588.99 in advertising and business, as a result of the failure of Mr. Davis to properly fulfill the contracted engagement.

The contract with Mr. Davis, according to Mr. Dixon, was obtained through the Shaw Artists Corporation, 565 Fifth Ave., New York City.

Terms were a $1,500 fee, with a deposit of $350 to the agency at the time of signing the contract on March 21, and $1,150 to Mr. Davis and his group in cash at the end of the engagement.

Judge Rhynhart dismissed a similar judgment filed against Mr. Davis by Mrs. Evelyn Dixon, of the Comedy Club, in reference to the same engagement.

Judge names receiver for Club Tijuana

Judge Edwin Harlan in Circuit Court Tuesday signed a receivership order against Sidney Berman, licensee, and the Club Tijuana, at 2670 Pennsylvania Ave., to satisfy a $3,779.13 judgment claimed by the Liquor Dealers Credit Control, Inc., of 10 E. Fayette St.

Judge Harlan also appointed Jerome M. Asch, attorney, as the receiver, and ordered that notice be given that all persons having claims against Mr. Berman file such properly authenticated claims with the Clerk of Circuit Court on or before February 4 of next year.

In a Bill of Complaint, signed by Jerome H. Markoff, vice president of Liquor Dealers Credit Control, it was charged that Mr. Berman had failed to satisfy a $3,779.13 judgement held by the company against him, and that payment through an expected sale of the Club Tijuana had not come because such a sale had not been consummated.

Mr. Beman, through his attorney, Solomon Liss, answered by admitting to the allegations, and consenting to the appointment of a receiver.

Deal leads to trouble

A room and feminine companionship were what a 60-year-old Charlestown, W. Va., man reportedly told Northwestern police he bargained for with an unidentified man.

He got them, he said, but he almost got killed to boot.

Harold Pinckney, employed at the Pimlico Race Track allegedly told police he met an unidentified man in the 1500 block of Pennsylvania Ave., Tuesday evening who said he could get him a room for $1.50 and a bit of "friendship" for $5.

• • •

HE SAID the man was true to his promise but the same man and another later broke out a door window and entered, declaring "we are too late."

Mr. Pinckney told police the two then attacked him and the one who had obtained the room for him stabbed him with a knife. He was treated at Provident Hospital for a stab wound in the abdomen and admitted.

Officers reported they found the man lying in the doorway of an apartment house in the 1500 block of Pennsylvania Ave. and blood drops led them to a third - floor apartment where a knife was found.

A suspect was being questioned at Northwestern Police Station.

Pair given 7 years for $10 robbery

The two are Curtis Stokes, of the 1000 block N. Eden St., and John C. Smith, of the 1200 block E. Preston St. The sentence followed a Probation Department report on the pair.

At the trial of the two last week, Thomas Williams, proprietor of the store in the 1400 block Ashland Ave., positively identified young Stokes, saying: "He's got real small eyes. Nobody around there has small eyes like him."

PEOPLE

WRITE ON DESEGREGATION

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — One of the knottiest problems ever to confront the legal profession of this country arose from the 1954 decision of the United States Supreme Court innocently labeled 'Brown v. Board of Education."

Out of this suit by Oliver Brown against the Topeka Board of Education arose the series of actions aimed to eliminate desegregation in American schools.

Two Rutgers School of Law professors who perceived the importance of the case decided two years ago to write a short treatment of the legal aspects of desegregation.

The task soon broadened as they realized that the subject could not be fully treated without scholarly attention to both the historical background and the multiple current developments that rose when the time came for the decisions of the high court to be carried out.

Now Clarence Clyde Ferguson Jr. and Albert B. Blaustein the two State University professors, find themselves author of a major work which could easily become a handbook on the legal aspects of desegregation cases.

It is "Desegregation and the Law," published last month by the Rutgers University Press.

STUDYING LIBERIA

MONROVIA, Liberia—President Hollis Price of LeMoyne College, Memphis, who arrived here in October to begin duties as study-coordinator of the Phelps-Stokes Fund-World Council of Churches Project, will be joined early in December by President Harry V. Richardson of Gammon Theological Seminary of Atlanta.

The project is titled, "The Study of Christian Responsibility in Liberia Today." Several groups organized last April and May by Rev. Dai Kitagawa of the World Council of Churches staff and Dr. F. D. Patterson of the Phelps-Stokes Fund, have been working since that time with the guidance of Miss Elizabeth Wright, Liberian project secretary.

TO PRESENT PAPER

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Dr. George W. Gore Jr., president of Florida A. and M. University, will be one of a series of speakers on the program of the Florida Academy of Sciences, in session at Stetson University, Deland, Fla.

He will present a paper at the afternoon session on Friday, Dec. 6, on "Higher Education of the Negro in the United States in Retrospect and Prospect."

