past the bier of a young father who was slain in the apartment of Miss Gehreva Lewis, 1109 W. Lanvale St., who has been charged with causing his death.

Services for Paul Alfred Shields were held last Wednesday at the Elroy Wilson Funeral Home.

The same funeral home handled the slain girl's funeral.

WELL BEFORE time for the funeral, the Brown home was filled with relatives and playmates of the dead girl.

Men, women, children, and merchants from the community visited the home.

IN A LIVING ROOM filled with flowers and tastefully decorated in green and black wallpaper, the visitors filed past the bier of the dead girl who was dressed in a blue dress with lace collar and a blue ribbon in her hair.

Twenty-six huge floral pieces took up almost all of the room.

The only vacant space in the living room was in front of the grey casket.

AT THE HEAD of the bier stood a huge heart shaped floral pattern of red roses.

A card contained the notation, 'Mother and Dad, Sisters and Brothers."

At the foot, another card attached to a floral piece contained the words; 'To Our Little Sister from Sammy, Ellie and Jay'.

From the stems of other flowers were attached cards from social clubs, neighborhood groups and business establishments.

Flowers were also delivered from various church groups, and from the faculty of School No. 25.

THE 16-CAR procession to the church was led by two hearses. The first was loaded with flowers from top to bottom. The second contained the casket.

At the church, flower girls had to make three trips to the hearse.

The remaining flowers were carried into the church by some of the more than 100 spectators who stood outside in the rain.

The girl's father said the family had also received 17 telegrams, 102 cards and some money.

While walking quietly back and forth through the crowded house Mr. Brown said he had not found time to count the money.

He said he wanted to thank everyone who had been so nice to the family.

With earshot of the father could be heard the comments: "She looks nice" and "Poor child."

UPON REACHING the church, the funeral was delayed by cars parked out front although signs had been posted to the effect that no parking was to be allowed in the block after 1 p.m.

The procession ran into another delay when a funeral attendant reached the main entrance and found the doors still locked.

They were opened from the inside by one of the flower girls.

Spectators outside commented: "I wouldn't go into that funeral for money. It's going to be too sad."

One man was overheard to ask another: "Did they catch the...who killed that little girl?"

A fifth grade pupil at Elementary School No. 143 at Hoffman and Eden Sts., the slain girl was shot in the back at Lafayette and Harford Aves., while returning from an errand for her parents.

The slaying was witnessed by her father and mother.

Mrs. Brown fainted as her daughter ran to her screaming, "Mother! Mother!"

In connection with her death, police arrested Willie Wrice, 29, construction worker of the 1700 block N. Regester St.

Police said the child was shot accidently when the accused man fired three shots at a girlfriend.

Mr. Wrice was charged with homicide on Monday and ordered held without bail.

THE REV. Dennis Barrow officiated at services for the slain girl.

He described Jacqueline as a Christian church worker who tried to do her part in the church's youth program.

"We will miss her love and devotion in this church" the Rev. Mr. Barrow told the bereaved family.

Solos were rendered by Kenneth Mosley and Mrs. Ethel Simmons.

The senior and junior choirs also took part in the services.

Jacqueline was the youngest of four children in the Brown family and one of two daughters.

Her sister, Cecelia, 20, is a student at Morgan State College.

Her brothers are Samuel Jr., 17, a Morgan student; and Ellie Franklin, 15, a 9th grade pupil at Dunbar High School.

Her father is self employed as a contractor. Her mother is a nurse's aide at Montebello Hospital.

LAST GOODBY—Clinging to the side of the casket containing her sister Jacqueline, Miss Cecilia Brown is comforted by her father Samuel Brown while her mother Mrs. Addie Brown is restrained by a nurse and a funeral attendant. The 10-year-old girl was killed by a stray bullet Saturday while running an errand for her parents.

JUST FRIENDS — Weeping at the bier of their slain playmate, Gloria Young and Sandra Sims take a long last look at Jacqueline Brown during funeral services at Fountain Baptist Church Wednesday. A total of 2,025 person visited the girls home to offer condolences.

from unnatural causes is an established fact.

States Attorney Hamilton P. Fox told the AFRO on Tuesday:

"She suffered a fractured Adams apple. There were bruises about her neck and upper chest.

"Her head was dislocated from her neck. Her clothing indicated she had been dragged across the floor."

Following the above report given Mr. Fox on Friday by Wicomico county deputy medical examiner Dr. Earl L. Royer, Davis was arrested by Police Chief William J. Chatman.

COLLIER (SONNY) BREWINGTON, described as Mrs. Davis' daughter's boy friend, is also being held as a material witness.

