Trucker Faces Death Penalty For Attack On Girl, 8

Mrs. Irma Gilmore, city teacher, buried

"She gave me clothes to wear to school when I didn't have any," said a small third grader.

"Irma was a wonderful person," said a friend, Mrs. James S. Jones.

"The saintly Mrs. Gilmore was more than a member; she was a close friend of all who knew her," said the Rev. Robert T. Newbold.

Those were some of the statements made by some of the more than 100 persons from all walks of life who braved chilling rain to attend funeral services Tuesday afternoon for Mrs. Irma S. Gilmore, 54, 1804 Ruxton Ave.

The Rev. Mr. Newbold, her pastor at Grace Presbyterian Church where she had been a member for over 30 years, told of Mrs. Gilmore's life as an exceptional teacher, a faithful church worker, and a friend who was an example for the community and he said:

Associates cried openly as he recalled the career of the veteran teacher at Alexander School No. 103.

"Her heart and her home were always open to the unfortunate and those in need," he said.

The Rev. Edgar A. Ward, pastor, Cherry Hill Community Church, the Rev. Carroll King, pastor of the Lutheran Church for the Reform, assisted at the services.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Gilmore is survived by her mother, Mrs. Ada Stokes; a brother, William; and a sister, Miss Esther Stokes of Los Angeles.

MORE THAN 20 cars formed the funeral procession to Arbutus Memorial Park for burial.

Honorary pallbearers were Elliott, William, Marian, Clarence and Curtis Gilmore, brother of Mr. Gilmore, and George Mathis.

Among out-of-towners here for the funeral were: — Mrs. Ruth Hines, and Mrs. Mildred Worthy, of Rye, N.Y.; Mrs. Lois Matthis, Washington; Mrs. Leona Wiley, Boston; and Mrs. Fanny Norris, Orangeburg, S.C.

Gets 4 years for losing Yule fund savings on horses, etc.

"What did you do with the money?"

"It was lost on the horses and betting on fights and baseball games."

This damaging evidence contained in a statement to police led to the conviction Wednesday of Johnny D. Goodwin, 38, 1600 block Chesapeake Ave., accused of absconding with $6,084 in Christmas saving funds entrusted to him by workers at a Fairfield plant.

Judge John Tucker sentenced Mr. Goodwin to four years in the Penitentiary after he pleaded guilty to larceny after trust.

MR. GOODWIN was apprehended in Niagara Falls, N.Y., and returned to Baltimore on Jan. 11 as a result of a warrant sworn out against him in December by disgruntled fellow-employees.

The defendant, a longtime employee of the General Refacteries Corp., 700 block Chesapeake, was treasurer of the General Savings Fund in which between 65 and 70 other workers were members, according to Julius Romano, assistant State's attorney.

As treasurer, the prosecutor said, Mr. Goodwin was entrusted with funds collected by a three-man committee to be deposited in the Equitable Trust Company of Brooklyn.

THE DEFENDANT held the same position for a number of years and in the past the workers received their money on time, the court was told.

However, William Colston, 1657 Thomas St., said when he missed Mr. Goodwin from the job in early December he went to his home to remind him that the employees expected their money on Dec. 15.

Mr. Colston, the secretary, said he was informed by the defendant's wife, Mrs. Catherine Goodwin, that her husband was out of town.

A warrant was taken out and police learned that Mr. Goodwin was in New York State, Mr. Romano said.

"I'M NOT going to give you credit for the time you spent in Niagara Falls," quipped Judge Tucker in imposing sentence.

In a number of cases judges give defendant's credit for time spent in custody before they are brought to trial.

In his statement taken by Sgt. Albert Buettner in Niagara Falls, Mr. Goodwin said he left Baltimore on Dec. 7, a week before the funds were to be issued to his fellow-workers.

"No," replied Mr. Goodwin, "I spent it all."

Wills his $4,000 to kind lady

A kindly housewife who befriended him during an illness will receive the $4000 estate of James Polk Sparrows Point worker, who died on May 22, 1956 at the age of 55.

PLENTY OF SMOKE—This fire late Monday at 615-617 N. Paca St. caused considerable damage and tied up downtown traffic a half hour. Cause of the fire is unknown. The two and three-story brick rooming houses are owned by Roger Barry.

'That's him right there,' child says

An 8-year-old girl in Criminal Court Thursday afternoon made this statement as she stood and dramatically pointed to a man later found guilty of raping her on Nov. 25.

The defendant, James H. Craig, 28, 100 block N. Schroeder St., was also found guilty of attempting to rape a 14-year-old girl shortly before accosting the child, and assaulting another 14-year-old girl last June 13.

