IN 50 YEARS, the little sycamore tree, which Mrs. Mary Rodgers Carter is holding in front of her 1827 N. Caroline St. home, may reach the approximate one-ton weight and the shade producing proportions of her cottonwood tree which the City Forestry Division mistakenly cut down early this month.

Case of missing cottonwood tree cleared up — tree is replaced

"I came home one evening about two weeks ago and I missed my tree. I was shocked to see it was gone.

"When I got inside the house my mother told me it had been cut down without her consent."

Thus begins the tale of the missing tree as told by its former owner, Mrs. Mary Rodgers Carter, 1827 N. Caroline St.

The erstwhile tree which was over 60 years old and weighed well over one ton, according to foresters' estimates, was of the cottonwood-variety which sheds little wormlike "things" in early spring. It was a silver leaf poplar.

* * *

IT DISAPPEARED early in March as per City Forestry Division orders, along with another one at 1837 N. Caroline St., Mrs. Carter said.

Recently Mrs. Carter's latest City with a 12-foot sycamore.

* * *

NOT ONLY was her cottonwood tree a shady neighborhood haven for hot, tired little kids who gathered in the summer, but, according to Mrs. Carter, it was her very reason for purchasing her home in the first place.

Mrs. Carter, who is a teacher at Elementary School No. 107, is also an author wose short story, "Assault and Battery," appeared in the AFRO three years ago.

"I was born in rural Alabama and I lived in West Virginia, and I am accustomed to plenty of trees," Mrs. Carter stated.

"Upon investigation, we discovered that my tree was mistaken for another one in the same block which was diseased.

"They cut them both down."

MRS. CARTER, who took the leading role in the recent Arena Playhouse production of "Glass Menagerie" continued her story of the tree:

"My mother, Mrs. Willie Nowden, and my son, Ricky, and I live together and we could watch the seasons come and go by our tree.

"Then too, we enjoyed the birds in its branches. You might say that the tree had become part of our lives.

"Somehow, the city makes you feel that the asphalt is closing you in without a tree around," she concluded.

McKeldin says no to mayor race

"I have definitely made no announcement that I will be a candidate for Mayor or any other public office."

That was the comment from the Annapolis office of Gov. Theodore McKeldin Thursday afternoon, when an inquiry was made as to whether he would be a candidate for Mayor of Baltimore in 1959.

"Nothing to it", was the way Albert W. Quinn, assistant to the Governor, put it in denying that the Governor had indicated that he would run for Mayor.

* * *

THE DENIAL came after newspaper accounts said the Governor threw his hat in the ring at a banquet of the Old Town Merchants and Manufacturers Association Wednesday.

He was quoted as saying, "I have only ambitions for the Mayoralty.

"That way I will keep control of the Republican party by holding Baltimore City and one or two counties.

"If I do not run, it would mean losing control of the party and the two Senators would take over."

* * *

IN DENYING the alleged statements Gov. McKeldin declared on Thursday:

"I certainly have not talked about the possibility of Senators Beall and Butler taking control of the Republican party.

"It is not a controlled party.

"When I am ready to run for any office I will announce it publicly," the Governor concluded.

A former Baltimore Mayor, Gov. McKeldin has served as Governor of Maryland for two terms, and under law is not eligible for a third term.

Along with the Rev. Martin Luther King and eight others, he has been selected to receive the annual Russwurm Awards of the National Newspaper Publishers Association.

Governor McKeldin was cited for his appointment of colored persons to important state and municipal boards and offices.

Convict expected to handle own appeal

William H. Jackson, 43, sentenced to three years in the House of Correction last Friday for forgery, is expected to handle his own appeal from the decision.

Indication of this came from Judge Joseph Carter, who imposed the prison term, and his former attorney, William Murphy.

Mr. Jackson was found guilty by a jury on Jan. 7 of cashing a forged $75 check last last year.

* * *

AT THE TRIAL Mr. Jackson argued his own case before the juryof three men and nine women who laler found him guilty.

He also personally cross examined State's witnesses, although represented at the time by Mr. Murphy.

The defendant caused a mild furor when he formally requested the State to provide him free of charge a transcript of the trial proceeding in order to argue a motion for a new trial.

The Supreme Bench in a split decision denied this request.

