City's first 1957 baby missed AFRO's $100 prize

Editor's note: According to the AFRO's front page announcement, Tuesday, January 1, news of the first baby to arrive in 1957 had to be called in to the City Desk for the baby to win the $100 cash prize. The AFRO regrets no one called about the Poole baby's arrival until late in the afternoon of Jan. 1. News of the prize winner came in at 12:20 a.m., three minutes after the Ray baby's arrival.

"I just lost my appetite," Mrs. Thelma Poole stated Wednesday.

She and her husband, Herbert Poole, 2529 East Biddle St., parents of the city's first New Year's baby born 12:04 AM., Jan. 1, were telling the AFRO Wednesday why they had failed to call in the news of the birth of the baby.

Their son, Herbert Jr., the only baby in the city born within five minutes of the New Year, weighed 6 pounds, 13½ ounces, and arrived eleven minutes before the AFRO $100 prize winner, Selwyn Ivan Ray, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ulman Ray, 1224 McCulloh St.

"We thought someone had called the AFRO. Everybody else seemed to know our baby was first," Mr. Poole said.

PRESENT AT the hospital Wednesday afternoon since 3 pm the father smoked a cigar nervously, seemed somewhat downcast about their missing the $100 prize.

"Our baby was the first one born in the city," he said, "and we could sure use that money."

Mr. Poole, 25, is a truck driver and the father of two little girls, Elveta, 2½, and Angellita, 14 months. Obviously very fond of his family, Mr. Poole said:

"I saw her and the baby on TV last night, but I'm sorry we missed that prize."

"He has been sick and we are back on our bills," the young mothr stated. "If I had just won that money we could catch up on our bills and get some things for the children."

THE POOLES who were married May 25, 1954, live in a three-room apartment, which, according to the father is crowded but all he can afford on his modest salary.

"Things are just so high, it takes all I make to keep things going.

"And we did not expect the baby until March," he added somewhat gemlyy.

"Here's our man of the year," a nurse said, bringing in the celebrated Baltimore baby" and we hope he'll make the AFRO front page!"

"Yes, I hope something will happen," the handsome, youthful father replied.

THE INFANT Poole is unusually alert, wide awake and active. He seemed to watch the camera and blinked quickly as the flash bulb went off.

"He's a smart kid," a nurse said.

"He sure is," the father added," but I wish he had won the AFRO prize!"

HODGE PODGE-hedup

You never really know just how closely-knit a family is until it's put to the test.

The way those kids of mine jump and scream at each other around Madhouse Menagerie, would think they spend every waking moment plotting revenge on each other.

"Tain't so, I found out the other day.

Seems that Number Two Son, now almost four, was invited to a birthday party. Oh, he was excited. Took his nap without too much fuss, polished down his dinner in record time, and even picked out the clothes he wanted to wear!

Strapped his gun and holster around his waist (says he feels undressed without it) and announced he was ready to go.

SINCE WE didn't have a baby sitter to ride herd on the rest of the Menagerie, off Hodge had to beat it back to the salt mines to polish off some extra work. Wife decided to send Number One Son, age 10, along to chaperone.

Went to pick them up an hour later, and discovered that Number One Son had fulfilled his chaperone's role admirably.

Took them home, whereupon they immediately divested themselves of their overcoats and hats, then made a beeline for the basement.

Naturally, as soon as they had walked in the door, Number one and Two daughters collared them. They whispered together for a moment, then they too disappeared into the cellar.

NOW THERE'S nothing too unusual about this except that they were extremely quiet down there.

Thought I'd sneak a peek to see what had them so occupied. Did so.

Spied the three oldest kids calmly seated on the floor, while Number Two Son doled out candy, cake, and balloons he had stashed away in his pockets at the party to bring home for them.

Fifteen minutes later, they were yapping and screaming at each other.

What's the best way to remove chocolate icing from a child's clothes

"LET'S GET THIS show on the road," five-day-old Herbert Poole Jr., seems to be saying. Born at 12:04 a.m., Jan. 1, Master Poole at once became "Man of the Year" both at home and in the city for he was the very first baby to arrive in 1957. Exceptionally developed mentally and physically, Herbert Jr., is expected to do great things one day according to his proud mother, Mrs. Darlene Poole, and father, Herbert Poole Sr. The young couple has two older children, Elveta, 2½ and Angellita, 14 months.

