Alliances prevented 3rd world war, delegates told

"If it had not been for such military alliances as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, we would have been in World War III years ago."

That was the conclusion Tuesday of Reps. Chester E. Merrow (R., N.H.) and A. S. J. Carnahan (D., Mo.,) both members of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The two congressmen, together with three Maryland representatives, George H. Fallon, Samuel Friedel and Daniel B. Brewster appeared in a panel discussion at the Sheraton-Belevedere Hotel on "Can the alliances keep the peace?" The panel was the concluding event of a pilot citizens conference on world affairs sponsored by the Maryland Great Decisions Committee of the United Nations Association.

* * *

CONG. BREWSTER, just returned from Berlin, told conference delegates that "Berlin serves as a show case for all the unhappy people in the Russian - controled Eastern zone and serves as an escape hatch for anti-Communist thousands trapped behind the iron curtain."

He was firm in his belief that "there should be no backing off, no pulling out of Berlin and declared he was "strongly opposed" to cutting down of American aid to the people in West Berlin.

Rep. Carnaham said Congress would give its full support to President Eisenhower in "whatever action is necessary in Berlin." He added that this would include the use of nuclear weapons to halt Russia.

* * *

REP. MERROW, asserting that although he favored the establishment of a world police force within the United Nations, he did not think it would be wise to do away with "our military alliances until there has been a great change in the international structure."

Philip Van Slyck, of the Foreign Policy Association, New York, who also spoke, said he was in Baltimore to observe the conference technique as a means of interesting the public in world affairs.

William M. Dugdale presided. Mrs. Frances Howard is executive director of the United Nations Association of Maryland.

Baseball, his first love, Charles Thomas . . . retired

CHARLES THOMAS
Enjoying a baseball game on TV with his grandson, Jacques

BY WILLIAM SLATER

"I haven't been retired very long, but so far, it feels pretty good.

"I was going to work another year, but my wife talked me into retiring.

"Now that I have all this free time on my hands, I plan to get in quite a bit of fishing and baseball."

Speaking of his retirement was Charles Thomas, 65, 3704 Springdale Ave., for 37 years a foreman at the American Sugar Company before his retirement last month.

He added.

"I plan to paint and do a little clean up work around the house.

"I've got quite a busy retirement planned, almost as busy as when I was working."

* * *

MR. THOMAS started working at the American Sugar Company in 1922 and how he went there is quite a story.

"I started working there quite by accident. I had no intention of staying there more than two weeks.

"Before I started there I used to play baseball with the former Weldon Giants, later known as the Baltimore Black Sox.

"I went to the refinery in the off season and when I got there I started thinking.

"I thought that playing baseball didn't offer much of a future, so I decided to stay at the refinery.

"I have never regretted for one minute the decision that I made."

Starting as a laborer, Mr. Thomas was later promoted to foreman.

"There are good chances for advancement at the refinery if you are a good, conscientious worker," he said.

* * *

MR. THOMAS and his wife, Mrs. Nellie C. Thomas, entertained the AFRO last Tuesday in the living room of their well furnished home.

Their home is a three story wooden structure with ten rooms and a club cellar, very well decorated.

Mr. Thomas said proudly of his new home:

"We've been here since August, and we're very satisfied with it."

* * *

BORN IN Elkridge, Md., he is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William (Mary) Thomas. His father worked as a Pullman porter.

Mr. Thomas attended elementary school in Elkridge and Armstrong High in Washington, graduating in 1910.

In high school, Mr. Thomas said his favorite sport was football.

"We had a championship team during those years. I played fullback. It was a rugged, but great position."

Mr. Thomas said he came to Baltimore in 1912, and held his first job in a Madison Ave. confectionery.

After two years with the confectionery, he took a job playing semi - pro baseball for the Weldon Giants.

He played with the Giants until 1917 and was called to the Army where he served in France for two years.

Fresh out of the Army, he went back to his baseball club, then known as the Baltimore Black Sox.

* * *

REMINISCING OVER his baseball days, Mr. Thomas said:

"I suppose baseball was my first love. I did nothing else but eat, sleep, and play it.

