No picnic for workers at SS unit

"At this point, we don't find any way to interfere."

This was the notice served by Ray Swift, information officer for the Social Security Administration on Thursday as he said that officials in the agency were powerless to do anything about a segregated picnic being sponsored by the Employees Activities Association.

The picnic is being held tomorrow (Saturday) at Gwynn Oak Park, which does not admit colored guests.

Several Social Security employees told the AFRO that they had tried to purchase tickets to the affair from fellow white employees but had been refused.

THE EMPLOYEES Association is open to all personnel with the dues set at 50 cents a year.

However, according to employees, this group, which is approved by top officials in Social Security, makes events at places where colored workers are not welcome.

Explaining this, Mr. Swift said the "mores of the community" dictated holding affairs in places where mixed groups were not accepted.

"There is no other possibility open to the Association. Our feeling is what can they do about it?"

* * *

ASKED WHY an organization that gave segregated affairs was approved by Social Security, Bernie Kronens, assistant personnel officer, said:

"First of all, the Association is not an official agency of the bureau. It operates with our assent and knowledge.

"We feel that they do a great many worthwhile things."

Mr. Kronens also said that the administration officers felt that they had "no right" to recommend policy to the Association.

According to members of the Association, their fees enable them to buy at various stores at a discount.

Charge suspect in death of pretty, estranged wife

A stockily built, bespectacled gas company employee who sat with his eyes closed during a preliminary hearing on charges of beating his wife to death, was ordered held without bail for action of the grand jury Tuesday.

In Homicide Court at Central, Fred Gladden, 32, of the 1100 block Ploy St., entered a plea of not guilty when charged with beating to death his estranged wife, Mrs. Lillian Gladden, 28, of 822 E. North Ave., on June 7.

Mr. Gladden was not represented by an attorney, and appeared in court wearing a tan sport shirt open from the neck to his waistline.

From around his neck dangled a cross which rested in the mid-section of his bare chest.

The not guilty plea for Gladden was entered by Chief Magistrate Stanley Richardson.

* * *

AT THE beginning of the hearing, Miss Cartila Jenkins, a sister of the dead woman, broke into tears when Magistrate Richardson informed Gladden that he was entitled to be represented by an attorney.

To dispel any doubts of a possibility that the accused man might go free, Magistrate Richardson explained to the family (there were eight persons present) the procedure in trying a homicide case for which there is no bail.

The court continued with another case while a medical clerk was placed to the attorney allegedly hired by Gladden.

The hearing was resumed within five minutes after the attorney informed the court he had not been hired.

Patrolman Francis Banahan of the Central District testified that the attractive mother of two died from a brutal beating about the head and face.

The officer said Gladden admitted striking his wife with his fist when she visited him at his home.

The beating according to police, took place when Mrs. Gladden refused to resume her marriage with Gladden.

The couple had been separated two months prior to the slaying.

ACCORDING to testimony, after discussing a reconciliation, Gladden accompanied his wife to a bus line where he struck her on the jaw and kicked her.

Mrs. Gladden allegedly returned with her husband to his home where she was beaten until she lost consciousness.

Gladden then called his mother-in-law, an ambulance and the police, it was reported.

Mrs. Gladden was pronounced dead on arrival at Maryland General Hospital.

Her death was due to a blood clot on the surface of the brain according to the medical examiner's report.

Police testified the accused man has been a patient at Perry Point and Crownsville State Hospitals.

Enlisting in army wins dismissal for man in police court

"I hope the Army makes a man of you....I don't want you to take a record to Ford Meade with you, so I'm going to dismiss this case."

Magistrate Linwood G. Koger Sr., was speaking in Northwestern Police Court Tuesday morning to Edward W. Robinson, 400 block Druid Hill Ave. Mr Robinson had been arrested on a disorderly conduct charge, released on his own recognizance, and failed to appear for a hearing on Saturday.

"I was sick on Saturday," Mr. Brown explained. "And when I got better I went to Fort Meade and joined the Army."

Judge Koger dismissed the case.

Residents oppose school site

"We will take it into consideration."

This was the promise made Thursday by John N. Curlett, president of the Board of School Commissioner, to a group of citizens who appeared at a school-board meeting to protest the erection of a school in the area bounded by Carlisle, Bateman, Hilton and Denison Sts.

The protestants represented the New Ashburton Improvement Association and were headed by George H. Rosedom, assistant state's attorney and legal advisor to the group.

* * *

AMONG THOSE present were Earl Koger, Dr. Herbert Mosely, Dr. Charles R. Campbell, Dr. and Mrs. Dudley Lee, Dr. Ralph Young, Bishop Randolph Carr, Mrs. George Rosedon, Dr. Barnett Rhetta, Dr. I. Bradshaw Higgins and Benjamin Goldberg, president of the Association.

In asking that the school board reverse its previous decision to build the school at this specific location, Mr. Koger said:

"There are 700 homes in the whole area in which we are interested where many costly improvements have been made. They are all professional people."

* * *

IN PLACE of the proposed site Mr. Rosedom recommended two other locations, one bounded by Carlisle, Duval, Garrison and Roslyn Ave., the other bounded by Bateman, Garrison, Roslyn and Carlisle.