3-pound New Year's baby doing fine at Provident

"We haven't named her yet. She wasn't born until Monday and if she pulls through, it will be fine."

Mrs. Dorothy Strong, 325 W. 28th St., was telling the AFRO Wednesday about her 3-pound baby girl born January 1 at 12:30 p.m., at Provident Hospital.

"I haven't seen her yet," she said, explaining that the little girl was in an incubator.

"I arrived at the hospital in an ambulance because I had become very sick at home. They rushed me here and I was pretty sick up until today," she said.

SAMUEL STRONG, a cement mixer, formerly of Pittsburgh, is the father. They are parents of another girl, Jeanette Veldmal Strong, 3 years old.

The family had just returned to Baltimore about two months ago from Pittsburgh where Mr. Strong was employed, Mrs. Strong said.

Hospital reports indicate the infant is "doing nicely."

—'Tall man'

It was later learned that he has filed a complaint with his union representative explaining that the action was particularly embarrassing to him since he has been a law-abiding citizen and has no prior police record.

MR. WARD was taken into custody during the early morning hours of Dec. 6, some seven days after the theft of a ton of underground cables worth $80, had been reported at the company warehouse, 2001 Elgin Ave., where Mr. Ward is employed.

A man who was linked to the theft reportedly told police that his inside contact was a "tall man" and subsequently Mr. Ward, who stands six feet, four inches tall, was taken into custody.

"I was very embarrassed when the neighbors looked out and saw me with my hands over my head, but I knew I hadn't done anything so I went along with them—even though they told me they did not have a warrant," is the way that Mr. Ward remembers the incident.

"Of course they said I wasn't arrested but I was forced to leave my bed and dress around 3 in the morning and I don't think that was right."

Mr. Ward explained that he has been working for the company a total of 12 years and had advanced in salary from $39 a week to $95.

"The officers told me to go on home and forget the whole thing (at 6 p.m. on Dec. 6) but I think the company owes me for the time I had to spend at the station house and I think the company owes me an apology too."

MR. WARD said the matter has been taken up with company and his union and has now reached the third stage of negotiation.

Referring again to his contact with the police, Mr. Ward said that they searched him for weapons before placing him in a patrol car, but they did not fingerprint him or photograph him.

A veteran of overseas service in World War II, Mr. Ward is a member of Ebenezer Baptist Church.

• Police investigators that Sgt. Dillard had been seen spending large sums of money.

Following his arrest, the soldier was placed in a lineup with other Ft. Meade soldiers and the Western Union clerk on duty at the time of the robbery, Mrs. Carol Morton, 100 block W Monument St., identified Dillard as the robber.

CRIMINAL Investigation Division agents searched Sgt. Dillard's quarters where, they said, they found a .45 caliber automatic and a large sum of money. They said that the soldier had purchased his bride's wedding ring and new clothes.

On Sunday morning, a guard escorted Sgt. Dillard to a telephone where he unsuccessfully attempted to call his mother, Mrs. Mattie Dillard, in Pittsburgh.

As Dillard was being returned to the stockade, he suddenly wheeled and grabbed the guard's carbine, investigators said. During the scuffle, the guard retrieved the .30 caliber weapon.

THE GUARD told investigators that Sgt. Dillard then dashed through the door. From his position, flat on his back on the floor, the guard fired one shot.

The slug tore through the glass upper panel of the door and the sergeant fell. He was pronounced dead shortly afterward at the Ft. Meade Army Hospital.

Death was caused by a .30 caliber bullet which entered his back and went through his heart, Army officials would not identify the guard who fired the fatal shot.

Mrs. Mattie Dillard, the soldier's mother, came from Pittsburgh Tuesday to claim the body of her son from the Arlington S. Phillips Funeral Home where it was sent by the Army.

The soldier will be buried in his uniform. The funeral will be at 2 p.m. in the West Funeral Home chapel.

CALLS TO the telephone listed in the name of the Lynch Wen, 308 Berlin Ave., for either Miss Viola Wen or Mrs. Viola Dillard netted the information that she was cancer victim.

She declined to say whether she would attend the funeral of the man identified as her husband.

He was stricken with cancer of the stomach late last year and doctors said then he would not live to the end of the year.