"Those were the good old days. I made almost $150 a week then. People used to pay well to see us play, we didn't have a crowd.

What was Mr. Thomas' greatest thrill during his baseball career?

He remembers this one:

"It was when we played the Cuban Giants. I don't remember the year, but the Giants had beaten every team they played during their American tour.

"It was the 12th Inning and the Giants were leading 4-3. I came to bat with two men on base and slammed a homer.

"You can imagine what a thrill it was for me being the hero of the day. I have never forgotten it."

In 1919, Mr. Thomas married the former Miss Helen Dorsey. They had no children and were divorced in 1940.

He married the former Mrs. Nellie Cooper, also a divorcee. Mrs. Cooper has two children by her first marriage.

They are Mrs. Jean B. Maultsby, a supervisor at the Department of Public Welfare; and James R. Cooper, a junior medical student at Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tenn.

They have two grandchildren Jacques Maultsby and Lisa Cooper.

* * *

DOES MR. THOMAS miss the daily grind of getting out of bed at 6 a.m. to be at work by 8?

Says Mr. Thomas, "I really do miss the old place and my friends.

"I occasionally go back to the factory to see them, when I can't go back, I call to see how things are."

What were Mr. Thomas' most pleasant moments before his retirement?

"Well, I'll never forget the party the workers gave me when I was ready to retire.

"Everyone participated and they gave me an electric shaver, a gold watch, a cuff link set, and many other things I value greatly."

* * *

BEING SUCH an interested baseball fan, Mr. Thomas was asked his views on the following questions.

Who does he think is the greatest baseball player he has ever seen?

"Well, that's a pretty hard question, because I have seen so many good players.

"But I would say John H. Lloyd, all around player for the Giants of Atlantic City. He was a great guy."

Who does Mr. Thomas think will win the pennants and World Series this year?

He replied.

"The Yanks for the Americans, and the Giants for the Nationals. And, if my predictions are right, the Giants will take the series this year.

"Willie Mays is my favorite current player. He's going to lead those Giants to great things."

Who is his favorite team? The Orioles, of course.

"They're just a new team yet, but they've got some good boys, and in a few years they are going to be on top."

That game yesterday, (Tuesday) shows what kind of team we're going to have this year.

"They are young boys that are going places."

* * *

MR. THOMAS is a 35 - year member of St. Peter Claver Church where he is a member of the Holy Name Society.

What is his advice to young beginners?

Mr. Thomas said:

"Get that education; you'll need it if you want to get someplace.

Haiti discounts Dejoie's threats, gets surplus food help from CARE

By MOSES NEWSON

Haiti has been assured that no area country will provide Dr. Louis Dejoie, Cuba-exiled would-be president, with the necessary support for his threatened invasion, a Haitian official said Wednesday.

Brushing off Dejoie's radio threats from Cuba as "a war of nerves," Ernest J. Bonhomme, Haiti's ambassador to the United States, told the AFRO:

"His threat cannot materialize unless he gets support from some foreign government. I have assurances that he will not receive that support.

"Such support (for Dejoie) will not come from the United States, it will not come from Cuba nor any of the others in the area."

IN RECENT weeks, Dejoie, who was an unsuccessful presidential candidate in Haiti's last national election, has intensified his threats to march into Haiti with a 12,000-man army.

He has also predicted that the country's government, which has had a series of presidents mount and tumble, and other outbursts of political fury in the last two years, would fall within a month.

Ambassador Bonhomme said the tiny nation, currently beset with other serious problems, including a severe drought in the northwestern section, will weather the storm.

"The government will stand because it has the support of the people. It came out of a free election—though it was very harsh— and it has the support of the masses," Mr. Bonhomme said.

"Before this," he added, "there was the feeling that politics was an oligarchy. Income or social standing was the main thing."

* * *

MEANWHILE, IN Haiti there were rumors that Dejoie had been ousted from Cuba.

And in New York dissension among his followers was revealed when Dr. Camille Lherisson was removed as secretary general of the Haitian Democratic League and Jacques Balince, acting secretary general, said it was because Dr. Lherisson had "exceeded his authority."

Good news this week for Haiti was the announcement that CARE was dispatching within a few days 3,150,000 pounds of U.S. surplus foods to the country.