AIDE IN PERSONNEL

GRAMBLING, La. — Dr. Kara V. Jackson, director of student personnel services at Grambling College was elected secretary of the Southern College Personnel Association, Tuesday at the 8th annual convention of the group at Miami Beach, Fla.

The Southern College Personnel Association assists personnel workers in institutions of higher learning with such non-teaching problems as housing, orientation, placement and guidance.

PREACHES IN GALILEE

MEMPHIS — The Rev. C. Bunton, pastor of Mt. Olive CME Cathedral, who left here Dec. 3 for a month-long tour of the Holy Land; will conduct a religious service on the shore of the Sea of Galilee where Jesus Christ chose his first disciples.

In addition, he will participate in a program in Bethlehem on Christmas Day. He was asked to conduct the Galilee services by the tourist agency which organized the trip.

LONG LIVE LIBERIA

ALCORN, Miss. — Clennon King, the professor who recently became the father of a triplet fracas with the NAACP, recently was involved here in a girl, named Liberia Ethiopia Virginia King.

He explained the name as follows:

"Liberia means freedom; Ethiopia is hailed in the Bible; and Virginia is the mother of the chicken.

Said Mrs. Boyle of the incident: "The whole thing was spicy. I didn't mind it a bit."

Here's Central High School after twelve weeks of mixing

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Twelve weeks have passed at Federal troops clamped down in this city and made sure nine Central High School here since "N . . . r go home" has replaced the school year started that other obscene decorations.

White girls are still spitting on colored girls if they should happen to jostle each other in the hallway. Some teachers are still looking the other way when this happens.

The white girl who sits with a colored pupil in the cafeteria finds herself soon ostracized by other white pupils. An English class has a spelling match and one team captains chooses a colored pupil first.

A teacher once in a while spreads a rumor in her class that she has learned from the Army that colored pupils will soon be leaving the school.

A 12th grade white boy says, "the only thing I have to think about is what integration has done to my senior year. I resent not to be able to do anything about it.

A sophomore girls says a school official recently told white pupils to stop sitting with colored pupils in the cafeteria because the schools had received threats against these pupils.

She adds, "I have heard that when the troops leave, some boys are going all out to make it unpleasant for the colored pupils. But I think most of the pupils are ready to obey the law now. The colored children are being accepted by the majority."

Other developments within the 12-week period found one class asking a colored pupil to read the Bible during homeroom period and another pupil being characterized as the boy "who's going to raise the tone of the whole class."

One teacher earlier voiced a favorable opinion in concern of integration, but recently expressed doubt by saying:

"It has been the mastiest thing ever to come into my life and to say it hasn't affected our school work would not be true."

Other instructors described things as "going along at about a normal rate." One teacher said she and her pupils had discussed the situation from "every angle there was" and things quieted down after the discussion.

That's Central High School after 12 weeks as Federal troops prepare to withdraw leaving the security of the highly publicized institution in the hands of a select group of men of the 153rd Federalized Arkansas National Guard.

2 on relief leave total of $3,998

SELMA, Ala. — A total of $3,998.48 has been found in the homes of two elderly persons, formerly on relief, who died here recently.

Sheriff Jim Clark of Dallas County reported the caches of money to have been discovered in the homes of Will Lee, 83, who died Monday and Hagar Lee, 80, who died last Wednesday. It is not yet known if the two men were related.

The sheriff said the largest amount of money was found in the unpainted home of the oldest man. In denominations, mostly of one dollar bills, the sheriff said $3,423.90 was found tightly twisted and wrapped in cloth and paper, then stuffed in coffee cans, jars and other containers around Mr. Will Lee's one room home.

• • •

THE MONEY was reportedly buried in the yard and hidden around the house.

Amounts totalling $374.58 was found in a dresser drawer in Mr. Hagar Lee's home. The sheriff said Mr. Lee had been on relief since 1945 and white people in the neighborhood had been providing him with food.

Clark stated that the largest bills in this cache were $20 bills. He said Mr. Lee also had several sales and luxury tax tokens which have not been in use in Alabama for several years.

'Race haters mentally immature, dangerous'

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (ANP) —More than 1,100 white and colored persons here last Sunday heard Mrs. Sarah P. Boyle, noted author and lecturer declare:

"There is not more than 3 to 5 per cent of the southern white persons who hate colored persons, but this number is dangerous, for they are mentally immature, emotionally unbalanced and socially sick."

The Charlottesville, Va., writer added:

• • •

"THEY ARE sincere in their false belief that colored people are inferior. In their ignorance and misguided efforts to keep the colored man in his place, they are honest in their endeavors.

"Fifteen years ago, 45 percent of people in the North felt the colored man was inferior and 80 percent of southerners shared that view. A most revealing poll shows today that about 15 per cent of Northerners still hold that view and 37 per cent of southerners are so misguided."

Mrs. Boyle spoke at the Woman's Day observance at Mt. Zion Baptist Church where the Rev. R. E. James is pastor.

