THIS WAS ONE of the coaches of the train which derailed at Middle River Thursday. Though the Potomac-Palmetto Limited was moving along at 80 miles an hour, none of the coaches turned over. A piece of steel on the tracks was blamed for the accident.

the first to arrive. He said there appeared to be no panic but that things were pretty messed up.

Officer Crusse and a fireman brought Mr. Henders who suffered the broken leg, from the dining car where others had placed him on a table and the officer carried him across the tracks to an ambulance.

All the train crewman and a vacationing train conductor on the train realized that some disaster was about to strike seconds before the coaches went off the tracks when they heard the hissing of the emergency brakes.

Richard Venus, 25-year - old conductor for the New York Central, who with his wife, Audrey, 25, and their daughter, Diane, 3, were returning to their Kingston, N.Y. home after taking in the Mardi Gras in New Orleans tried to warn passengers on his coach.

"Soon as I heard the air brakes going to emergency I knew something was wrong. Then we started bumping along. I yelled to the people to get down," he said.

His wife told the AFRO, "This was more exciting than the Mardi Gras."

MRS. PEPPER, who husband Charles, a retired railroad man, died in December, was on the coach with the Venuses.

"All I know is there was a bump then a lot of rocking and carrying on and things started flying and people were hollering," she recalled.

"All those bags came down on me. It scared me," she added. Mrs. Pepper had her right arm in a sling and complained on hurts on the left neck and side. She was taken to Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Because breakfast was being served at the time of the accident, most of the crew members were at work when they heard the emergency brakes hissing a warning.

CHEF COOK Marshburn said:

"We were serving breakfast and all of a sudden the train started swaying from side to side.

"What was on my mind all the time was when she was going to stop. It seemed like a long time before she came to a stop."

The second cook, Mr. Coleman said:

"Pans and pots and things were scrambled everywhere.

"If it (the train) had turned over, it would have been too bad."

Norton B. Williams, waiter, wearing a patch on his head, explained what happened to him:

"When I knew anything I was on the floor on my face. Pans, plates and things were falling on me.

"A jar of mayonaise fell on my head and cut it.

"I was in the pantry preparing a man's cereal for him. You could feel the car quiver. Chairs, tables and food was all over everywhere."

MR. SMALLS, the parlor car attendant, said:

"I was on the last car on the train. I heard the hissing noise. We can always tell a split second before when anything is wrong. It was a real mixed-up thing."

Mr. Butler also got the warning:

"We get a tipoff when you hear the emergency. Then she started swaying from side to side.

"It threwed me back on the floor and a lady in a chair landed in my lap," he said, adding with a smile, "If she had left the chair it would have been alright."

MR. HENDERSON, the waiter who suffered the fractured ankle, could not say how it happened:

"All I know, things went

YELLED A WARNING — Richard Venus, 28, a vacationing train conductor for New York Central, who was returning from New Orleans with his wife Audrey and their daughter Diane, 3, yelled to passengers in his coach to get down when he heard the emergency brakes go on, signifying that something was wrong.

"IT KEPT ROCKIN'," Mrs. Carrie Pepper, of the Bronx, N. Y., says of the coach she rode when the Potomac-Palmetto Limited derailed.

harem scarem and we sure are lucky. The Divine Power saved us all.

"I got knocked down but I can't account for how my ankle got broke."

Mr. Henderson asked that Mrs. Lillie Jackson, president of the Baltimore NAACP, and a friend of years standing, be notified of his being at City Hospitals. He said Mrs. Jackson always stops at his home when she is in New York.

By mid-afternoon the AFRO learned that most of the persons who were brought in to Baltimore hospitals had been examined and released.

Group to protest block renewal plan

NAACP representatives and neighborhood citizens are scheduled to appear before the City Council Monday to protest an ordinance which would allow present renewal experiments with a square block in the Harlem Park area.

The Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency is seeking to close streets and alleys in the block bounded by Mulrean Ave.; Carey St., Edmondson Ave., and Calhoun St., and to remove all inner buildings for an open air recreational space.

The protestants contend, among other things, that this will force garbage collections from streets, and create an unsightly health menace.