Bruce H. McDonald, chairman of the Maryland Committee for CARE, said the food supply would be sufficient to feed 75,000 people for six months in the famished northwestern sector of the country.

First shipments are to leave CARE's Philadelphia warehouse by April 15.

Foods being shipped will include milk powder, corn meal and flour.

Three CARE representatives will administer the program in cooperation with the Haitian Cooperating Council for Voluntary Assistance.

The Haitian Army will provide CARE with trucks and mules to transport the foods into rural areas where roads are non-existent.

Contributions, marked Haiti relief, may be sent to CARE, Mondawmin, Baltimore 15.

* * *

THE HAITIAN government has been seeking to get the United States to support a crash program of aid to help ease the crisis in the northwestern sector where lack of rain last year has brought extreme hardship to the natives.

Washington observers have concluded that the government will decide to take a course less keyed to the emergency aspect in granting assistance.

Acting in this more normal manner, the U.S. would not leave the impression that government representatives there now on assistance programs are failing.

Ambassador Bonhomme said his country is "most grateful" for the assistance it is receiving.

However, he said this is not the eventual answer and Haiti must some how get its production and economy in line with 20th Century standards.

Recalling the 1955 hurricane when Haiti had to call for help from other nations, he said:

"Any country should have a leeway. Presently, any emergency catches us with our own pants down, all the time with our backs against the wall."

He blamed this situation on over population and the lack of modern machines and methods and a need for greater financial investment in the country.

* * *

THE BIGGEST problem facing the foods program now, Mr. Bonhomme explained, is getting it distributed in the mountain areas where there are bad or no roads.

Mr. Bonhomme was in Baltimore to speak at Wednesday morning's student assembly at Morgan State College.

He told the students to place their emphasis on group freedom rather than individual freedom.

Mr. Bonhomme was introduced by Bertine Edmund, a Morgan student from Haiti. Dean George C. Grant officiated.

Also present for the assembly program were Mrs. Bonhomme; Gaston Wesl, minister counselor, Haitian Embassy; Mr. Wesl, and Dr. Joseph H. Thomas, of Haiti's Baltimore consul, and his son, Joseph Jr.

One of the things Mr. Bonhomme made a special point of seeing was Fort McHenry, where the American flag was flying in battle when Francis Scott Key wrote the Star Spangled Banner.

THEY DID IT AGAIN — Two Morgan State College debaters who last year won the top negative team trophy at Dickinson College, last week won the top affirmative team honors and trophy at The University of Pittsburgh Spring Novice Debate Tournament. The debaters, shown with their trophy, are Hughlyn Fierce and Frances Nicholson, both sophomores.

Morgan enrollment spirals despite tougher standards

A more rigorous academic diet and higher standards meet apparently proved palatable to Morgan State College students, President Martin D. Jenkins disclosed today.

Dr. Jenkins revealed that enrollment at the college has increased since the new program upgrading standards was introduced despite the fact that over the past three years 808 applicants were denied admission for academic reasons and 985 students were either dropped for poor scholarship or withdrew while on probation.

Moreover, Dr. Jenkins disclosed that a greater percentage of students are now making a more satisfactory academic performance.

The educator's disclosures are contained in a statement in which he reports on the effects of the experimental program upon scholarship and enrollment.

* * *

GENERALLY, the program establishes a mild selective admissions policy, provides for the screening of borderline students at the end of the sophomore year, and requires the dropping of upperclassmen who fail to maintain a "C" average.

A unique feature of the program is a three-track freshman curriculum designed to provide experiences suited to the achievement levels and abilities of students—who may range from those with weak preparation for college to those showing superior potential.

Developed by the faculty over more than ten years of study and experimentation, the program is designed to meet student needs. It was commended by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools when that body re-affirmed the accreditation of Morgan last year.

Dr. Jenkins' report revealed that this year enrollment has reached an all-time high, with 2,273 students registered over 2,212 last year, an increase of nearly 3 per cent.

This increase, Dr. Jenkins indicates, has occurred despite the fact that a higher percentage of students who fail to meet entrance requirements are being rejected.