Following a tea in her honor Saturday night, White Citizens Councils members put through a program of actions by teachers and pupils. The walls of the school's restrooms, for instance, have a different kind of scribbling from the standard vulgarity. "N . . . r go home" has replaced other obscene decorations.

'Invader' Describes 'Land Of The Gods'

By CHATWOOD HALL

ATHENS, Greece — Leaving behind the land of one of the great ancient civilizations on the northeastern corner of Africa — Egypt— within three hours I had been propelled through the sky across the eastern Mediterranean and unloaded on the soil of another ancient Mediterranean civilization—Greece—cradle of Western civilization.

Here, in ancient times, Zeus had hurled his thunderbolts and Aphrodite had wielded her magic as Goddess of Love and Beauty.

Here Penelope had woven by day and unwoven by night to deceive her suitors while her long absent husband, Odysseus, cleaved the waves homeward bound from the siege of Troy.

• • •

ALL THIS mythology, of course, had to be abandoned for more earthly things when the Greek customs official asked what I had to declare. He then wanted one of my bags opened, then quickly switched and asked that the other one be opened.

With custom and visa formalities okeyed, I moved from the airport, near Piraeus, in a bus towards Athens, an old - new city which was already inhabited as far back as 3,000 B.C.

En route along the shore could be seen anchored in the Bay of Piraeus individual units of the U.S. Sixth Fleet.

There is grave tension in the eastern Mediterranean and these vessels of war symbolized the gravity of the situation.

MY GREEK bus driver proved to be most congenial and accommodating.

His duty was only to deliver passengers from the airport to the downtown Athens air center, whence passengers had to fend for themselves. But he graciously offered to take me alone in the big bus to find a hotel room.

We tried three hotels — all "full up." Plenty of tourists, mainly Americans and West Germans. Finally, a vacant room was found in the Cairo City Hotel (actual name), newest but not the finest in the city.

They say Morpheus was the classic Greek God of Sleep and Dreams. Well, he soon had me in his godly grip and when I awoke next morning, Apollo, God of the Sun, had wheeled his celestial orb high into the Attic sky.

THE GREEKS, unlike the Latin peoples along the Mediterranean, appear stolid and impassive, somewhat like north Europeans. It would appear that history has made them that way.

Over the ages Greece has been overrun by Persians, Romans, Franks, Goths, Turks and other invaders. Tragedy, theatrically, was born in Greece.

Bitter memories of the more recent German occupation during World War II still rankle in Greek breasts. But underneath all this surface stolidity, I found the Greeks kind and most accommodating.

For the benefit of the uninformed, it was off the coast of Greece, at Navarino, that black Admiral Ivan Hannibal commanded a Russian fleet that utterly destroyed a great Turkish armada and captured the powerful Navarino fortresses back in the 18th century.

THIS BLACK Admiral was descended from the Abyssinian, Ibrahim Hannibal, who in turn was the first African ancestor in Russia of the great poet, Alexander Pushkin. Pushkin sang of the great victory in one of his works.

There seems to be in every country certain objects that travelers want first of all to see.

In Paris they are the Eifel Tower and the Arch de Triomphe; in Rome, St. Peters and the Coliseum; in New York the Statue of Liberty and the Empire State building; in Egypt the Pyramids and the Sphinx.

In Athens, of course, it is the Acropolis (meaning "High City"), with its many temples of classic beauty, capped by the Parthenon, a beauteous revelation in marble even in its ruined condition and a monument to ancient Greek genius for beauty in architecture.

ABOUT THE closest example of what the Parthenon must have looked like when it was new and gleaming would be the Madeleine in Paris.

All the English - speaking Greeks up on that "High City" assured me that they had once lived in America. One said he had lived in New York, another in Detroit, another in Philadelphia.

The one that I chose to lead me about said he once lived in Chicago.

But judging by their accents, the whole lot had never been anywhere closer to America than the sixth fleet units floating down in the Bay of Pireaus.

Old Zeus, who was also the Weather God, must have been on his Olympian duty that day, for a strong and chilly wind was sweeping across the Acropolis (the Acropolis is much higher above sea level than the city of Athens below).

I had continually to hold onto my hat to keep it from being blown down into the open air Theater of Dionysos below.

Bustamate hits Jamaica with surprise

KINGSTON, Jamaica (ANP) — Sir Alexander Bustamante, leader of the opposition in the House of Representatives, rocked the Caribbean with surprise recently when he announced that he proposes to rid Jamaica of his cousin, Norman Manley, and Manley's socialism.

At the annual conference of his Jamaica Labor Party, the old political warrior, just recovering from blows he received when he was cutted down some weeks ago at a rainbow Club party, also declared that he will not be running for Federal honors.

He declared that while his Democratic Labor Party of the West Indies, will be "fighting to win the Federal election next March, he will be staying in Jamaica.

"I hope to win back control of the country from Manley by 1960 . . . When my Party returns to power in 1960, I shall give fabulous tax reliefs," Bustamante declared.
