Test vote due

ceed with the adoption of rules.

Shortly after the Senate convened a prolonged quorum call went on while a group of Senators, including Johnson, Anderson, Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, Paul Douglas of Illinois, Richard B. Russell of Georgia, and others, thrashed out the method by which the Anderson motion could replace the proposed rules change offered by Senator Johnson Wednesday.

When the quorum call ended, questions were asked Vice President Nixon. In reply, he ruled that under Senate rules the Anderson motion could not be considered until Friday.

Johnson obtained unanimous consent that notwithstanding Senate rules, it would be in order to consider the Anderson motion as a substitute for the Johnson resolution.

He indicated that later in the day, after debate, he would make a motion to table the Anderson motion.

SENATOR A. S. Mike Monroney, leading off the debate, argued that if the Anderson motion was adopted, the Senate would have no rules.

Senator John O. Pastore, Rhode Island Democrat, said the Johnson resolution sought to establish that the Senate is a continuing body.

What Senator Anderson is trying to do, he added, "is to preserve for posterity that every Senate has the right to adopt its own rules."

Senator Anderson differed with Monroney. He pointed to the ruling of Vice President Nixon that the Senate would continue to act under its rules with certain provisions applicable until new rules were adopted.

Pastore argued that the provision in the Johnson proposal that Senate rules shall continue from one Congress to the another, was unconstitutional.

"We are debating the fundamental, the constitutional legal question — shall each Senate have the right to make their rules that will guide its actions," said Pastore.

Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, Democratic leader, Wednesday beat Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D-NM) on the question of whether the Senate should be allowed to change its rules by a vote taken, that Senator at that time could raise the question.

SEN. CLIFFORD P. CASE (R-NJ) asked the question whether the Johnson resolution was subject to amendment in order to get before the Senate first a motion that the Senate adopt new rules and establish the right of a Senate majority in any new Congress to adopt rules.

Senator Anderson was to offer the motion on behalf of himself and a number of other Senators, who have been fighting to curb filibusters and get liberal legislation passed, including additional civil rights legislation.

WITHIN a half hour after the 86th Congress convened, Senator Johnson had made his surprise move. He acted immediately after newly elected Senators were sworn in and the Senate had agreed by unanimous consent to routine resolutions.

Johnson offered his proposal to change the filibuster rule on behalf of himself and the Senate leadership — Sen. Carl Hayden of Arizona and Mike Mansfield of Montana, Democrats, and Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the new Senate Republican leader, Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, Republicans.

His proposal would permit debate to be limited by a two thirds vote of Senators present and voting; extend cloture to motions to take up a proposal to change Senate rules; and continue from one Congress to the next — unless changed as provided in the rules.

Johnson asked for unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of his resolution.

THE JOHNSON request set off parliamentary skirmishes, which ended in forcing the Johnson resolution under Senate rules, to go over for a day.

Over the opposition of the hard core of the liberal bloc, a motion by Johnson that the Senate adjourn until 10 a.m. Thursday was adopted by a vote of 73 to 23.

A moment as Johnson completed a statement in introducing his proposal, Sen. Jacob K. Javits (N.Y., R.) asked Vice President Richard M. Nixon under what rules would the Johnson resolution be considered.

One of the contentions of the liberal bloc was that Senate rules die with each Congress and that when the Senate convenes at the beginning of a new Congress it should proceed under general parliamentary principles until rules are adopted.

REPLYING TO Javits, inquiry, Vice President Nixon did not go along with this contention, but his ruling reaffirmed his 1957 opinion that the Senate has the right at the beginning of each new Congress to adopt rules of procedure by a majority vote.

The Vice President ruled that the Johnson resolution will be considered under the Senate rules, but that the rules currently in effect were not binding on the power of the Senate to change its rules.

Under existing rules, a motion that the Senate take up a proposal to change its rules is subject to unlimited debate.

Nixon has held that this provision is unconstitutional because the Constitution gives "the majority of the new existing membership of the Senate" the power to determine the rules under which the Senate shall proceed.

"THE VICE PRESIDENT explained that his ruling was only an opinion and that the question of the constitutionality of the provision would have to be decided by the Senate itself.

Nixon said he would rule as the proper time that that provision in the rules was inapplicable to the debate on the Johnson resolution, but would submit the question to the Senate for its decision.

Asked by Javits when will be the proper time to seek that ruling, Nixon replied that the time lies within the discretion of Senators who desire to exercise their right to adopt new rules.

Under ordinary circumstances, a motion to table would end debate on the Johnson resolution, a Senator believed that a motion to table should be made and a vote taken, that Senator at that time could raise the question.

SEN. CLIFFORD P. CASE (R-NJ) asked the question whether the Johnson resolution was subject to amendment in order to get before the Senate first a motion that the Senate adopt new rules and establish the right of a Senate majority in any new Congress to adopt rules.

Senator Anderson was to offer the motion on behalf of himself and a number of other Senators, who have been fighting to curb filibusters and get liberal legislation passed, including additional civil rights legislation.

Lyndon Johnson, long on charm, short on promise

By RALPH MATTHEWS

Senator Lyndon Johnson (Dem., Texas) Senate Majority leader, made some friends, but may not have "influenced people" when he received a delegation representing the Southern Conference Educational Fund at his office Tuesday.