Entrance requirements stipulate that students must have been graduated in the upper three-fourths of their classes or not be admitted by entrance examination.

* * *

THIS YEAR 419 of the 1,770 applicants for admission were rejected for academic reasons, Dr. Jenkins said.

The rejection rate represents a considerable increase over the last five years. In a table accompanying his report, the educator gives these figures on rejections:

144 for 1954-55; 235 for 1955-56; 188 for 1956-57; 210 for 1957-58; 410 for 1958-59.

In commenting upon the increase in enrollment which has accompanied the higher standards, President Jenkins said:

"While the findings are not yet conclusive—it seems clear that making our program qualitatively superior is attracting more students and better prepared students to the college."

Figures reveal the enrollment of the institution has been constantly on the increase over the past ten years, jumping from 1,436 in 1947-48 to the present 2,273.

Comparing the Morgan increase with school enrollment increases nationally, as reported by the United States Office of Education, President Jenkins explains that over a ten-year period enrollment at Morgan State College has increased about 2 per cent, almost twice the rate of enrollment increase for colleges generally.

"It seems safe to predict that our enrollment should exceed 3,000 in 1968," Dr. Jenkins said.

He pointed out also that more students are making the honor roll and that freshman classes are scoring higher on entrance work once enrolled in the college.

First salutatorian at Eastern High

MISS HERMIONE HARDIN

Today's children!

There was the day when beauty was enough for any healthy - minded 16-year-old girl, but today, they want brains too.

Filling both these requirements — for good looks and brains — is Miss Hermione Hardin, our first salutatorian at Eastern High School.

A February graduate, Miss Hardin's academic record was almost completely filled with E's (for excellence).

"I was quite happy and quite thrilled, but I didn't expect that much," she said.

* * *

"A LOT OF people thought I should have had the top place (valedictorian) but I don't think that's so. I was always given the chance to do so many things at school," she explained.

Although she "didn't expect that much," perhaps you can imagine Hermione's suspense during the last few days of the semester:

"They told me I was one of the top three, but they never tell you your exact standing until it is announced at graduation — that's the tradition there.

"My graduating average was 93.8. The highest was Rosalie Selvage, She got 94. She was a very hard worker — she deserved what she got," said Hermione.

* * *

THE DAUGHTER of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Hardin of 2028 Ruxton Ave., Hermione was a member of the Glee Club at her Alma Mater. She also accompanied the group at the piano at her graduation exercise.

She said she just loved that, too.

During her high school days, she was also a member of the Senior Science Club.

She is a pet lover too. When the AFRO arrived "Mistress Muge" the family's Boston Mastiff, answered the door with his mistress, Hermione has been accepted at the University of Pennsylvania and plans to enter in the fall.

She wants to be a physicist like her dad, a physicist with the government at the Army Chemical Center, Edgewood.

Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Reckling Sr. He is a retired Baltimore school principal.

FRANK D. REEVES, Washington attorney, told Morgan State College men Saturday that their responsibility is to achieve success that will mean leadership for others. Though not yet the time approaches when all men will be judged on worth alone, Mr. Reeves said, Occasion was the annual Men's Day dinner.

Nursing classes

A free class in mother and baby care will be sponsored by the Baltimore Regional Red Cross Chapter Nursing Services beginning Tuesday, April 14, at chapter headquarters, 23rd and St. Paul Sts.

The class will meet once a week for six weeks from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Certificates will be awarded to all those who complete the course.

Indoor tennis classes at YM

Fifteen young tennis enthusiasts are regularly participating in the Druid Hill Avenue Branch YMCA Indoor Tennis Program.

They include Patricia Jones, Mary Pegues, Rose Williams, Etta Petty, Ruth Hunter, Loralee Pritchett, Joan Bryant, Jane Harrison, Brookie Davis, Betty Turner, and Evelyn Crockett, all of whom are student nurses at Provident Hospital.

Under the watchful eyes of Wesley Stubbs and his two co-workers, Irvington (Rip) Williams and Joseph Beatty, this group of nurses along with Marian Yarbrough, Eleanor Pearson, Richard Hobson, and William Dorsey form the nucleus for the tennis program this year.