Judge S. Ralph Warnken withheld sentencing Mr. Craig when Milton Allen, court-appointed counsel, requested a psychiatric examination. The maximum penalty for rape is death.

JOSEPH KOUTZ and John O'Connor, prosecutors, told the court that Mr. Craig was convicted of his first sex offense when he was 13 years old. At that time — May 10, 1943 — he was sentenced to five years for assault to rape.

The 8-year-old child said Mr. Craig grabbed her in the 400 block Ann St. while she was en route to the library to return a book.

She said he held her mouth and pointed a knife at her back as he forced her to a second-floor bedroom, where the attack took place.

When Mr. Koutz first asked the child whether she saw her assailant in the courtroom, she stood and looked around, announcing, "I don't see him."

SHE LATER made a positive identification of the man whose picture she picked out of a group given her by police on the day of the attack.

Det. Sgt. Fred A. Zeithen, who conducted a lineup at Central District on Dec. 14, said the child picked Craig out of a group of six men.

"As soon as the man came in she pointed out and said, 'That's him, No. 3'," the sergeant said. "Then she ran an hid behind her mother's skirt."

Mr. Craig, a trucker, denied attacking the girl, but in a statement to police he confessed to "messing around" with the child.

Plan fund campaign for Carl's bill, needy aid

Two Baltimore women came forth this week with plans which may work to build a fund upon which needy people may draw in times of emergency distress and such anxiety in which little Carl Smith's parents now find themselves.

"I WILL get my old youth club organization of more than 100 members and which was founded in 1944, to begin the campaign, said one.

"Many of them are teachers and nurses and professional people now.

"They received awards during the war for helping in every cause and I know they will help solicit regular contributions."

"People are hard givers," although they mean well, and you have to get out and remind them," she said.

Mrs. Coleman has volunteered to begin immediately "go from door to door" to help Carl's parents and others who may need to sound a call for help.

ACCORDING TO Carl's mother, Mrs. Louise Smith, 2106 Greenmount Ave., she has received the following cash donations:

Mrs. Fanny Newton, 2431 Walbrook Ave., $11, from the Just Old Friends Club.

Mrs. Pearl McIntyre, 540 E. 22nd St., $5.

Mrs. Frances Stokes, 106 Oak St.

(Mrs. Stokes, anAFRO lucky picture winner contributed her prize.)

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Davis, 2020 Bryant Ave., $5.

"I appreciate it so very much," Mrs. Smith says.

"We have agreed to pay the hospital $5 a week but the bill is over $2,000, and that will take a long time. My husband doesn't make much," she explained.

Expressing her appreciation of the kindness and untiring effort of Hopkins physicians and nurses who attended Carl, Mrs. Smith said that she and her husband are making every sacrifice to see that the bill is paid.

IT IS estimated that at $5 per week for 52 weeks a year, it will take more than seven years for Carl's family to cancel the bill.

Carl, who bravely fought for over a year to win the battle against cancer of the stomach died Jan. 13 after a Christmas Eve set-back which marked the beginning of a rapid decline.

In response to his call for Christmas greetings, he received over 1,000 cards from AFRO readers in addition to toys and gifts for his family.

JUST A MEMORY—Once there were houses in this, the 300 block W. Preston St., but now they are just a memory. They have been torn down to make room for the State Office Building Project, which will spread over some 72 acres near the Fifth Regiment Armory. Included in the new development will be not only office buildings for the state but some residential and commercial buildings. Demolition work is almost finished but no date has been set for the completion of the project. The area is bounded roughly by McCulloh St., with the exception of the McCulloh Homes; Biddle St., Dolphin St., John St. and Cathedral St.

Assembly has the right, says Cole on police bill

ANNAPOLIS — "The General Assembly has jurisdiction over the police and can legislate on it. The city has not seen fit to do so. The police salaries should come before done and the Assembly has the right to act."

Commenting on his proposal to abolish and raise the salaries of Baltimore City policemen, State Sen. Hazzy A. Cole (Rep. 4th Dist.) made this statement this week as he clarified his position on the measure.

There had been a belief expressed in some quarters that the State Assembly does not possess the power to legislate matters involving the Baltimore police force.

IN DISCOUNTING this view Senator Cole said:

"The laws of Maryland give the (city) Board of Estimates the right to adjust police salaries but the General Assembly has the right to enact laws to accomplish the same goal if the city does not act."

The senator explained that his purpose in introducing the bill was to "focus attention on the inadequate pay scale for policemen."

He also noted:

"If the city wants good officers it will have to make the jobs attractive."

THE COLE bill would raise the pay of rookie policemen from $4,000 to $4,500 a year. It would also boost sergeants from $5,000 to $5,500; lieutenants from $5,400 to $6,000, and captains from 6,450 to $7,000.