'5 Bees' to play sweetheart dance

By MAXINE JOHNSON

Doug Rawlings, president, says almost 100 percent support has been received from junior class members of Edmondson High in working to make a success of the big Sweetheart Dance to be held in the school cafeteria with music by the "Five Bees."

Proceeds from the dance will be used to finance the class senior year activities.

Happy Valentine wishes to all.

EEOC meets Tuesday

Baltimore's Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is scheduled to meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday at its headquarters, Third floor, People's Court Building, Fayette and Gay Sts., according to Philip A. Campanelli, executive director.

Fabulous sale set on Avenue

Down on the Avenue the excitement is bursting out all over as merchants get ready for the big fifth annual Lincoln - Douglass Day sale which takes place tomorrow (Saturday), sponsored by the Pennsylvania-Avenue Lafayette Market Association.

For weeks now the merchants in the 1700 and 1800 blocks of Pennsylvania Ave. and the Lafayette Market have been getting inquiries about when the sale would take place and they set the date for Valentine's Day — Feb. 14 — tomorrow.

This year they are expecting an even bigger crowd than the thousands who swamped the stores last year.

After all, it isn't every day that fur coats can be bought for $1, or men's suits for $1.95, diamond rings to $3 or ladies shoes for 25 cents a pair.

THE STORES have been cleared for action with many extra sales people, early openings and late closings.

Free busses have been provided from various sections of the city to bring the shoppers into the area.

Herman Katkow, president of the PALMA was well pleased with the preparations.

"Every year we practically give away merchandise on Lincoln-Douglass Day, but this year it looks like the whole street has gone crazy — bargain crazy."

He was referring specifically to the ridiculously low prices that are being advertised.

"Anyone who follows the PALMA signs into the stores of members of PALMA will find the craziest prices—the biggest savings — and all good merchandise."

In keeping with its policy of community service, PALMA is also conducting the Lincoln - Douglass Day Essay Contest which closes tomorrow.

The PALMA carries on a constant public relations program as well as constant community relations activities.

You can save money and still help PALMA continue its worthwhile program by shopping at the PALMA stores on Lincoln-Douglass Day and all through the year.

CLOSER TO REALITY — The proposed Charles Center, a downtown renewal project, grew closer to becoming a reality as plans were presented to the City Planning Commission last week. Next stop for the $127,000,000 project is the City Council. A 30-story federal building is expected to be the first completed building in the area which is bounded by Saratoga St. on the north, Charles St. on the east, Lombard St. on the south and Hopkins Pl. on the west.

Free bus rides offered Saturday for PALMA sale

Free busses provided by PALMA for the annual Lincoln Douglass Day Sale in the 1700-1800 blocks Pennsylvania Ave. will provide transportation for thousands if past performance is any indication.

Bus No. 1 will start at Gwynns Falls Parkway and Garrison Ave., then to Walbrook Junction, to North Ave., down Monroe St. to Laurens and across Laurens to Pennsylvania Ave. where passengers will be discharged.

From this point it will return directly to the starting point and will shuttle back and forth until 8 p.m.

Bus No. 2 will start at Bloomingdale and North Aves., then down Poplar Grove to Lafayette Ave., across Lafayette to Pennsylvania, up Pennsylvania to Wilson St. where passengers will be discharged.

The free shuttle service will start at 8 a.m.

Both busses will be plainly marked by prominent, distinctive signs for easy identification.

AT THE request of Gov. James T. Blair and Mayor Raymond Tucker, St. Louis has been designated as a disaster area by President Eisenhower.

The Civil Defense, which hadn't had a chance to go into full-scale operation since it was organized, wasn't notified until more than three hours after the sudden destruction.

Brig. Gen. Francis P. Hardaway (retired), head of the group, blamed the Weather Bureau for not notifying the group.

George Brancato, in charge of the Bureau, denied the responsibility, saying:

"I think our job is warning, not reporting."

He also remarked that "it (the tornado) actually developed in the St. Louis Metropolitan area and was here and gone before anybody knew about it — except where the people were hurt."