* * *

AMONG THE grounds listed by Mr. Jackson as errors in his trial were:

(1) A request for a postponement was refused; (2) the State erred in its failure to let Jackson conduct his own defense without counsel, and (3) the State erred in its failure to allow Mr. Murphy to withdraw from the case when the attorney and Jackson could not agree on a defense.

Preston Fairo, assistant State's attorney, said Mr. Jackson has a criminal record dating back to 1929.

An appeal from Judge Carter's sentence would have to be filed with the Maryland Court of Appeals.

Judge berates defendant charged in assault case

"I don't know why a full grown person like you has to fool around with a knife when you're arguing with a woman."

Thus spoke Judge S. Ralph Warnken Wednesday in imposing a three-year prison term on a man convicted of stabbing a former girlfriend.

Joseph P. Young, 45, 1100 block Harlem Ave., was accused of stabbing Miss Ruby Lomax, 720 Newington Av., on Feb. 20.

The defendant contended that Miss Lomax was cut when she stumbled into him while attempting to pour a pot of hot coffee on him.

* * *

THE PROSECUTING witness denied this and told the court that Mr. Young struck her during a dispute and started forward her with a pocket knife.

"What happened when he came after you with this knife?" asked James Murphy, assistant State's attorney.

"Well, I threw up my hands and I got stabbed in my stomach," Miss Lomax said.

She said Mr. Young came to her home and a quarrel ensued "because I didn't meet him the night before."

* * *

SGT. George Wright testified that when Northern District went to Mr. Young's home the suspect tried to escape through a window but fell on a fire escape.

"I told him Ruby was in the hospital," the sergeant said. "And he stated, 'I stabbed her.'"

Mr. Young denied making the statement to the sergeant.

According to Mr. Murphy, the defendant was sentenced to 15 years in 1934 for second-degree murder.

Sybert criticized on state training schools

"Your office has been overruled so often on this question that I think any refusal to concede that the Supreme Court's rulings against segregation statutes covers these cases of reform schools, amounts to an attempt to delay or obstruct the orderly process of the law."

This was the contention made this week by Howard H. Murphy, a member of the board of the State Department of Welfare, in a letter addressed to C. Ferdinand Sybert, Attorney General of Maryland.

Mr. Murphy had reference to a ruling from Mr. Sybert that the state operated training schools for delinquent youths cannot be integrated except through legislative or court action.

* * *

MR. SYBERT expressed this view despite the fact that the Board of Welfare, the agency concerned with the administration of the schools, has voted to desegregate the institutions.

In his letter to the Attorney General, Mr. Murphy called attention to West Virginia where training schools have been desegregated.

Mr. Murphy also inclosed a copy of a letter from the West Virginia Board of Control which said in part:

"Prior to the United State Supreme Court decision, we had separate institutions for white and colored in all of our departments except the penitentiary.

"Since this decision, we have integrated all institutions. This move is really contrary to our state law but the administration has felt that the Supreme Court decision is paramount.

"Integration is not causing any trouble in this state, in fact, it is no longer considered a problem," the letter concluded.

* * *

IN HIS own letter to the Attorney General, Mr. Murphy after citing the West Virginia example and calling attention to the desire of the Maryland board to integrate its training schools, said:

"I regret that your (Mr. Sybert's) opinions in matters as important as this do not coincide with those of the State Board of Public Welfare."

Mr. Murphy also said:

"Where it has been found possible to test your opinions, the high courts have agreed with the litigants rather then with the Attorney General's office."

Mr. Murphy has been one of the leaders in the campaign to have the schools integrated.

At present the state operates Boys Village and the Barrel Training School for Girls for colored juveniles, and the Maryland Training School for Boys and Montrose for white children.

Postal Alliance cabaret dance

Misses Bernice Kelly, Frances Williams, Elaine Gray, Gloria Wainright and Helena Hodge (left to right) were among the lovelies who enhanced the annual dance given by the Baltimore chapter of the National Alliance of Postal Employees, Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Thomas attended the affair, which is a benefit to collect funds for the Alliance's welfare program.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Wilkes were among the hundreds of guests who danced, enjoyed a floor show.

William A. Jones, a retired postal clerk, is still active in the organization, as is Mrs. Jones, who is vice-president of the auxiliary.

William J. Nash, committeeman of the dance, chats with Princess LaFaithea, demurely gowned here, but whose strip tease act was a program sensation.
