—No Dixon divorce

"Mr. Dixon did abandon and desert me and the two children on some date between July 1 and July 25, 1956 at which time I was on vacation with the two children and his mother.

Mrs. Dixon also stated: "When I returned to my home I found that my husband had moved out of the premises and subsequently he advised me that he had left and had no intention of returning.

"Further," she stated in her answer, "we not only occupied the same bedroom but as late as September, 1956, he took me and the two children on extended vacation embracing visits to Chicago, Detroit, New York, and Montreal and on this trip we lived together as man and wife."

MR. DIXON'S divorce bill was dismissed by Judge Oppenheimer during the two-day proceedings in Circuit Court.

Judge Oppenheimer's decision to award the judicial separation, the alimony, and the support for the children was based on Mrs. Dixon's cross bill filed Aug. 27, 1956.

During the divorce hearing on June 13 and June 14, financial records of the Comedy Club, Mr. Dixon's income tax returns for 1953, 1955 and 1956, as well as his bank balances were submitted in evidence by Howard Bregel, attorney for Mrs. Dixon, in an attempt to continue the $65 a week temporary alimony set six months ago.

HOWEVER, Mr. Dixon testified that he and his brother are now both in the bail-bond business and have been since last year; that his mother, Mrs. Evelyn Dixon Charity, conducts the Comedy Club business and that he visits there only on Monday to check the cash register.

He testified that he averages only $75 a week from the bail-bond business and during the month of April netted only $300.

Among persons present during the hearing was Mrs. Lillian Watkins, 35 who was summoned as a witness on June 13.

When Mrs. Watkins did not show up for the Thursday hearing, there was talk of a bench warrant.

However, attorneys in the case stated that they would be responsible for her Friday appearance.

Mrs. Watkins was identified as the person for whom Mr. Dixon acted as agent for the purchase of a house at 833 Chauncey Ave.

MRS. DIXON testified that she called the Watkins home in December, 1956, at 1:30 a.m. and on May 2, 1957, at 5:30 p.m. at the advice of Mr. Bregel, her attorney.

"Both times," she testified, "he answered the phone."

Mr. Dixon, however, counteracted that he and Mrs. Watkins were just friends and that he attended parties at the Watkins home and merely acted as agent for purchase of the house.

He admitted that he had advanced Mrs. Watkins $200 when she was short that amount on the purchase price of the house, but he told the Court, she returned the money to him the next day.

IN ANNOUNCING his decision, Judge Oppenheimer stated that he believed Mr. Dixon deserted his wife and family without just cause.

Prior to the alimony award, Mrs. Dixon told the Court that she had no independent income of her own and that she is unable to work because of her condition.

She also stated that the two children, who are inclined to be frail, are in need of constant medical attention.

For her courtroom appearance, Mrs. Dixon was attractively gowned in gray linen. She wore a red cloche hat over her pretty short bob.

Her gown was set off by a white collar and she wore red shoes.

Mrs. Watkins, who was identified as a clerk in the Department of Unemployment Security, wore a white dress with bands of pink and powder blue on the skirt.

Representing Mr. Dixon were Josiah Henry and Melvin Fine.

well taken, but he believed that the proper procedure was for him to submit the question to the Senate.

Senators heatedly debated Thursday. Senate rules under which a coalition of Republicans and northern Democrats seek to bypass the Senate Judiciary Committee with the Eisenhower civil rights program.

The argument over disposition of the House-approved civil rights bill began when Vice President Nixon directed the clerk to read the measure.

SEN. WILLIAM F. KNOWLAND of California, the GOP leader, served notice that as soon as the bill was read for the second time, he would object to further proceedings on it.

Sen. Olin D. Johnston, (D., S.C.) one of four southerners who have kept civil rights bottled up in the Judiciary Committee, asked that the bill be read "word by word, line by line."

Usually, the reading of the title of the bill is considered the reading of the full bill.

Knowland moved that the bill be read by title and that its text be printed in the Congressional Record.

AFTER SOME ARGUMENT over whether the Knowland motion was debatable, Knowland said he had no objection to the bill being read in full. The clerk then read the measure.

Knowland, recognized by Nixon, objected to any further proceedings on the bill. He said he made his objection under Rule 14.

Rule 14 provides that after a House-approved bill has received a second reading without being sent to a committee, if objection is made to further proceedings on it, it shall be placed on the calendar.

Sen. Richard B. Russell, (D., Ga.), made the point of order that Rule 14 was superceded and annulled by a section of the Reorganization Act of 1946, making the sending of a bill to committee mandatory.

