Gadabouting In Baltimore

B. & P. Club Women team chic & charm

with Lula Jones Garrett

Never let it be said that sveltness and success, chic and charm are seldom boon buddies

You won't, of course. If you were around while the executive committee of the National Association of Business and Professional Women's Clubs was holding its winter session, here, Saturday.

The ladies were housed in the Sheraton Belvedere Hotel, and scattered on just about every floor in the place.

The president, Mrs. Marie L. Harrison of Newark, N.J. had a suite on the fourth floor . . . which, of course, was the center of much activity. She's on the staff of the Urban League in Newark.

Wearing one of those "simple little black dresses" that add up to a mountain in fashion, Mrs. Harrison presided throughout the day-long session, broken by a coffee hour and luncheon at one o'clock with the Baltimore Club. In the evening the hostess club entertained the visitors at cock tails at the residence of Mrs. Rosalie McGuire.

During the business sessions the group considered national program, problems of club membership, head committee reports and made preliminary plans for the annual convention in Detroit in October.

Dr. Zelia Evans of Montgomery, Ala., second vice president, was moderator of the discussion on program. Among recommendations that grew out of the discussion was full cooperation on national projects. These include participation in the Women's International Exposition in New York City in November, the National Festival, the African project, the annual popularity contest for the scholarship fund, continuation of the study towards prevention of juvenile delinquency, clinics and workshops for the improvement of business services and the national employment pool.

A recommendation for a new program item was accepted, that the organization study and promote the welfare of retired business and professional women in the areas of health, recreation, legislation and employment.

Mrs. Florence Allen Holmes, New York City, first vice president, told of her southeastern tour and reported on the formation of new clubs. A committee was appointed to explore potential membership in newer fields now opening in businesses and professions.

In the absence of the third vice president, Mrs. Deloitah Harris of Brooklyn, N.Y., Miss Margaret Johnson of this city, led the discussion on junior membership and clubs. Mrs. Minnie Hurley, New York City, longtime treasurer on the group, was also absent because of illness.

Mrs. Ursula Osborne, Brooklyn, N.Y., outlined the three phases of the African project and mentioned the possibility of a visit to Ghana, Sudan and Somaliland by a group of members in '60.

Mrs. Grace Sevier, Jamaica, N.Y., announced a European music tour to seven countries, approved by the NANM, in July by air or boat.

But going back to the eye-filling angle of the session: Anna Butler, Atlantic City schoolmarm, who is also a poet and a journalist of note, was chick in powder blue crepe and a felt hat exactly matching in shade at the business sessions, . and equally smart in beige lace over taffeta at the cocktailer. The latter frock was a smart thing with a cutaway o' the lace and front and the skirt billowing into pleats at the back.

One of the prettiest hats was worn by Musician Jessyca Hayden of Montgomery, Ala. . . a little number of pleated straw cloth brim and the crown filled with yellow roses.

Vivacious Marjorie Van Duke . . . she of the sparkling grey eyes and the beautiful silver hair . . . does a cute trick of sticking to grey. Her frock worn at the luncheon was of gray wool, and at the cocktail party, gray chiffon with a long bodice and pleated skirt.

Vogueish at the luncheon, too, was Marie Gibson of Camden, N.J., whose stark black frock was collared in white mink.

At the evening party, Pearl Flippin, Atlantic City mortician and a co - founder of B and P was colorful in an aqua print . . . this too having a straight bodice and full skirt; and Edna Dabney of Washington selected black satin, made with a bubble skirt.

Henrietta Kearney of Norfolk, Va. wore a delightful small fitted feather hat . . . and speaking of feathered finery, the burnt orange feather hat that topped a smart wool frock of the same shade as worn by Juanita Young of this city was just mighty good looking.

THE BALTIMORE CHAPTER of the National Council of Negro Women was in conference, Friday night, to begin setting up plans for the hosting of the regional session, here, in May. Conferring was the regional director, Mrs. Jennie M. Walburg of Washington
