Cold, hot or indifferent—there will always be bums on the waterfront

Along the waterfront, on Tuesday a sharp cold wind cut through clothing with the biting edge of a knife.

Gone from their usual doorways were the city's waterfront bums—chased away by the only thing they haven't been able to master, mother nature.

In the small cafes along the waterfront they gathered to seek warmth and companionship and possibly to talk someone into buying them a drink to keep the chill out of their bones.

A reporter out on the prowl to find how a bum manages to survive in winter, looked in vain for one of these independent wanderers on the cold streets.

Then he stepped inside one of the cafes, this one known as "the hangout," and there they sat in the warmth without any place to go, or even any ambition to go any place.

* * *

THEY WATCHED the stranger with suspicious eyes for he was an outsider in their world in which people who work every day are regarded as "squares."

It was not until the stranger offered to buy one of the men a drink that he got any conversation. The man who took him up on his offer said his name was "Fred" — there was no last name.

He was an unhappy looking man, shabbily dressed in a bulky Army jacket and a pair of dirty pants about two sizes too large for him.

Fred immediately made it clear that he was not "a bum."

"I'm not like the rest of these guys. I'm waiting to unload the trucks when they come in."

The trucks he referred to were those that came to the wholesale market located only a short distance from this haven of warmth.

* * *

HE HELD the glass of cheap wine he had ordered in his hand and looked at it reflectively.

"I'll tell you about these guys. They just sit around here and drink all the wine they can get. You can buy it at ten cents a shot."

His remark reached only the ears of his latest sponsor as the rest of the men in the place went right on with what they were doing, which wasn't very much.

They stood around the bar with forlorn expressions on their faces or they sat at tables boasting of their past experiences and adventures.

* * *

OVER THE years many of them had consumed so much wine or other varieties of alcohol, that the odor of stale drink seemed to come from their bodies, helped by the heat in the place.

"They stay around here until the place closes and then they usually go out and get a bed for 50 cents if they have the money. If they don't, they just sleep in the streets."

"They have nothing to look forward to, just the next drink.

"The man lets 'em stay in here because they don't bother anybody. They spend their money in here when they have any."

* * *

AT THAT moment, one of the bums got up from the table and went over to the snack counter and asked for a "special" — three pieces of fat back and a plate of cabbage.

For these delicacies, he paid 35 cents.

Fred, an old friend by now, continued: "In the summertime they do odd jobs like delivering circulars, but when it gets cold they bunch around here and bum all the money they can get."

Even though these bums have no homes, no places to go at night, they manage to survive through the cold winter months without the aid of employment.

If you think it's easy, try it.

H. L. Lovell re-elected by Sigmas

CHICAGO — Hutson L. Lovell NYC attorney, was re-elected national president of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc. at the organization's 44th annual meeting here Dec. 27-30.

Some 300 delegates were in attendance, but more than 2,000 persons showed up for the public meeting on Dec. 28 when the Rt. Rev. Joseph Gomez of Cleveland, head of the Fourth Episcopal District of the AME Church, was the speaker.

As a result of business meetings, the fraternity went on record as favoring a change in Senate Rule 22 and being totally opposed to "any go slow" policy in the fight for desegregation.

* * *

IN ADDITION to Mr. Lovell, other national officers re-elected at the convention were:

Roswell O. Sutton, Atlanta, first vice president; R. A. Hester, Dallas, Texas, treasurer; and Dr. Robert J. Hill of Baltimore, director of bigger and better businesses.

Newly elected national officers include James Haskins, New Orleans second vice president; Alvin J. McNeil, Gramling, La., director of education; and Dr. Von D. Mizell of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., director of social action.

Delegates also went on record as calling on Congress to make it a Federal crime to keep qualified citizens from voting and the passage of a Federal fair employment practice law.

* * *

BISHOP GOMEZ, in his address, observed that "there have been a great deal of unscientific approaches on the subject of segregation."

