Youth jailed for attack

"We interviewed her several times due to the unusualness of the case. Each time she told us the same thing.

"I personally feel that she would not have reported it if it had not been for the hospital report."

Policewoman Bernice Gross, testifying in Youth Court Monday, was referring to a 15-year-old girl who accused a youth of attacking her after a hospital report disclosed that she had been pregnant.

On trial was James H. Simms, 19, 1100 block N. Calhoun St., who pleaded guilty to carnal knowledge through his attorney, Jacque Leeds.

THE YOUTH, on 18 months probation in an automobile case, was sentenced to 90 days in jail by Chief Judge Hospital Niles.

The prosecuting witness contended in court that Simms forcibly attacked her as a girlfriend's home on Feb. 28.

Simms, arrested April 3 after the girl was treated at the hospital, denied forcing her.

Julius Romano, assistant State's attorney, introduced into evidence a hospital report indicating the girl had been pregnant two months before losing the baby.

Rock Castle promotes cadets

ROCK CASTLE, Va. — At the recent military ball and ceremony held at St. Emma Military Academy, Brig. Gen. Kenneth W. Hare, professor of military science and tactics, announced that the famous Corps of Cadets had won the Honor School rating for the consecutive year.

Among those responsible for this outstanding achievement were a group of cadets from Baltimore and vicinity who were rewarded for their superior performance of duty by being promoted to the grades as shown:

Sergeant to 2nd Lt. —Joseph Martin, 2027 N. Wolfe St.; corporal to 1st Sgt.—Robert Robinson, 620 Cheraton Road; corporal to sergeant—John Love, 2416 Montebello Terr.

Corporal to sergeant — Clifford Washington, 1812 Caroline St.; private to corporal—Warren McCoy, 3035 Ascension St.; private to private 1st-class—David Branch, 221 Chestnut St.; private to private—Herbert St. Clair, 317 High St., Cambridge, Md.

The Baltimore Branch of the National Alliance of Postal Employees, monthly meeting, Sunday, June 16, 4 p.m. at the Druid Hill YMCA.

THIS PHOTO of Dr. W. W. Walker, (No. 2) who died last week at the age of 79, was made in 1930 when he was president of the Baltimore Tennis Club. Photo was made at Druid Hill Park where Harmon Fitch (No. 4) won the men's singles and doubles title. Dr. Walker, (No. 1) now president of the AFRO-AMERICAN Co. awarded the trophies. Others shown in the photo are No. 3, John T. Wood, now a Baltimore school principal; No. 5, Mrs. Rose Bright; No. 6, Katherine Jones; No. 7, Ernest McCampbell, D.C.; No. 8 Miss Elizabeth Carr; No. 9, Lloyd Davis; No. 10, Anita Gant, D.C.; No. 11, Charlie Williams; No. 12, Warren Weaver, now manager of the Gilmor Homes; No. 13, Reginald Watts; No. 14, Simon Carter; now a physician; and No. 15, Ed Fisher, now a postal worker. Can you recognize some others here?

Rev. W. W. Walker was the 'grand old man of tennis'

By LOUISE K. HINES

The Rev. W. W. Walker, pastor-emeritus of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, is recalled this week by former members of the Monumental Tennis Club as "The Grand Old Man of Tennis."

Confined to Provident Hospital since March 23, the 79-year-old gentleman died there on Wednesday. Funeral services were held at the church on Saturday.

Sports writer, E. B. Henderson, author of "The Negro in Sports," credits the Rev. Mr. Walker with being a pioneer in tennis and "a prime mover in sponsoring the first-inter-state tournament held in Philadelphia.

This was in 1898 when the Rev. Mr. Walker was then a member of the Chautauque Tennis Club.

In 1899, states Mr. Henderson, this outstanding local tennis figure, playing in Washington, defeated Henry Freeman for the championship after a closely contested battle.

ADDING TO his laurels the Rev. Mr. Walker participated in the 1900 tournament held in Washington, defeating Charles Cook of Howard University, the latter an exponent of the "Lawford" stroke.

Ralph J. Reckling, Sr., now retired as Douglass High School principal states, "We thought we were pretty good tennis players until the Rev. Mr. Walker came to Baltimore.

"He had mastered all the arts and skills of tennis, and his 'chop and net game' was of such that we considered it quite an achievement to beat him."

Another early Baltimore tennis enthusiast is P. O. G. Pennington, retired Douglass High School science teacher.

He was profuse in his praise of the Rev. Mr. Walker, both as a player and an influence for good.

Mr. Pennington spoke of the proper attire for tennis play which was white duck pants, broadcloth shirts, and white duck hats.

Most games were played on the clay courts near the Druid Hill Park swimming pool.

TEAMED WITH the late Dr. B. M. Rhetta Sr., the Rev. Mr. Walker again added to his tennis fame.

They were a contrast in physique.

The clergyman had what players describe as a "tennis build," being tall, spare, and muscular.

Dr. Rhetta was of medium heights and compactly built. Together and individually, they gave their opponents a fast moving, hard driving game.

For years the living room mantle piece in the Walker home was lined with trophies of sizes attesting to the skill of the Rev. Mr. Walker and the team of Walker and Rhetta.

THE "golden age" of tennis Baltimore included the name of the late Dr. H. Stanton McCard who was president of the Monumental City Tennis Association and the American Tennis Association.

Other members in addition to Messrs. Reckling and Pennington, and Dr. P. J. Cardozo were the late Ralp V. Cook, Winfort Braxton, and the late Mrs. J. G. McRae, William H. Wright.

Baltimore's outstanding women tennis player of the Rhetta-Walker era was the late Lucy D. Slowe, dean of women at Howard University.

Miss Slowe won the 1917 Monumental Tennis Club Championships in Baltimore.

After three successive defeats she went on to victory in the national championships in 1921.

OTHER LOCAL women players were Mrs. Daisy Bailey Jones, who sponsored a women's tennis group which also played in several cities; Mesdames Pauline Bond, Eloise Wright, Mrs. Gibson, and the late Mrs. Elvira Mr. Bond.

The Rev. Mr. Walker was often seen around the Druid Hill Park tennis courts in recent years.

He was respected for his incisive analyses of the games and his recollections of the "great games" of the bygone years.

The Baltimore Tennis Club honored him by naming him as its honorary president.

Charges mate unfaithful; seeks divorce

Charging her husband with adultery, Mrs. Evelyn Taylor Beasley, 2826 Woolbrook Ave., started divorce proceedings against Cyril Maxwell Beasley, 3501 Liberty Heights Ave., Monday.

In legal papers filed in Circuit Court Mrs. Beasley asks for an absolute divorce, care and maintenance of their two children and alimony.

No correspondent was listed in Mrs. Beasley's bill of complaint but the complainant contends that "names will be disclosed on the day of the trial."

THE BEASLEYS were married here on March 19, 1949, and have two sons, ages 8 and 9, according to the court papers.

George Russell Jr., an associate of the law firm of Brown, Allen and Watts, filed the divorce proceedings on behalf of Mrs. Beasley.