The measure does not specify where the additional money is to come from and according to Senator Cole that question will have to be decided by the city.

The bill has already been submitted but no action has been taken as yet.

Thieves fail to take $1,500 cash

"We have taken precautionary steps to see that it doesn't happen again."

Preston Payne, assistant manager of the Sollers-Home Products Co., said that Monday he made this statement on Thursday as he spoke of an unsuccessful attempt to enter their project office during the weekend.

The goal of the still unidentified intruders was the office safe which contained some $1,500 in rent receipts.

Three doors leading to the office were smashed but the thieves were unable to force the last door which led to the safe.

This door is secured by three locks, Mr. Payne said. He also said that this was the first time to his knowledge that such an attempt had been made at the office and steps were being taken to insure that it would not happen again.

Must pass city hotel bill-Cole

ANNAPOLIS — "If there is anything I can do to help obtain passage of the ordinance I will do it.

"I am publicly asking all those groups who have supported the bill in the General Assembly to now put their support behind the bill in the City Council."

On the heels of an opinion from the office of the State Attorney General that his hotel bill is unconstitutional, State Sen. Harry A. Cole (Rep. 4th

Dist.) made this statement late Thursday afternoon as he promised to continue his fight against segregated hotel facilities in Baltimore City.

THE OPINION from Attorney General C. Ferdinand Sybert spelled the death of Senator Cole's bill that would have prohibited discrimination in Baltimore City hotels and would have backed up this prohibition with court penalities.

In holding that the bill is unconstitutional, the Attorney General called attention to the charter under which Baltimore City operates and which grants all police powers to the city.

Since the hotel bill would have been classified under the heading of a police power the Attorney General contended that the State Assembly lacked authority to pass such a bill.

DESPITE THE SETBACK, however, Senator Cole still maintained a hopeful attitude as he told an AFRO reporter.

"I've done all that I can do in the General Assembly. It is now up to the City Council and I sincerely hope that they will act promptly and favorably on this issue."

News of the Attorney General's decision reached Senator Cole on Thursday and immediately after the daily session of the Senate he called the city senators into a brief conference in which he told them of the

MRS. ELIZABETH BURTON

'Going to be alright,' says 'Frozen Lady'

What is it like to become frozen? How does it feel when you are in danger of losing your feet and legs by amputation?

During the mid-January below-freezing weather, she suffered severe frostbite which doctors fear may cause her to lose her limbs.

At Johns Hopkins Hospital this week, Mrs. Burton said courageously:

"I feel fine now, and I'm going to be all right. God can take care of my feet."

MRS. BURTON sat primly upright in bed as she recalled the dark, cold January evening when she returned from work too tired and chilled to pay much attention to the temperature.

"I do day's work," she said, "and I got a ride home from my job, but even then I was very cold.

"I don't remember how long it was before I went next door," she said, "but my neighbors took good care of me."

Described by neighbors as a busy cheerful lady always on the go," she spoke rapidly, and omitted many of the details.

LAST WEEK, however, her next door neighbor, Vernon Brown, in telling how she came to his door asking for medicine for her feet, said:—

"I have been in the Army and have had experience with frostbite, but I have never seen anything like it before. Mrs. Burton's feet were swollen and black and her toes were about to come off."

Dr. C. F. Maloney, Catonsville physician, who attended Mrs. Burton at the request of Health Center nurses, Mrs. Jeanner Hoover and Miss Lillian Hess, told the AFRO that Mrs. Burton was suffering gangrene infection as the result of extreme frost bite when she came to his attention.

It was 18 above that day, he

Find infants with skulls fractured

"One of them probably died as the result of a "criminal abortion" and the other was "apparently murdered." She had been choked.

"Both of their skulls had been fractured."

Dr. Louis S. Welty, Talbot County Medical Examiner, was telling the AFRO Thursday about the twin girl babies who were found dead on the Easton, Md., town dump early Tuesday morning.

They were 7-month babies, he said.

Police are working around the clock with a 12-man crew, on two shifts, making a house-to-house canvass and investigating all hospitals, Dr. Welty said.

ACCORDING TO States attorney Henry P. Turner of Easton, a triple-head, county-wide investigation began immediately in effort to discover the mother, who, he said, "may be any woman within a 50-mile radius."

He also added that the infant girls had been dead but 24 hours when found.

The mangled bodies were discovered Tuesday morning by Malcomb Winston, a man who devotes his time to combing the Easton town dump for salvage material.

IT WAS believed that the bodies came in to the dump on one of two loads of trash delivered there by town garbage trucks.

Dr. Welty, who has been the Talbot County Medical Examiner for 18 years, stated that the baby girls were born in the dump.