Mrs. Davis was well respected in the community. Her mutilated body was found by her daughter Mrs. Gretta Powell, 23, when she went into the basement at about 9:30 p.m., to get clothes for her baby.

Mrs. Powell said she saw her mother's feet sticking from behind the furnace. She told the AFRO:

"I went to her and I called her. She did not say anything.

"I called Ben and I said: What's the matter with mother?" Sonny came and he shook her and then he said: 'Mom is dead.'"

* * *

ALSO unexplained are what appear to be blood stains on the heater-type living room stove.

States Attorney Fox stated that scrapings had been taken to determine the origin of the stains.

Meantime, rumor circulated among townsfolk that Mr. Davis may have resented his wife's placing flowers on the grave of her third husband, Richard Purnell, on Memorial Day.

Mrs. Powell told the AFRO that her mother went to the Greenacres Cemetery after she got off from work about 1:45 p.m.

"She got home about 5 p.m. and she told me she had put flowers on Purnell's grave and his mother's grave too."

ASKED IF she knew of any unhappiness between her mother and stepfather, Mrs. Powell stated that the couple seemed happy.

She replied: "Ben was rather likeable. The only time they had any discussion was when her mail kept coming in the name of Purnell.

"He told her he was sick of it, and that her name was Davis now."

Mrs. Powell stated that her mother tried every way she could to make her husband happy and that she appeared "as happy as she could be."

MRS. POWELL continued: "He was supposed to eat at the restaurant where he worked, but he still wanted mother to cook for him.

"Once or twice to help her he wanted his dinner ready when he came home.

"He said he was going to put a stop to this thing of not having food in the house when he came home.

"On one occasion he told me something had to be done about it and he started crying.

"He got moods like that. Sometimes he would sit and stare and say nothing. Mother would tell him to get hold of himself," Mrs. Powell said.

ACCORDING TO James W. Hotten of Mardella Springs Route No. 1, who is married to Mrs. Davis' foster-mother, no quarrels on disagreements had come to his attention.

He stated: "They seemed to get along all right."

"Only one time I heard Ben say Sarah did not want him to get a car but he was going to get one; he didn't care what she said."

Mrs. Davis' employer for whom she had worked as housekeeper for over 12 years, stated that Mrs. Davis did not reveal her marriage for over two weeks.

"She never did talk much, but she told me she had got her a ring. She said they eloped on a week-end.

"She was dear to us and everybody liked her. She worked hard in the community and for the March of Dimes. Her club equipped a community playground."

FUNERAL services were held at the Zion Methodist Church in Sharptown on Monday.

Mrs. Davis was a member of the Salisbury John Wesley Methodist where she was a member of the usher board. She was also a member of the Friendly Benefit Club and secretary of the Salisbury Branch NAACP.

While her body lay in state at the West Funeral Home, more than 400 persons of both races passed the bier. Approximately 100 persons braved rain storms Monday to attend the burial services in the Sharptown cemetery nearby the Zion Church.

Besides her husband and daughter, Mrs. Davis is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Hotten of Sharptown.

Housewife held in death of friend, 77

"This is the man I stabbed."

According to police in Homicide Court Tuesday afternoon, that's what they were told by Mrs. Hilda M. Smith, 41, 1800 block N. Rosedale St., when they found a dead man in her home last May 5.

Charged with stabbing to death Joseph Carr, 77, of the 2500 block Druid Hill Ave., Mrs. Smith was held without bail for the grand jury.

Sgt. Peter Lowndes testified that Mr. Carr was stabbed 19 times with a paring knife.

Mrs. Smith allegedly told police she moved the dead man out of her path while enroute to the station house to surrender.

were "beyond reconciliation."

HIS NOV. 6, 1956 complaint started a six-months long succession of petitions which climaxed in a crossbill filed on March 28 by Mrs. Commodore.

During the divorce hearing both parties testified they made effort to preserve the nine-year marriage.

The Rev. Mr. Commodore alleged that he "never gave up hope" during the separation period.

Mrs. Commodore stated that she always had hope that they would again live together but that after the minister finished his Maryland State College studies, he "went dead on the line."

HIGHLIGHTING Monday's testimony before the Court was a series of letters the Rev. Mr. Commodore admitted he had written Mrs. Commodore since Oct. 1, 1952, the date he alleged in his petition they agreed to voluntary separation.

The group of letters came as a surprise to the Rev. Mr. Commodore but brought this retort from his wife:

"He should have known I would keep every one of them. He knows I always keep every bill, every letter, everything."

The pastor examined the letters, admitted he wrote them, but explained to the Court that he "wanted to see how she would adjust" to the separation.