Russell spoke at length in support of his point of order.

HE CONTENDED THAT if the civil rights bill is placed on the Senate calendar, "unbounded chaos" would result from bypassing Senate committees with house-approved bills and that the Senate leadership, whether Democratic or Republican, would be "hamstrung and hogtied."

Knowland maintained that if the Senate had intended to change Rule 14 by the Reorganization Act, it would have so stated in the act or its legislative history.

He also asserted that referring a House-approved bill to a committee was not mandatory because on a number of occasions bills have not been "automatically and mandatorily" referred to committees.

Sen. Thomas C. Hennings of Missouri, chairman of the Judiciary Constitutional Rights Sub-Committee, supported the move to place the House bill on the Senate calendar.

Hennings said there is no assurance that the Judiciary Committee will report out a bill at this session.

be searched, he said.

"I was greatly disturbed," said co - owner Macey Hall, "because my brothers suffers a heart condition."

Despite proper identification found in Mr. Hall's wallet, the police were not convinced Mr. Hall was not the robbery suspected hunted in the vicinity.

MRS. JOSEPHINE PIERCE, 1900 block Sixth St., told the AFRO: "When I ran down off my back porch to ask the police what were they doing to Mr. Hall, they told me to get back in the house."

"Other folk," Mrs. Pierce added, "leaned out of windows and called across back fences, because we knew the police were wrong."

She went into the house, she said, to call Mr. Hall's wife, Ruth. She changed her mind because Mrs. Hall recently returned home from the hospital.

POLICE ALSO ordered Dick Woods, 1900 block Sixth St., NW, and several other witnesses to "Get back inside," neighbors reported.

Meanwhile, Mr. Hall was herded down the alley toward the patrol wagon, but was released when one of three other policemen coming on the scene identified him and reported that the real suspect was cornered in a nearby house on Sixth St., NW.

Capt. Otto P. Fuss of precinct No. 13 told the AFRO: "It was one of those things. Mr. Hall not only was in the vicinity, but he also fits the description of the suspect. They are about the same age, wore same kind of hat and clothes, and both have mustache."

CAPTAIN FUSS said "It wouldn't have been natural for police to have done otherwise, knowing the suspect was armed."

Less than five minutes after Mr. Hall was released, the captain said, George I. Eighmie, 40, of 1918 Sixth St., NW, was trapped in the nearby house, disarmed of two revolvers and charged with robbery and a series of housebreakings.

Captain Fuss and Police Inspector Roger Chenault personally paid a visit to Mr. Hall, Wednesday, "to explain the situation."

"Although it was quite a shock," said Mr. Hall, "I am taking no action against the Police Department."

CONVERGED ON the alley scene were two headquarters cruisers, two scout cars and three motorcycles, witnesses said.

This is Baltimore's first convention of this regional association since 1936.

CONVENTION hostess are Monumental Lodge No. 2, where Lloyal Randolph, Elks national grand trustee, is exalted ruler, and Great Southern Temple No. 30, headed by Mrs. Pearl Brown. Both are at 1528 Madison Ave.

Registration of delegates begins at 11 a.m. Saturday at the Monumental Elks Home. At 3:30 p.m., an oratorical contest will be held at the Booker T. Washington Junior High School, Lanvale and McCulloh Sts., with Mrs. Mary Holley, Elks Grand State director of Education, presiding.

Dr. Bernard Harris, president of the Tri-State Association, will be honored at a testimonial banquet at the Monumental Elks Home, Saturday evening at 7 o'clock. A welcome party for delegates and friends will follow, at 10 p.m. there.

JOINT MEMORIAL services start Sunday's activities at 10:30 a.m. at Union Baptist Church, 1200 block Druid Hill Ave., with Mrs. Gladys Milburn, president of Tri-State auxiliaries, presiding.

The annual Tri-State Association parade begins Sunday afternoon at 1:30. This will feature about 20 bands, along with marching units from the member lodges and auxiliaries.

In addition, guest marching units are expected from Philadelphia and New York City. All will be under command of the local Elks' Brig. Gen. Edward C. Wooden.

THE PARADE will assemble at Biddle and Bond Sts. Then march on Biddle to Fallsway, to Mount Royal Ave., to Dolphin St., to Myrtle Ave., then to Lafayette Ave., up Pennsylvania Ave. to Gold St., over Gold to Madison Ave., and down Madison Ave. past the Monumental Elks Home to Preston St. and disband there.

Trophies, adding special zest to the parade, will be given to the largest unit; the unit coming the longest distance; the best band; the best uniformed unit, and the best junior unit.