He pointed out that "there is a realism about the whole problem of integration that we have not yet approached."

That realism, he said, is that colored people "live in a psychosis that has made them seem to believe that they are still inferior." And deep within the consciousness of the white, he added, remains the "master-slave psychosis."

* * *

HE OFFERED several suggestions. He asked the race to be one, that we elevate our leadership, combine economical and political strength;

Let thrift, honesty, truth and decency prevail, unite for freedom and espouse the cause to heretofore submerged peoples of Asia and Africa.

Tuberculosis patients increase use of free clothing bank services

A startling increase in the use of free Clothing Bank services at three state tuberculosis hospitals was noted during the last six months of 1958 it has been reported.

This service provides clothing for indigent patients and is made possible through the annual Christmas Seal Sale in Baltimore City.

According to Frank T. Jones, Executive Director of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, sponsors of the Christmas Seal Sale, Clothing Bank facilities are now endangered by sharply lagging returns in the recently ended sale.

Mr. Jones stated that delayed returns may still be sent to the association at 900 St. Paul St.

"It's a staggering problem," Mr. Jones said, "in the last half of 1958, the number of indigent patients who received clothing from this Christmas Seal service increased 59 per cent.

"Christmas Seal money spent for this clothing increased 140 per cent. Even at the whole-hearted way which Baltimore clothing houses sell clothes to us, this is a huge increase.

* * *

MR. JONES explained that the clothing is known as "up clothing" and is provided for patients who are able to spend some time out of bed. It includes shirts, trousers, sweaters, skirts, slips and blouses.

"Our problem is most serious at Henryton State Hospital," Mr. Jones continued. "There, the number of patients benefitting from this service increased 162 per cent and our expenses increased 285 per cent. And this happened in only six months.

"At Henryton, 23.3 per cent of the patients receive this clothing. At Mount Wilson State Hospital, 14 per cent receive it and at Victor Cullen State Hospital, 33.3 per cent of the patients are helped by the Clothing Bank."

"Just because these people are hospital patients, we can't think they don't need the same clothes well people need," Mr. Jones added. "They can't buy clothes themselves because they don't have any money.

"They can't go on wearing bad clothing because the other patients need that. The only alternative is to spend Christmas Seal money on clothing for them to use.

"But unless we get a lot more last minute returns from our Christmas Seal Sale, this is one of the services we'll be forced to cut back."

There is a total of $50 available each week for news tips and news photos. If you have a tip or a newsworthy photo, call AFRO City Desk, MU. 5-6015 and say "I've got a news tip." Bring photos to City Desk. If no answer, call LA. 3-3024.

Langston Hughes to appear here

Langston Hughes, author and poet, will address the Baltimore Ministers' Conference of Baltimore and Vicinity at Enon Baptist Church, Edmondson Ave. at Schroeder St., Monday, Jan. 12 at 2 p.m.

Mr. Hughes, whose 25th book has just been released, is coming to Baltimore as guest of the Press Publishers' Distributors, Corp. for the grand opening of Book Fair, a new book store at 2327 Pennsylvania Ave. and Cumberland St.

He will speak to the clergymen on "The Colored Man in American History." Eight of the writer's books have been about colored Americans.

BETWEEN 11:30 a.m. Mr. Hughes will autograph books during an autograph party to be held at Book Fair.

Immediately afterwards, the famous writer will be guest of honor at a program and reception being sponsored by religious and civic leaders, beginning at 3:30 p.m. in the Simmons Memorial Baptist Church, Penn-Sylvania Ave. and Cumberland St., the Rev. Daniel Dixon, president of Press Publishers Distributors, says the new book store, to occupy two floors, will feature a room of books on the study of colored peoples as a reference library.

His store will also handle church and Sunday School supplies aswell as choirs and clergy robes.

LANGSTON HUGHES

Morgan State will host debate teams

The Morgan State College Chapter of Tau Kappa Alpha National Forensic Honor Society will host its first intercollegiate debate tournament here Saturday, Jan. 10.