James L. Bundy, attorney, who represented Mrs. Commodore asked: "Didn't you say you were separated in Oct., 1952? Yet you visited and wrote each other?"

THE REV. MR. Commodore testified that "around Dec., 1953 or Jan., 1954," he and Mrs. Commodore lived as man and wife on an overnight visit. Following that visit, a quotation from a letter dated Dec. 30 was read before the court.

In the letter which was attached to an envelop postmarked Dec. 1, 1953, the pastor wrote:

"I feel I should tell you the truth. I enjoyed you more than ever before."

The Rev. Mr. Commodore was confronted with several quotations from the various letters which included excerpts from a May 6, 1954 document in which he told his wife he had "dates" with a New York school teacher and a practice teacher.

IN OTHER letters the pastor mentioned intimate details of their marriage.

In these letters the minister referred to Mrs. Commodore's frequently leaving him. He said: "If you plan to remain my wife, you should come to see me wherever I am and act as a wife should."

Frequently, the Rev. Mr. Commodore told the Court that Mrs. Commodore "threw things at me."

He testified: "One evening when I came from school she wanted the car. I told her it was impossible because I had an examination to take. She grabbed a hot pan of stewed tomatoes and threw them at me."

* * *

IN A LETTER dated Oct. 5, 1952, he also made reference to the fact. It read:

"Because of your mad passion I have to avoid discussion, however you are not here to throw something or get a knife at me."

The pastor also testified;

"I told her I saw no need to continue in a situation which might lead to a criminal case."

Mr. Bundy, Mrs. Commodore's attorney moved for a directed verdict mid-way the trial and before she had taken the stand.

The attorney said he felt the Rev. Mr. Commodore had failed to prove separation without cohabitation.

Judge Taylor accepted the motion, but requested it be made in writing.

TAKING THE stand shortly after noon, Mrs. Commodore revealed that the Rev. Mr. Commodore had not enrolled in the Maryland State College for study prior to their June 17, 1944 marriage nor was he in the ministry.

It was further revealed that she paid his bills, purchased tires for his car which she said was "the oldest I ever saw," and worked on various jobs to aid him financially.

She testified: "He came to Ocean City when I was working. There and on weekends I would send him home and tell him to pay the bills due.

"All I made there from July until Labor-Day closing I spent paying bills."

Saying that when the Rev. Mr. Commodore mentioned divorce she was "shocked," Mrs. Commodore testified that she "married him for better or for worse and for whatever came up."

SHE ALSO added "whether he was a little man as he was when I married him, or whether he might get to be a big man."

She further testified that she answered his letters as soon as she received them, which they were separated and if he waited too long to correspond, she would write to him.

However, Mrs. Commodore testified;

"Then came graduation. He did not even send me an invitation.

"After that, he got dead on the line. He avoided every issue I made and it boiled down to what it is now."

* * *

MRS. COMMODORE denied she had any quarrels with members in any of the various churches the minister had pastored during their nine years of marriage.

She also denied that she spoke of the ministry as a "mess" and that she disliked rural living.

It was revealed that during their married life the Commodores lived in small towns and rural locations following his various church appointments.

At one time during Court testimony, the Rev. Mr. Commodore stated in 1954 that he no longer wished to reside in a parsonage nor on any church charge.

Mrs. Commodore quoted him as saying; "I'll teach somewhere."

She testified: "He was on a Circuit and they were not supporting him adequately."

DISPUTING MRS. Commodore's testimony on her attitude toward her husband's career were two witnesses who appeared in the minister's behalf.

The Rev. Levin Henry Purnell, 42, pastor of a Girdletree Methodist Church for 10 years, stated that Mrs. Commodore constantly complained in his presence that she was "sick of it" and that she was "going to get out of it."

John E. Waters of Pocomoke City, RR No. 2, a choir member of the Rev. Commodore's church prior to 1953, also testified.

He recalled instances when Mrs. Commodore was "fussing" during church services.

He also stated that at one time she was very active in her husband's church but later "slacked off."

APPEARING FOR Mrs. Commodore were two witnesses from Baltimore.

Her mother, Mrs. Levinia Cann, 1916 Eiting St., who testified she purchased clothes on her account for the Rev. Mr. Commodore who never paid her.

She also testified: "My daughter lives with me now. She has to live with me because she can't work full-time because of her health.

"He (the Rev. Commodore) had any idea they were separated."

Mrs. Sarah E. Garrett, stated that during the alleged separation period, the couple spent nights with her in her home and she "never said he'd bear the expense which he did not do."

The other witness, a Mrs. Garrett, stated that during the alleged separation period, the couple spent nights with her in her home and she "never had any idea they were separated."