Sunday activities will end with a public session at 8 p.m. at Sharp Street Methodist Church, Dolphin and Etting Sts., with Dr. Harris, presiding.

BUSINESS SESSIONS will follow the annual Inspirational Breakfast at the Monumental Elks Home at 8 a.m.

Brother Elks will hold their sessions there. Daughter Elks and Junior Elks will hold their sessions a block away at Trinity Baptist Church, Druid Hill Ave. and McMechen St.

The Tri-State Association' annual pageant will be held for the public at 8 p.m. Monday, at Trinity Baptist Church. A cabaret party for delegates is set for 11 p.m. that evening at the Monumental Elks Home.

THE CONVENTION'S ball featuring Lionel Hampton and his orchestra, takes place at 9 p.m. Tuesday, at the Fifth Regiment Armory.

"Miss Tri-State of 1957," will be crowned.

Following Wednesday morning business sessions, the convention closes with a farewell party at Monumental Elk Home.

J. T. Norris gets a break

"The Probation Department recommended that you be given another chance. I'm reluctantly going to do that. . . I hope you never get in trouble. If you do, don't come before me."

With these remarks Thursday Judge S. Ralph Warnken imposed a two-year suspended sentence on a 28-year-old man who pleaded guilty to six cases of taking $400 worth of clothing from a department store where he was employed.

The defendant was James T. Norris, 1500 block Myrtle Ave.

The defendant, who had no previous criminal record, was convicted on May 31.

'You have dangerous tendencies' — judge

"I think you have dangerous tendencies. You could very well be here on a murder charge."

With this admonition Judge S. Ralph Warnken last Friday sentenced James M. Powell, 38, to a year in the House of Correction for assault.

Mr. Powell, 1600 block McKean Ave., pleaded guilty to common assault in the May 11 razor slashing of his common-law mate, Mrs. Alice Wright.

JAMES PRICE, assistant State's attorney, told the court Mrs. Wright was cut across the throat during a quarrel. The prosecutor said the wound required 20 stitches.

"She does not take the position that he intended to kill her," said Mr. Price, after informing Judge Warnken the woman did not want to prosecute Mr. Powell.

"Your honor, I didn't intend to kill her," Mr. Powell, a short curly haired man, said. "I'm sorry for what I did."

According to the prosecutor, Mr. Powell has the following record: 1943, assault and stabbing, three months in jail; 1948, deadly weapon and assault, concurrent one-year terms in the House of Correction, and 1956, deadly weapon (razor), fined $25 and costs.

Mr. Powell was represented by Percy Brinkley, attorney.

LAST SEEN HERE—Clarence Pugh, father of four-year-old Sharon Pugh, points to wall surrounding Latrobe Homes courtyard where daughter was last seen before she disappeared Tuesday. Pugh family lives in second floor apartment in middle.

FLASH! Father asks AFRO readers to help . . .

Clarence Pugh, father of the missing child, spoke these words at 12:30 today (Friday):

"I want someone to knock on my door an cheave my baby by the hand and say! 'It this your little girl?' Then we will be happy.

"But now, our backs are to the wall.

"We have come to a dead end.

"All we can do is have patience and hope and pray she is safe.

"Ask your AFRO readers to please notify me or the police at call the FBI. LEx. 9-6700."

Police clears Valerie suspect

WASHINGTON

Police have tentatively cleared Calvin Carter, 22, who Sunday became a leading suspect in the death of Valerie Lee when he attempted to commit suicide because "he had done a bad thing."

He was held for mental observation by police who said he admitted having had relations with a 12-year-old girl. He said he resided with a few block's of Valerie's home.

—'All we can do . . .'

called the last time he saw his daughter.

"It was about 5 o'clock Tuesday evening the first time we looked out the window and saw her and sisters sitting on the wall."

HERE, Mr. Pugh pulled aside the curtain in his second floor apartment living room and showed me the spot where Sharon, and her sisters, Deborah, 6, and LaChelle, 2, were playing on Tuesday.

"I can see her now," he said. "She was right there. And then, about 5:15 p.m. my wife Geraldine looked out. They were still playing.

"We had a habit of looking often when they were playing.

"The next time we looked, Sharon was gone," he said.

Mr. Pugh added:—

"Somebody told us when we asked where Sharon was that she had gone to the store with a girl named 'Barbara' to get some candy.

"They said 'Barbara' was about five feet tall, and dark brown and she had on a blue dress.

"But we have no facts," the father said.

"We just know she was taken from the wall by some girl or maybe it was a woman."