The interracial group headed by Aubrey Williams and composed of six bishops and a number of ministers and laymen presented him with a petition signed by 20,000 communicants of several denominations calling for changes in Rule 22 to curb the filibuster.

In presenting the petitions Bishop Frank Madison Reid, who served as spokesman for the group following a breakfast conference held at the Dodge Hotel, urged the senator to support the resolutions being presented by the liberal wing of the Democratic party headed by Senators Douglass, Humphry, Javits and Anderson.

JOHNSON ASSURED the group that he would press for changes, but would—push his own proposal which called for a two-thirds vote of the senators present instead of by a simple majority. This is called a compromise solution by the liberal wing and is opposed by Roy Wilkens of the NAACP.

Although they were disappointed by his stand the delegation expressed pleasure at both their reception and the frankness of the majority leader who turned on all his infectious charm.

"He left us no doubt as to just where he stood," one member declared and did not make us any false promises.

IN EXPLAINING his position Senator Johnson made the following points:

As majority leader it is my responsibility to try to determine on which issue I can reconcile the two extreme points of view within the party so we can report progress.

"I do not like to fight just for the sake of fighting so that nothing can be accieved.

"In a democracy we have to accept some compromises because when we demand all or nothing we generally wind up with nothing. I want achievement and advancement, not just strife and bitterness.

"During the last session some people condemned me for following this course, but we did come out of the fray with the first piece of civil rights legislation passed in 60 years. I believe we can improve on that in this session.

"If I had only myself to think about I would not be compelled to think in terms of compromises, but as Majority leader I have to help other members of my party get re-elected and I cannot lead the party as a whole by forcing the men in one camp to defeat those in another. We cannot make statesmen unless we can get the candidates elected.

He condemned both Governor Faubus and President Eisenhower for the handling of the Little Rock situation. Faubus was wrong he said, by defying the Supreme Court and the President erred by sending troops which only inflamed the state and strengthened Faubus' hand.

A BETTER solution would have been worked out had the President had the courage to have personally gone to Little Rock and took the braved children by he hand and led them into the school. This human gesture would have won support even of the enemies of integration, he said. Instead, he said, the use of troops was used to arouse the passions of the people who resented the use of force more than resented integration. This act gave the opposition an undeserved weapon which they used to defeat Cohgressman Brooks Hayes and made every liberal a prisoner of the segregationists."

The following persons comprised the delegation:

Aubrey Williams of Montgomery, Alabama; president of the Southern Educational Fund; Bishop S. L. Greene, Bishop Frank Madison Reid, Bishop Edgar A. Love, Bishop C. Ewbanks Tucker, Bishop W. W. Matthews, Bishop Carey A. Gibbs, Rev. Fred Shuttleworth of Birmingham, Rev. M. Cecil Mills, of Washington, Rev. William B. Scott, James L. Hupp, Russell Nixon, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Goldman, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Stephens, E. B. Henderson, Mrs. Hisel McQuillkin, Mrs. Yolande Gehri, Mrs. Susan Freeman, Charles McWhorton.

Texan asks Senate to change Rule 22

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, the Senate Democratic leader, in offering a resolution to change Senate rules so as to curb filibusters, Wednesday said:

"I send to the desk a resolution.

"This is a body of reasonable men.

"Our continuing unity exceeds our passing division.

"There is, I believe, full understanding among us on what will be our first order of business. Not all desire that this should be, but all do accept the fact that it will be—and that the Senate will proceed in orderly and dispatch fashion until the matter is resolved.

"THE CONCERN is with one Rule in our body of rules.

"The concern is not with the full body of rules.

"Some believe that Rule 22 of the Standing Rules of the Senate should be changed drastically. Some feel it should not be changed at all. Others among us feel that a corrective measure of responsibility can be added to the Rule without a noncontroversial change of old standards of free debate.

Under ordinary circumstances, the variance in our views on Rule 22 that we come to reconcile, and can proceed directly under the Rules of the Senate to the issue at hand—Rule 22 itself.

"THAT IS the purpose of the resolution I offer.

"This resolution proposes that the Rule 22 be changed.

"It would permit cloture of debate on the vote of two-thirds of the Senators present and voting.

"It would extend cloture to motions to proceed to consider a change in the Standing Rules of the Senate. It would add a new paragraph to Section 2 of Rule 22 providing that the rules of the Senate shall continue from one Congress to the next unless changed as provided in the order.

"This is the same as Senate Resolution 30 of the last Congress, which I had the privilege of introducing for myself and some 38 Senators.

"THE POINT is not just the merits of this resolution in terms of what it provides, but, rather, that by making it the business of the Senate we proceed directly to the real issue.

"Each Senator can, individually, offer such suggestions as he may desire during the course of our deliberations. All views can be heard.

"This issue has lingered overly long in our national discussions. The people expect us, as reasonable men, to resolve it and, as responsible men, not to create new issues in our wake.

"I am, however, fully aware of the provisions of Rule 40, which entitles the Senate to one day's notice in writing of motions to amend or modify a rule and that any Senator may insist upon the compliance with the Rule.

"IF OBJECTION is presented, I shall file notice and plan to call again for consideration of the resolution at the expiration of one day.

"I hope that we may proceed on this course. I am sure that we shall give this issue full consideration as it deserves. I am equally sure that we can — and will — as reasonable men resolve the issue so that the Senate may proceed to its important labors for the nation.

"Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of my resolution."
