Ken Scott gets 2 years

Kenneth Scott, 19, 700 block E. 22nd St., was sentenced to not more than 2 years in Criminal Court Tuesday on charges of assaulting an officer and breaking and entering a tavern in the 1800 block N. Dallas St.

According to a report by Officer Henry Stabb, Scott alluded him after he caught him coming out of the tavern owned by Edward Cohen April 25, about 3:20 a.m.

The defendant was later apprehended by officer James McNamara, who testified at the trial before Judge Joseph R. Byrnes and identified by Officer Staab as the man who attacked him.

Scott told police he had been drinking, and remembered entering the tavern after it was closed but said he did not remember kicking the officer.

IN ATTACKING the constitutionality of the Taft-Hartley injunction, the Steelworkers have raised an important issue since this is the first time the law has been challenged on this ground.

Union Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg told the three judges at the Thursday hearing that to force the steelworkers back to the mills would be a loss of freedom.

He added:

"We can get along without steel for a little while longer if necessary."

DURING the hearing, Judge Hastie, the only colored Federal judge in the Third District, asked Mr. Goldberg whether negotiations would continue during the period of the stay.

"There is nothing to prevent further negotiations except the inability of the negotiators to get together," was the answer.

President Eisenhower had sought the injunction after his special fact finding panel reported union and management hopelessly deadlocked in negotiations for a new contract.

The last offer made by the steel firms and rejected by the union was a 33-cent hourly wage-package increase in a three-year contract.

The union also rejected an industry proposal to submit to binding arbitration the companies' demands for changes in plant work rules.

"A lot of them talk foolishness but they've been in that thing for life and they don't know any better.

"I feel that discrimination will be broken down in 10 to 15 years but we need the NAACP to keep pushing."

A widower four years, the Rev. Mr. Brown says he lives alone at 2013 N. Pulaski St.

IN MENTIONING the name of the Rev. Mr. Miller, who ordained him, the Rev. Mr. Brown remarked, "Oh yes, I see where he has started on his third life membership."

The Rev. Mr. Miller, a self-educated man who marked his 80th birthday August 8, is taking the third membership for his church, the Unity Christian Community Church.

The first two he bought for himself.

"I think it's one of the greatest movements I ever heard of and certainly it is doing a great work," he said, explaining his tremendous interest.

His is a small church with 600 members, about 250 of them active.

A NATIVE of Waldorf Station, the Rev. Mr. Miller was reared in Washington, D.C., and came to Baltimore in 1930 and worked his way through the old Morgan before before it became a college.

He and his wife, the former Beatrice Addison of Baltimore, are parents of 10 children, 8 of whom are living. All of them have finished, are attending or have attended either Morgan State College or Coppin State Teachers College.

The Rev. Mr. Miller entered the Christian Church after 18 years in the Methodist Church and his son Levi Jr. is a minister in the former denomination, now pastoring in Brooklyn, N.Y.

'I'm going to get that money'

"I'm going to get that money."

Fred Hodge, 30, 600 block Smithson St., told Magistrate Calvin A. Douglass of Western police Court that Eddie Worthy, 38, 1300 block of Mount St., made this statement Monday night before robbing him of $20 at knifepoint.

Mr. Worthy was held in $5,000 bail for grand jury action on charges of assault and robbery.

Mr. Hodge said he had just pawned a tape recorder for the $20 and told the defendant about it when Worthy ordered him into the restroom of a cafe and robbed him.

premature nursery at the Harriett Lane Children's division.

There is no information on when the quads will be able to leave the hospital; physicians say. Kim, the girl born first is the only one out of the incubator. The other three are still in the intermediate incubator.

MRS. JANE LORRAINE GRAVES, the 30-year-old mother, returned to her home in Annapolis, last Thursday, six days after the quads' birth, and communicates with the hospital by phone. There are eight other children at home, ages 2 to 13.

The babies' father, George Graves, is estranged from the family, reportedly living now in Standardsville, Va.