"He is taking only liquids, is a bit fussy. He calls for his mother and father and when they come he dozes off," Mr. Thompson said.

"HE USED to like to spend time in the little rocking chair we have, but now when he is placed in it, he does not rock, he drooses off.

"His condition has worsened gradually, a little percentage each day," Mr. Thompson said.

"We have no predictions and his doctors refuse to say what the future will be," Mr. Thompson said.

ON SATURDAY before Christmas Carl was permitted to go home and hospital authorities did not at that time anticipate the set-back the small child experienced Christmas Eve.

As Carl was being returned Dec. 24 for routine check up at the hospital by his mother, Mrs. Louise Smith, 2106 Greenmount Ave., he was taken with convulsions while in the taxicab.

Following the attack, Carl was returned to his Harriet Lane Children's division ward and was not allowed to spend Christmas at home.

Since the period of convulsions, Carl has shown little improvement and although he remains conscious, he is considerably weaker.

AS EARLY as two weeks before Christmas, AFRO readers gifted Carl with over 800 holiday greetings, toys and presents, for him and his family.

Hospital authorities at that time had said Carl may not live until Christmas.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Smith, who have six other children, continue to have faith that Carl will pull through.

The couple has been encouraged by the case of Susan King, who three years ago was not expected to live—because of brain cancer.

Susan has completely recovered and is now attending school. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William King, 2317 Poplar Grove St.

"I AM A Korean veteran, married and have two children. I lost my job with the Housing Authority on the 28th of October. I was left physically handicapped from injuries in the Korean Conflict.

"I do not receive disability compensation because it does not show up on my service medical record. I am writing with hopes that your readers or staff will help me.

"I am not begging for food or clothes, even though we could use them, but I am begging for a job, so that I can help myself first, and ask for charity last."

Mr. Haines' two children are two boys three months and 14 months of age. He had told the AFRO: "My wife and I can go it, but the kids . . . you can't cut them short."

HIS HAIR neatly combed, a fresh crease in his tan trousers and wearing a brown sport jacket and a bow-tie, Mr. Haines courteously explained that he always tries to look his best when meeting people.

Recalling his long search for a job, he said: "I have walked until my legs ached looking for a job . . . I never gave up faith."

The young veteran said of his new stock-clerk job: "The manager told me I can go as far as I let my self advance. I'm awful happy and my wife is happy."

More happiness was expressed this week by Mrs. Novella G. Townsend, 1800 Madison Ave., the blind masseuse previously told the AFRO: "This Christmas I would like a good job."

Words to Live by

By REV. ROBERT NEWBOLD

Have you made your New Year's resolutions?

Those who have not will find the following worthy of consideration.

Even those who have, but have failed to include the ones suggested here, would do well to give them serious thought.

(1) RESOLVE TO hate no one. People will disappoint and discourage you. They will irritate and perhaps even insult you. But, don't let them! To hate is a damaging disease.

It will rob you of compassion, distort your perspective, and retard your ability to accept others. Such a state is not spiritually and psychologically healthy.

Therefore, for the sake of your spiritual and mental health let no one cause you to hate him during the New Year.

(2) RESOLVE TO criticize our leaders less and cooperate with them more. The "handkerchief-heads" and "uncle Toms" need to be repudiated.

Those who sell the rights of their fellowmen for a mess of personal pottage deserve to be exposed and expelled from their position of leadership.

Those who are not qualified by training and temperament to lead should be taught to "truthfully appraised of this fact.

However, those who unselfishly and sacrificially give of their time and energy in the service of others deserve our courageous and cooperation of those whom they serve.

This is not to suggest that constructive criticism is not in order. It always is. Those who are in a position to criticize should resolve that their criticism be helpful and not harmful.

(3) RESOLVE to apply the teachings of Jesus seven days a week instead of one.

Too much of our Christianity is Sunday type. Many people are religious on Sunday, but ruthless on Monday. They worship God one day and mammon six.

Such individuals have, in the words of Harry Emerson Fosdick, reduced religion from a force to a form.

Religion as a mere form cannot make you or your community safe. Religion as a force can.

Resolve, then, to apply the force of religion to every area of your life.

If you adopt these three resolutions and constantly try to live up to them you will then discover how they contribute toward helping make this a happy New Year for you.
