Gadabouting in Baltimore

Oil your skates, Girls, the weekend is a racer

with Lula Jones Garrett

Juice up the buggy. Get out the vitamin pills. Line up the wardrobe and get set, Gals.

This weekend is going to be a dilly!

Beginning with tonight (Friday) when the Gayettes line up the Sym's gayest music set for the "Gone Broke" supper dance, until you lay your weary head on a pillow to recuperate from the Savant's fling (a formal dance) on Sunday, mind. There's scarcely a breathing spell . . .

A Far, sandwiched between is a triple decker by Hampton Pals, where this town's graduates of the Virginia College have scheduled a luncheon, a closed "chatter party" and an evening affair for out-of-town former college mates.

On Saturday afternoon, there is that diplomatic "Coffee Hour" for the Ambassador from Liberia, His Excellency, George W. Padmore, at which the town's top-drawer matrons will be hostesses (and you have practically the whole she-bang, with the Morgan College Faculty and Trustee Wives and the Maryland League of Women's Clubs in cahoots on the proposition).

An on that night, the national guard officers' will hold their annual ball. . .

At four on Sunday, the "Y-Wives" Ed-Tc and fashion show will provide a relaxing hour, where you can sit at pretty tables, enjoy refreshments and a review of fashions by Pauline Brooks, at the Madison Avenue branch.

Hampton Pals' guests will be arriving on Friday night, and the first party for them will be the closed affair in Inez Kent's Edgewood Road home.

The formal luncheon, at which they will meet a number of Baltimoreans, will be on Saturday afternoon at the YWCA. And that evening, a larger number of guests have been invited to an informal Coffee Hour in the home of Bernice Wynn.

Gwendolyn Lewis and Catherine Adams are chairmen of the activities, and Doris Hamilton Pals include Vernice Wynn, Melissa Perdue, Patricia Page, Lois Carter, Isabelle Brazton, Phyllis Tilley, Mae Parrot, Ivonne King, Inez Kent, Estelle Thomas, Charlotte Matthews, Thelma Rice and Catherine Royster. . .

THE CHI DELTA MU Wives are the brave ones.

Fog, snow, sleet and zero weather have not caused a postponement of their meeting.

At the January meeting, the hostesses Mesdames Thelma Bando, Clodine Adams and Eugenia Anderson were skeptical but one by one the ladies were on the scene. They knew there was work to be done for the commu conclave in April and it couldn't be done by staying home.

February meeting, again a good night to stay at home but no such thing for the Chi Wives. Hostesses for this meeting were Mesdames Maude Lee Doris Reynolds and Eloise Brown. The members voted to be-come a member of the NAACP and to participate financially in their program.

Members present:

Clodine Adams, Jeannette Christmas, Dottie Hughes, Dorothy Hawkins, Mamie Williams, Thelma Bando, Vivian Alleyne, Elsie Harris, Mabel Byrd, Eugenia Anderson, Delores Hunt, Doris Reynolds, Maude Lee Eloise Brown, Bernice McDaniels and Charlotte Shervington.

RAIN HARDLY dampened the spirits of the "big-tall" set who helped Marsha Williams celebrate her 6th birthday on Saturday.

AND ADD TO lovely Valentine parties that on Saturday night when Mrs. Mattie West opened the doors of her beautiful Rosedale Street home, in honor of her daughter, Margaret West.

The repast was out of this world . . . the drinks endless.

And you should have seen the frocks . . . including one worn by the hostess' other daughter, Connie. 'Twas a Nile green taffeta; snug in the waist, with wide skirt and a bow extending from the back at the neck the entire length of the dress.

The party had a cute twist, too, what with the ladies being allowed to ask the gentlemen to dance. And did the guys love that!

Eggs bargain on week's list

Eggs are a bargain on this week's food list.

This is the season when supplies of Grade A eggs are plentiful and prices are five to ten cents a dozen less than last year at this time.

Large size eggs are a fine budget stretcher. Buy eggs from refrigerated displays in grade and size. The color of the egg shell, white, cream or brown, does not affect the flavor, food value, or cooking quality.

MEALS PLANNED for February will get an extra lift when shoppers include the abundant foods on their market lists says Virginia McLaclie, Food Economist, Baltimore Office, Department of Markets, University of Maryland.

Bargains can be found at the vegetable counter in tomatoes, onions, cabbage, and potatoes. There are large volumes of both old and new cabbage available. Raw cabbage is a good source of Vitamin C. The many tasty ways to prepare cabbage should be an inducement for purchasing as much as the low price tag will allow.

Yellow onions of good quality are a good buy. Potato supplies are large with low prices. For maximum nutritional value, cook potatoes in their jackets. Other vegetables with higher price tags that will also add zest to meals are brussel sprouts, broccoli, cauliflower, carrots, and salad greens.

CANNED CORN supplies continue to be plentiful. This is a shelf item that can be purchased in quantity while prices are low.

The mid-season peak in citrus has just passed. Grapefruit and Valencia oranges are good values. There are good buys in small sized grapefruit. Size is no indication of quality. Choose fruit that is heavy for its size and for maximum juice. Frozen orange juice is low in cost.

The meat and fish counters have bargains. Turkey used to be a holiday treat, but is now a year round meat. Turkey is very reasonably priced. It is a good buy when you are feeding a crowd or large family or when storage space is available or planned-over meal. Fryers still continue to be good buys.

IF YOU LOOK for a pork shoulder to roast, you will please the palate and the purse. Remember to cook pork products well done before serving. Retail prices of many best cuts remain low.

Bargains in fish are to be found in frozen fillets. Holdings of frozen haddock and perch are plentiful. Supplies of frozen fish sticks are large. These are one of the convenience foods. Sea bass is the recommended fresh fish this week.

Special desserts using cherries are in order this week. Cherry pies, tarts, upside down cake, and puddings are suggested. In buying canned cherries, you have many choices as to color, variety, style, and grade and amounts to buy. Read the label and choose that which suits the dish you plan to prepare.

A few drops of almond extract will give an improved flavor to cherry pie filling. Investigate the possibility of using the frozen cherry pies that come in sizes to serve two to six persons.