Teams from 13 colleges including Morgan will compete in three rounds of debate on the national topic: "Resolved, That the Further Development of Nuclear Weapons Should Be Prohibited by International Agreement."

The activity is one in a series planned to mark the opening of the Theodore R. McKeldin Student Union Building at the college.

The structure was formally dedicated Dec. 17, with Gov. McKeldin, in whose honor the building has been named, giving the address and cutting the ribbons.

* * *

AREA SCHOOLS participating will be Loyola, the Johns Hopkins University, the University of Maryland, American University, Georgetown and Howard Universities.

Other schools entering teams will be Kings College of Wilkes Barre, Pa., Rutgers University (both the New Brunswick and Newark branches), New York University, the U.S. Merchant Marines, and the University of Delaware.

Round One of the tournament will get under way at 9:30 a.m. in the D.O.W. Holmes Hall, with Round Two scheduled for 11 a.m., and Round Three set for 2:30 p.m.

A regional meeting of all TKA schools at the tournament will be held at 1:15 p.m. in the Student Union.

A banquet will be held at 4 p.m. in the Canteen of the McKeldin Student Union to climax the activities.

* * *

DR. KARL MOLL, TKA Regional Governor of Rutgers University, will present trophies and awards to tournament winners.

These will consist of one permanent trophy to be awarded to the college whose teams win the most debates, a trophy for the best affirmative team, a trophy for the best negative team, and individual awards for the highest ranking affirmative and negative debaters.

Morgan will enter two teams in the tournament. One will have on the affirmative Henry Sands and Edith Selby and on the negative, William Wagstaff and John Risher.

The other set will have on the affirmative Marie Rawlins and Arlene Pierce and on the negative Hughlyn Pierce and Frances Nicholson.

Harold China, director of debate at the college, is chairman of the debate tournament, with Leroy Giles, also of the debate committee, acting as assistant chairman.

Rhodes slate 5 new grants

LONDON (NNPA) — The creation of five new Rhodes Scholarships was announced Thursday by the Rhodes Trustees. They are mainly for colored students from British Commonwealth countries. Rhode scholarships are valued at $2,100 a year.

They are for the five countries or regions which have recently become or are about to become self-governing.

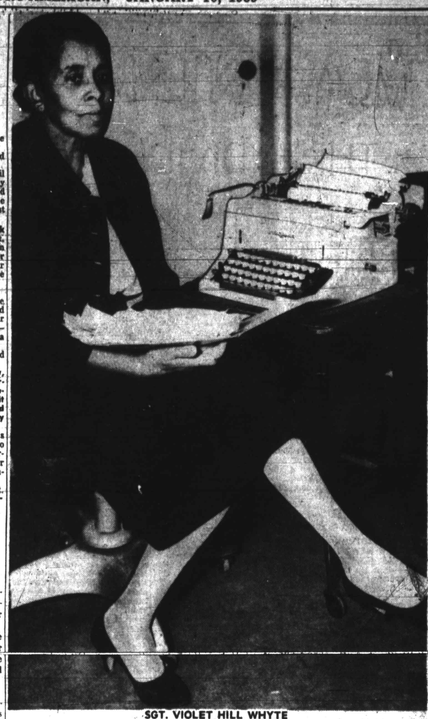
* * *

THESE ARE Ceylon, Ghana, the Malayan region, (including Malaya, Singapore, Brunei, North Borneo and Sarawak) Nigeria, and the Caribbean region, which includes, in addition to the Caribbean Federation, British Guiana, British Honduras and the Bahamas.

It will exclude Jamaica which already has a Rhodes Scholarship. Up to now nearly all Rhodes scholars have been white. The only exceptions have been an occasional colored scholar from Jamaica and those from India and Pakistan.

THERE HAS been one, the late Alain Leroy Locke, a Howard University professor, from the United States. At present, 32 Rhodes scholars each year come from the United States.

