WHAT THE RETIRED DO

Teaching was her life, Mrs. Estella W. Lee

By WILLIAM SLATER

"The only reason I retired from teaching is because I had reached my 70th birthday, and I had to."

"I think, though, that I was good for five or even ten more years.

"I still would be teaching now if not for the age limit."

Talking was Mrs. Estella Wilson Lee, 81, 3418 Holmes Ave. a retired teacher who spent 37 years in the city's public school system.

Mrs. Lee retired from her position as principal of William Alexander Elementary School, after 14 years there.

SPEAKING OF some of the many things she enjoyed during her many years of teaching, she said:

"The phase of teaching I enjoyed most was helping children who were slow learners.

"I think I was most enthusiastic about that.

"I also loved to see a student, not necessarily brilliant, but with the desire to learn, get ahead in his work.

"It made me feel that I was doing a good job when I saw changes for the better in one of my students."

* * *

BORN IN Baltimore, Mrs. Lee, the oldest of six children, is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles (Lucy) Wilson.

Her sisters and brothers include the late Mrs. Anna Belle Ross, the late Mrs. Jessie Smith, Mrs. Lucille Fitzgerald, wife of William Fitzgerald, prominent Baltimore lawyer and real-estate man.

William Wilson, a government worker, and Howard Wilson, a teacher in the school system.

She attended Biddle St. Elementary School, St. Mary's School, and Colored High School, at Saratoga near Charles Sts., graduating from high school in 1898.

After high school, she attended Morgan College, and summer schools at Hampton Institute and Martha Vineyard. Summer Normal in Connecticut.

* * *

MRS. LEE began her teaching career in the fall of 1910 at the Old Frederick Road School.

Of the old days she said:

"When I started teaching, we had to teach everything and practically every class.

"We only got a salary of about $35 a month, so you can see how much things have changed."

She was one of the first instructors at the Normal College, now known as Coppin State Teachers College.

She taught there for seven years.

On Jan. 2, 1909, Mrs. Lee married William H. Lee, former principal at Division St. School.

They had four children, Miss Estella Lee, a social security employee; Thomas, also a social security employee;

William, a Maryland State Employment Service employee; and the late Wilson Lee who died in 1955.

Mrs. Lee now has three grandchildren, Thomas, Michael, and Franklin Lee, the sons of Thomas Lee.

* * *

DOES MRS. LEE miss the smell of chalk or the eight o'clock bell now that she has retired?

"I certainly did miss my school when I retired. I just didn't know what to do with myself having all that leisure time.

"Three or four years ago, I would have gone back at the drop of a pin, but now I'm not well, and I don't think I could do much teaching now."

Because Mrs. Lee has so much leisure time now, how does she spend it?

What does she do to break the monotony of sitting at home alone every day?

* * *
