Words To Live By

By THE REV. ROBERT NEWBOLD, Jr

Some people have wondered about the results of the Billy Graham Crusade. Prominent men have publicly registered their criticisms of it.

Unfortunately, much of the comment has come from persons who haven't attended services or contacted those who participated in the crusade.

Since I have had both of these experiences I point myself qualified to share the following observations:

(1) The crusade has made it easier to talk about Christ. People who, perhaps, were previously embarrassed to publicly witness for the Master are now boldly doing so.

Many of them are eagerly grasping every opportunity to speak a word for Jesus. Week before last, I met and talked with some of these people. Men, women, and teen-agers are numbered among them.

(2) The crusade is a good example of mass evangelism. It prepared the way for visitation evangelism.

New York city is reported to be the most difficult missionary field in America. But, over 6,000 individuals were won for Christ during five nights in the "Empire City."

Almost all reports indicated the ground work for these results were laid by the crusade.

(3) The crusade helped to bring ministers together. It is generally acceded that one of the most difficult groups to get together in many large cities are ministers.

An individual who has lived in New York for more than 25 years, acknowledged that the crusade served to bring about a spirit of unity among ministers he had not observed before.

(4) The crusade strengthened local churches. One of the often repeated reasons for not cooperating with the crusade was that it would weaken the local church.

The opposite proved to be true. Those who made commitments for Christ in Madison Square Garden are now in the church witnessing and working more so than ever before.

These observations, based upon the recent experience of working with the Billy Graham team, should not be construed as a plea for Billy Graham.

They are not. However, they do constitute a plea for an effective, continuous program of evangelism in each church. What I was privileged to witness in New York this year also seen in Buffalo last year.

Similar results can be noted in every American city if preacher and people alike will adopt the program and work at it.

Rev. Holmes to open campaign

The Rev. M. E. Holmes, Baltimore's former evangelist and radio pastor will conduct a ten-day Evangelistic Campaign under the auspices of St. John Baptist Church, Franklin and Pine Sts., starting Sunday, November 10.

The Rev. W. P. Dawson is pastor of St. John.

The Rev. Mr. Holmes will bring from Chicago his entire group of crusaders including the famous Sallie Martin, of the Martin and Morris singers, James Lee, famous for his rendition of "I'm Tired Lord," and Ralph Jones former CBS recording artist and former organist for Mahalia Jackson.

Special services will be held every night starting at 7:30 o'clock with Wednesday, Nov. 13 designated as NAACP Day.