In answer to this Dr. William Lehr, assistant superintendent in charge of school facilities, said that both sites were too small and the one selected by the board was the "logical selection."

"There is no alternative except to acquire the site," he added.

"The City Planning Commission will not recommend the other sites, to substitute in place of the one we have chosen . . .

"We must build schools where they meet the population's needs," he said.

* * *

IN OTHER statements, Dr. Campbell told the board that the site that has been selected will result in the destruction of 13 homes while at the alternate sites, one location would only require the razing of nine homes while the second would involve 10 homes.

"If your policy is to disturb as few families as possible, then select the other sites," he said.

"Heretofore in the city persons of financial standing have purchased the large houses for making apartments," Dr. Higgins said.

"We have progressed a great deal," he told members of the board, "we hold hope that all persons are now able to maintain a standard of living to do credit to the city."

Chevy Club's raffle is un-raffled by the law

"Your Honor, these men are all good citizens, gainfully employed...we believe they had no intent to do wrong in conducting this raffle without a permit...we believe they were just ignorant of the law."

This explanation by a police officer in Northwestern Police Court Tuesday morning was coupled with a request for moderate bail consideration from George L. Russell Jr., their attorney, as four men were charged with conducting a raffle for their pleasure club.

The four are: Earl D. Chatman, 34, of 3037 Brighton St., raffle station manager; Willie J. Martin, 30, of 2013 Clifton Ave., filling station attendant; John Saunders, 31, of 2805 Gwynns Falls Pky., truck driver and Clarence Rosborough Jr., 29, construction worker of 1028 Druid Hill Ave.

* * *

THEY ARE the officers of the Chevy Pleasure Club, which has seven members in all. Police list the club headquarters as 2004 Liberty Heights Ave. Mr. Chatman operates a filling station at this address.

Magistrate Linwood G. Koger Sr., placed each under $500 bail for grand jury action on a charge of conducting a raffle without first obtaining a permit. He released each on his own recognizance on a second charge of conducting a raffle and not being a civic, religious or fraternal organization.

If they are convicted in a later Criminal Court trial, the four face up to $1,000 fines each, or up to a year in jail each, or sentences of fines and jail terms up to both of the above limits.

* * *

AT THE brief hearing Tuesday morning, Sgt. Joseph Judd, who along with Officer Salvatora Corona investigated and arrested the men, said the raffle came to police attention, after the club had applied for a raffle permit last Friday.

He said he and Officer Corona went to the Liberty Heights Ave. filling station, named as club headquarters, on Monday to investigate the permit application. He said he learned that the organization had been conducting a raffle for five weeks.

Sgt. Judd stated that he was told by Mr. Chatman that the Chevy Pleasure Club had 98 raffle books printed, with 10 coupons to sell at 50 cents each in each book. The raffle was scheduled to close with a drawing on the evening of August 3 at 2004 Liberty Heights Ave., the filling station headquarters.

Prizes were listed as a portable television set, 50 gallons of gasoline, and an electric clock.

* * *

SGT. JUDD stated he was told that a total of $490 was expected from complete sales of the coupon books. The total cost of the prizes was listed at $115. This, the policeman said, would leave a balance of $374.

Out of the $374 balance, Sgt. Judd he was told that the club planned to donate five percent to a church at Baker and Longwood Sts. He said a check with church officials showed they know nothing of the proposed.

We was further told, Sgt. Judd continued, that $5 was to be spent for an auto emblem for each member, or a total of $35 in this respect. This would leave $339, according to club officials' planning.

The $339 balance was to be retained as net profit from the raffle according to Sgt. Judd who said he was told by Mr. Chatman, that the money was to be deposited in a bank in a joint account under the names of Messrs. Martin, Chatman and Saunders.

* * *

MR. MARTIN is president of the Chevy Pleasure Club; Mr. Chatman is vice-president; Mr. Saunders is secretary, and Mr. Rosborough is listed as the treasurer.

The club was said to have assumed its name because all of its seven members, except one, drives similar autos.

Bishop Warned, Marches In Parade

(Story in Column 5).

Convicts Her Son

An Open Letter To The President

President Dwight Eisenhower
The White House
Dear Mr. President:

I am greatly alarmed by reports of a compromise on the Civil Rights Bill.

The Newspaper Publishers Association conferred with Mr. Brownell after the riots in the South, in which Autherine Lucy was admitted to the University of Alabama and, secondly, after the confessed killers and kidnapers of Emmett Till were freed by a Mississippi jury.

Mr. Brownell advised us, in effect, that existing Federal statutes needed amendments, which the administration would sponsor.

* * *

WE BELIEVED that his carefully thought out Civil Rights Bill, as sponsored by your administration, would give Mr. Brownell the authority, not merely to enforce the right to vote as guaranteed in the 15th Amendment, but all other rights of citizens guaranteed by the 14th Amendment.

I trust that the President will continue courageously to request that there be no changes in the Civil Rights Bill, now before the Senate, which will prevent its use to enforce any section of the Constitution.