The group meets on Monday nights from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. for instruction in tennis skills and practice. Persons interested in participating in this year round program may arrange to do so by contacting the Physical Education Department of the Druid Hill Avenue Branch YMCA.

Call Lafayette 3-4464 and ask for Mr. Jubilee or Mr. Freeman.

City schools schedule spring registration

The Baltimore City Public Schools will hold a spring registration on Thursday, May 7 and Friday, May 8, from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., and 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m., to permit parents to enrol new pupils for the next school year in the public elementary schools.

Applicants for admission to kindergarten must be five years of age on or before December 31, 1959. Applicants for first grade must be six years of age on or before December 31, 1959.

Parents who plan to register their children on these dates should bring to the school which the child will attend a birth certificate and a vaccination certificate.

Parents who wish to register their children this spring, but who find it inconvenient to do so on either of the above dates, may call the principal of the school concerned for information concerning other registration opportunities.

In addition to the spring registration, there will be an opportunite for registration of new pupils just prior to the opening of the schools in the fall on Sept. 1 and 2.

Something new in summer fun

Something new has been added to summer pleasure.

It is the Howard Hills Family Vacation Country Club located just 20 minutes from northwest Baltimore in beautiful Howard County near Ellicott City.

The club is for every member of the family and is open seven days a week, June through Labor Day.

Offered at the club are a concrete swimming pool, luxurious beach, bridle path, kiddie playgrounds, canteen, ball field, a well stocked fishing lake and many other attractions.

For a small fee, regardless of the number in a given family, every member of that family can use the facilities of the club all season long.

CAMPUS NOTES

The Beatniks'—for them or against them?

By LAVANIA RICE

The previous holiday was kept in a festive mood by several way out "Bohemian" style parties.

To start the ball rolling Leroy Hawthorne gave a set, the sounds were real cool, and the host was the most.

All who attended this little gathering had a boss time.

They were namely: Frank Boston, Helen Flemings, John Spenser, Peggy Parker, Arthur Waters, Jesse Bowers, Anita Brisco, Bernard Bell, Patricia Gales, Francina Bean, Robert Williams, McNair Taylor, Dorsey Skinner, Augusta Williams and Estella Strong.

May be you have never heard of a "Bohemian" Picnic, but if the weather had permitted Easter Monday several of you would have been a witness to one.

The old saying the show must go on, so must the fun. What's wrong with an in-door picnic?

Well that's what Mickey Taylor had. All of the gang had a great deal of fun eating their lunch on the floor, and of course enjoying Mickey's fine collection.

Those were there were Barbara Goldsmith, Beverly Johnson, Barbara Allen, Bernard Stokes, Brenda Bowe, Betty Dawson, Elnora Johnson, Jeanette Eady, Charles Miller and Martha Wainwright.

* * *

PRO AND CON

The newest trend today seems to be, for the males that look, act, and dress like the old shaggy sheep. To complete their ensemble they call themselves "Beatniks."

I decided to ask several young ladies around the campus their opinion of this new trend in dress.

DOLORES HUNT— "It depends upon who is wearing it (the beard) and also the features and shape of the fellows face."

Delores turned con when speaking of the way the Beatniks dress. She said their attire is sloppy, flashy and "way out."

PATRICIA LOGAN — "I think Beatniks are the swing-ingness things to hit town. I also think that what this town needs is something different."

The Sigma Omicron Phi, better known as the "Sugs-Pats" are giving a Bohemian dance on May 9 at the Morgan Christian Center.

The Omega Phi Phi frat at Morgan sponsored a jazz show on Saturday at which the Sinbads were the featured attraction.

At present the members are preparing for probation and the election, some of the members hold very important offices on the campus.

Matthew Gillette, president of junior class; Ronnie Owens, quite active in government affairs and a member of the Agelinic Council; Jimmy Ward, president of the senior class.

* * *

IF YOU are interested in plays and drama, the Arena Players are presenting "The Immoralist," on April 15, 16, 17 at the YMCA.

The place was 2042 N. Fulton Ave. on Saturday and Julia-Lavania gave a party at the home of Hilda Nelson. If you feel sorry for the poor sardines, you should have been at this party.