According to Mr. Turner, garments of "some sort," which offered some clues to the mother, were found near the dead infants.

The clothes were placed

Bandits in 320 years

TO PROTECT PEOPLE

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

Mrs. Eleanor Parker, 652 W. Franklin St., is the bride-to-be; Queenie is the faithful dog; and John Henry Palmer, 1068 Shellbank Road, Cherry Hill, is the fortunate blind man.

They are principals in a heartwarming Valentine Day story designed to capture the hearts of all who read it.

This reporter met Mr. Palmer, who is 59, and his German shepherd, Queenie, who is 5, at the University Hospital on Tuesday.

Mr. Parker was recuperating from an operation, Queenie, his devoted Seeing-Eye dog, had come to visit him.

RELATIVES HAD special permission from the hospital for the visit because Queenie had refused to eat during his week-long stay in the hospital.

"Do you suppose Queenie knows you and Mrs. Parker are to be married?" Mr. Parker was asked.

"As smart as she is, perhaps she does know. But if she knows it I could tell her, because we're going to be real happy," he replied.

"We'll be glad, most of all, because we lately lived alone, and a dog need someone to love," he added.

RECALLING his wife, Marie, who died in September, leaving their two daughters, Mrs. Vessie Johnson and Mrs. Lillian Wilson, himself and Queenie, by themselves, Mr. Palmer said:

"We miss Marie so much, but then along came Mrs. Parker. She offered to keep house for me and Queenie, and we liked her from the start.

"She was so good to us.

"And now we are going to be married on my birthday, Feb. 28," he said.

"It won't be much of a wedding, because I am poor, but I think we will manage," he added.

The hospital sign said "no children allowed on any floor"; but Queenie, very much a dog, was permitted to go straight up to the 4th floor ward.

The bright-eyed guest walked down the corridor amid the dazzle of flash bulbs and the whirr of movie cameras. She was led by Mrs. Parker's 16-year-old son, James.

Queenie strained at her leash and hurried to greet Mr. Palmer who was lying for well

Worthy in Hungary

Special AFRO Correspondent

MOSCOW (By Cable) — In the State Department attempting to climb down from its embarrassing limb?

That was the impression I received here Sunday upon arrival from Peiping after a month's stay in Red China.

Complying with an official request, my first act was to call on U.S. Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen, who treated me very cordially during our half hour talk.

Mr. Bohlen examined my passport, then handed it back to me. He informed me that orders had come from Washington that it was illegal to be seized or invalidated.

THIS REPRESENTED a quick change of policy in view of a State Department announcement four days after I entered China that my passport to be stamped "good only for return to the United States", and that it was to be revoked when I reached home.

No official explanation was given for the change, but American correspondents here express the opinion that strong press opposition caught the State Department by surprise.

They also say that it is fairly clear now that there was no basis for the passport revocations under the law, departmental regulations or executive order.

Happy Valentine for blind man

By JAMES D. WILLIAMS

"I know now that she was so right."

A mother sat in her apartment on Saturday night holding a box filled with bits of paper and photographs that told the story of her daughter who has freely given the rest of her life to her God and her church and her fellowman.

As Mrs. Dorothy C. Snead, 1411 Division St., spoke there was neither sadness in her voice nor on her face but instead she seemed to be surrounded by a glow that came from that very special inner pride that is the exclusive property of parents and is reserved only for their children.

Mrs. Snead knows that never again will these walls know the sounds of her only daughter's laughter or her footsteps or feel the warmth of her smile.

For Shirley Evelyn Snead has taken the veil of a Carmelite nun and for the rest of her life she will be known as Sister Josepha as she lives in seclusion with her face hidden from the world.

SISTER JOSEPHA is the first of her race to become a Carmelite nun in Concord, New Hampshire, and the importance of this honor is not wasted on her mother who now can say in all sincerity and with conviction:

"I know now that she was so right."

To understand what Sister Josepha has done, it is necessary to go back to the time when she was Shirley Evelyn Snead, the only daughter of Mrs.

Residents ask Liquor Board okey for new 1017 license

Representatives of a neighborhood improvement association, the NAACP and local businessmen appeared before the Liquor Board on Thursday afternoon.

They were there to ask approval of a Class D, beer, wine and liquor license for a proposed $92,000 restaurant and bar at 1424-26 Pennsylvania Ave.

The applicant is Mrs. Myrtle C. Burns, proprietor of the Club 1017, formerly located at 1017 Madison Ave., now razed to make room for the State Office Building in Redevelopment Area 12.

The 1424-26 location, now vacant, was once occupied by the Biddison Novelty Co. The buildings are owned by Chandler V. Wynn et al, and assessed at $26,600.