Mr. Pugh said that he and his wife are both Catholic. He is employed in an A and P warehouse.

"We don't want to have the frame of mind that she has been hurt. We are trying to keep from feeling like she has been harmed."

Mr. Pugh also said that everyone has cooperated.

"They have searched the playgrounds and inside 'the project homes and they have covered the whole neighborhood.

"It's good. I never knew we had so many friends."

MR. AND MRS. PUGH were married in 1949, he said.

Mrs. Pugh is an attractive, sandy - haired young woman. As her husband and I talked she remained calm, patted small Deborah on the head, and went to the third floor to care for Lachele who was taking a nap.

As FBI agents and police as well as neighbors and friends filed through the living room and kitchen, Mrs. Pugh said very little.

Behind her glasses, her eyes appeared strained and red from crying.

Her modest home is neat. In evidence were the kind of toys small girls play with.

Asked if she had rested or was hungry, Mrs. Pugh replied:

"I just don't have much appetite. You know how we feel."

That was all she said.

THERE WAS a tense feeling in the home and I sensed a feeling of sadness there.

Deborah, Sharon's six - year old sister is possibly too small to understand what it is all about, that her sister is not there to play as they are accustomed to do each evening.

Upstairs, two - year - old Lachelle was asleep, little did she realize the heartache brought to her mother and father.

Someday, the two little girls will look back and remember when an entire city was searching for their sister.

Mrs. Cora Lewis, 73,

GOLDSBORO, N.C. — Funeral services for Mrs. Cora Lewis, 73, of 920A Lincoln Dr., were held Sunday at Goldsboro Chapel Church, burial following in Old Mill Cemetery.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Minnie L. Sutton, with whom she made her home; four sisters, Mesdames Martha Lewis and Agnes Faison of Goldsboro, Daisy Hadley of Philadelphia, and Alma Royall of Wilmington, Del.; two brothers, Henry and Richard Lewis of Philadelphia.

—FBI hunts

Some had been brought from as far away as the 700 block of Broadway, several blocks distant from the 825 Abbott Court home.

Meanwhile, neighbors gathered about the area in small groups discussing the child's disappearance.

Perhaps one of the last neighbors to have seen the little girl prior to her disappearance is Mrs. Bernice Dorsey, who lives almost directly across the Abbott Court from the Pugh home at 840 Abbott Court.

Mrs. Dorsey said:

"Sharon and her two little sisters came over to her house about 5:30 p.m., on the day she disappeared.

"They were always coming over to my house after cookies," Mrs. Dorsey added.

Mrs. Dorsey has a nine-year old daughter, Charlotte, with whom the Pugh girls often played.

THE AREA where the little girl was last seen is a small court less than 30 feet from the Pugh home.

This court divides the front entrances on both sides of Abbott Court and it is used as a sitting area by the residents.

FBI agents are not overlooking the possibilities of foul play. They were seen inquiring about the basements and cellars of neighborhood stores.

They were checking garages very carefully.

They were also seen coming out of the basement and through the yard of St. John's Catholic Church at Eager and Valley Sts.

This church is less than 50 yards from the Pugh home.

RESIDENTS TOLD this reporter that juvenile hoodlums were in the habit of overrunning the area.

They complained that hoodlums often molested smaller children, taking their candy or anything of value they had on them.

They also stated that the juveniles did not appear to live in the housing project but were attracted by the playground located in the project about one-half block from the Pugh home.

RESIDENTS IN the area also told of seeing investigating agents examine combing garbage disposal units in the housing project near the Pugh home.

A report was rampant late Thursday that the pretty four-year-old child may have been whisked away from her home by an older child with a mother complex.

It was learned that police were looking into a report that a girl who appeared to be about 14 or 15 had been seen in the housing project area about the time the child disappeared.

This report stated that the older child had admired the missing girl and commented: 'My, isn't she pretty.'

FBI AGENTS on the scene refused to comment about the case and referred all questions to the Baltimore FBI Chief, D. K. Brown.

Until last year, the FBI did not enter cases where there was suspicion of kidnaping unless there was proof the missing person had been transported across state lines.

However, the law has now been amended so that the FBI can enter such cases after the person has been missing from home for 24 hours.

REPORTS ON file at Northeastern Police Station show that officers have been checking out reports that the missing child may have been spirited away by a girl named 'Barbara.'

These reports show that late Thursday police had scoured the neighborhood and questioned at least 20 girls named 'Barbara,' and their parents or adult relatives.

The report adds that most of the girls were teenagers who attend Schools No. 139, No. 147 or Dunbar High.