All Rhodes scholars remain at Oxford for two years to take a degree. Those whose academic work or future career make it desirable retain the scholarship a third year.



SGT. VIOLET HILL WHYTE
Rounds out 21 years on the Baltimore police force

Sgt. Whyte, soft-spoken, has understanding, sympathetic heart

Sgt. Violet Hill Whyte has been a policewoman in the Northwestern police district of Baltimore 21 years.

She was appointed Dec. 31, 1937.

The Northwestern district is one of the largest police districts in Baltimore and since Baltimore is a large city the district is said to be one of the toughest.

Most policewomen are considered pretty hard customers but if you think Sgt. Whyte is as tough as nails or that she has a heart like a rock, you're wrong.

It's true that she must deal firmly with hundreds of sordid and criminal cases but even then Sgt. Whyte is known as a soft-spoken, gentle person who has a heart filled with understanding and sympathy.

And, Sergeant Whyte is one policewoman who dearly loves pretty clothes, has some mighty smart frocks and slippers of the latest fashion.

She spends leisure hours with friends playing bridge and exchanging conversation as women will do.

—At parties Sergeant Whyte is no wall flower. Many times she is the life of the party.

* * *

KNOWN AS an interesting public speaker and a brilliant conversationalist, Sergeant Whyte is in demand at public and private meetings.

As a hobby she writes short stories, not about the many experiences she has at work but human interest stories that have come to her in extensive vacation travels all over the country.

* * *

ON TUESDAY Sgt. Whyte told the AFRO: "I used to sew but I don't have much time for that now. I like housplants and flowers but the thing I like to do most is enjoy our country home with the family."

She explained that she and her husband maintain a farm home in Frederick County "where there is good fresh air, beautiful country side, and the Blueridge mountains."

Her heart's desire is to someday travel in European countries.

"I'm going to try to see some foreign countries at a later time although I don't know when that will be," she added.

* * *

SERGEANT WHYTE is one of seven children of the late Rev. Daniel G. Hill who pastored Trinity and Bethel AME Churches here a total of 40 years. Her mother was the late Margaret Jack Hill.

She is married to George S. Whyte retired principal of Elementary School 103.

The Whyte children are two sons, Grafton S. Whyte and William Peck Whyte and two daughters, Mrs. Grace M. Daniels, Westbrook and Mrs. Esther M. Sartt, Baltimore. An adopted daughter, Mrs. Grace Virginia Hopewell, Waynesboro, Pa.

Mrs. Whyte's six brothers and sisters include Dr. Daniel G. Hill Jr., dean of the Howard University School of Religion; Mrs. Grace Hill Jacobs, dean of Coppin State Teachers College; Mrs. Lee Frances Fletcher, teacher at Elementary School 146; William Allen Hill, a government employee; Mrs. Esther Hill Isaacs, Pasadena, California and J. Newton Hill, a professor at Lincoln University, Pennsylvania.

Charles Law Home to open Sunday

A invitation has been extended to the public to visit the new Charles R. Law Funeral Home, 802 Madison Ave., on Sunday, Jan. 11, from 2 to 6 p.m.

The occasion marks the formal opening of the newly enlarged and remodeled funeral home.

CHARLES LAW

Originally the establishment occupied the property at 802 and 804 Madison Ave. It has now been enlarged to include 806 and 808.

Included in the new buildings are a large chapel capable of seating 300 persons, a large preparation room, a dressing room, a men's rest room, a reposing room, a ladies' smoking lounge and a ladies' powder room.

* * *

IN THE original buildings will be another chapel, a reposing room, rest rooms and a preparation room which is now being turned into an employees' lounge.

Another innovation is an off-the-street parking lot in the rear of the home which will night.

As part of the opening ceremonies on Sunday, periods of organ music have been arranged in feature Shelman Johnson, Sophia Johnson and Kenneth Law.

The musical interludes will begin on the hour and continue for 45 minutes. Works of the masters will be played along with modern sacred music.