All public officials take an oath to defend the entire Constitution, not just a part of it, to which someone objects. If I may be permitted to express this indelicately, one cannot be a little bit pregnant.

The President has said repeatedly, that the integrity of this government is at stake.

* * *

NO ONE can convince America or the rest of the world, of character and good intentions, when we compromise on moral principles.

I believe also, that the building of a sound two-party system is at stake in the Civil Rights debate.

There has not been a Republican elected to the United States Congress from Mississippi or Georgia since the southern states were permitted to violate the Constitution and restrict through intimidation and violence the vote of colored persons.

I am struck repeatedly, as you must be, by the answer to one question, which the southern opponents of Civil Rights repeatedly make.

When asked whether the Civil Rights Bill would be palatable, if it omits section #3 or if it permits jury trials in contempt cases (which is not standard practice), they give no positive answer.

Privately, they declare that public institutions, like the schools of the South, shall never be integrated, or that colored people shall never vote in the South.

* * *

MR. PRESIDENT, when the Supreme Court declared in May, 1954, that the public schools and other public facilities should be opened to all citizens alike, and no state shall discriminate against a pupil by reason of his color, you supported the Supreme Court's decision. Now before the United States Senate is the question of its enforcement.

No constitution or court decision is worth a hoot without enforcement provisions.

Both the 14th and 15th Amendments state that Congress shall have the power to enforce them by appropriate legislation. Either your Civil Rights Bill is appropriate or it is not appropriate.

* * *

BUT CERTAINLY no inappropriate legislation will solve this problem.

The American people have every confidence in you as a Chief Executive.

I urge you to see that the Civil Rights legislation, enacted by this Congress, shall do the whole job for which it is intended.

BISHOP AND MRS. D. WARD NICHOLS
As they arrived in Baltimore

Fighting bishop in procession

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

Bishop Richard Wright, president of the Bishops' Council of the AME church, Wednesday, issued a warning to Bishop D. Ward Nichols.

He announced to the bishops at an unscheduled 10 a.m. meeting of the Council:

"Any act of participation in the proceedings of the council as a bishop may make him (Bishop Nichols) liable to what the trial committee may call contempt of court."

In reply Bishop Nichols said:

"If the bishops would not object, I'll take my chances."

Following this statement, Bishop Nichols courageously took his official position as third in line, marched with the other 14 bishops from the rear entrance, down the sidewalk to the front door, and up the aisle of Trinity AME Church.

The procession was 35 minutes late.

Senators fight to save rights bill

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Leaders in the fight to enact civil rights legislation were fighting to keep Part 4 of the bill from being weakened by a jury trial amendment.

With Part 3 already stripped from the bill, with a jury trial amendment added to Part 4, the measure would be virtually worthless in enforcing even the right to vote in southern states.

After the conference of Republican congressional leaders with President Eisenhower Tuesday morning, Sen. William F. Knowland of California, Senate GOP leader, told reporters that he was opposed to any amendment on trial by jury being added to Part 4 of the bill.

PART 4 of the bill would make it unlawful for a private individual as well as a state or

Truthful Mrs. Bunch spoke fatal words

Defense attorneys unable to shake her damaging story on witness stana

By GARFIELD HINTON

A tearful mother innocently provided the testimony which sent her son to prison for 28 years.

"The court finds the defendant guilty of murder in the second degree."

The hushed silence of crowded Criminal Court was punctuated by loud cries Wednesday as Judge Joseph L. Carter sentenced Meadrow Bunch, 36, formerly of the 500 block Baker St.

* * *

IN A surprise turn of events Bunch was sentenced to 18 years in the Maryland Penitentiary for the April 27 bludgeoning of 70-year-old Heinz Heymann, president of the Deutsches Haus, Inc., a German - American restaurant in the 1200 block Cathedral St.

He received another 10-year sentence for the April 30 assault on Officer James G. Mach, in an alleged escape attempt, while Officer Mach operated an elevator in Central Police Station.

In addition he faces another 11 years as a parole violator.

He will first serve the 11 years and then begin the newest sentence.

The Parole Board can consider him for parole at any time.

* * *

A BOMB was dropped in the defense case, Tuesday, when the defendant's mother, Mrs. Hattie Bunch, 1100 block Dallas Ave., said that when her son came home from work, Saturday afternoon, April 27, he had paid her $10 for room and board and, "he made the remark that his boss had been killed."

The body was not discovered until Sunday afternoon by Mr. Heymann's son, Karl, accompanied by Officer Edward Kowalewski, as they searched the basement.

According to John C. Weiss, prosecuting attorney, Bunch was released on parole on March 29, after serving 8 years of a 20-year sentence on two armed robbery charges.

On March 31, two days after his parole, Bunch was employed by the Deutsches Haus, Inc.

JUDGE CARTER, who along with Judges James K. Cullen and Michael J. Manley, heard the case, further explained:

"We have no difficulty determining that there was an illegal homicide, nor do we have any doubt that it was committed by the defendant."

Judge Carter further noted that if the state is to establish murder in the first degree, "it is the duty of the state to show premeditation." The jurist added:

"It is incumbent on the defense to show evidence of man-