Kim, the girl born first is still the most agressive. Being fed every four hours, the infant now tips the scales at 4 pounds, 6½ ounces.

The only boy in the group, Kevin, who was born in third place, now weighs 3 pounds, 10 ounces.

HE IS fed every three hours however, the other two girls, Karen and Katherine, are fed every four hours.

Karen weighs 3 pounds, 11¼ ounces and Katherine weighs 3 pounds, 8¾ ounces.

On Thursday; Mrs. Graves told the AFRO that she is "feeling fine" but has decided not to venture outside her home or go up stairs until another week of rest. She is walking around indoors, however.

learned to live with pain.

"I look about me, and I see those who can not move, patients whose suffering is much greater than mine and I try to smile through my pain."

And, smile she does.

Mrs. Gladden is a familiar figure at the Montebello Hospital.

For four years, she was confined to the old hospital. She moved to the new hospital at 2201 Argonne Dr., when it was opened two years ago.

ALL THE time, she remains a ray of sunshine and symbol of courage. Day after day she rolls about the third floor wards and spreads cheer to her fellow patients.

As she passes through the halls, they exchange light-hearted greetings and she says, "I know them all and I enjoy their company. It makes the days go by pleasantly and swiftly."

Thoughtfulness of others and grateful for the care she has received for six years, Mrs. Gladden speaks constantly of physicians, nurses and members of the staff who have helped her.

Her special thanks goes to Mrs. Gladys Johnson, Roy Campanella's sister, who is a volunteer Red Cross worker.

Mrs. Madeline Worth, in charge of entertainment and head of the Red Cross volunteer workers, and Mrs. Jean Dana, head of occupational therapy, also receives Mrs. Gladden's praise.

MRS. GLADDEN'S time is spent in doing ceramics, painting, sewing and viewing TV. She likes to play cards, "500" and "Gin Rummy" along with other patients.

With very little help, she can dress herself and get in and out of bed.

"My fondest wish is to be able to return home to make my husband happy and comfortable."

As near to her wish as possible, Mrs. Gladden spends some week-ends at home and for five years has enjoyed Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter with her family.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. James Wiley, 1100 Bradford St. Her three sisters and four brothers are Mrs. Elois Folkes, and Misses Bessie and Anna Wiley; Messrs. James, Floyd, Lawrence and Oshie Wiley, all of Baltimore.

THE ACCIDENT which put Mrs. Gladden in the hospital occurred in August 1953 on a family vacation trip.

She suffered a broken neck and spinal cord injuries when the car in which she was riding with her husband, James, a shoemaker, and his mother and three other relatives slid off the highway on a soft shoulder near Danville, Va.

Only Mrs. Gladden, her husband and his mother were injured.

Mr. Gladden recovered, but his mother died four months later following a heart attack.

Rights suit

Miss Sara Slack, a New York City newspaperwoman, appeared in Federal Court yesterday (Thursday), claiming her civil rights had been violated in Maryland when she was allegedly refused service.

Chief Judge Roszel C. Thomsen heard the testimony against the Atlantic White Tower System, Inc., at Pulaski Hwy. and Highland Ave., Rt. 40, the defendants.

Attorneys for the complainant and the defense said they would submit an agree statement of certain facts and present their argument to the court.

Judge Thomsen gave the complainants 30 days to file briefs after the statements are submitted, and the defendants have 15 days longer to file answers.

"They hardly had time to get to the bar," the mother said. "Before they left they had been here all evening playing records, until dark."

BESIDE THE sobbing mother, on the arm of her chair, as she told her story, sat Tom's young wife, Theresa.

"I saw Tom this morning and he could hardly talk," the younger Mrs. Heath said quietly.

Both boys were admitted to Hopkins with bullet wounds of the stomach.

Doctors said they were unable to remove the bullet from Tom, but it would eventually work its way out, according to their information to police.

According to the police report, doctors also said they had intended to operate on Leroy to remove a bullet that was lodged against his spine.

There are three other sons aged 22, 20 and 13, and five daughters, aged 26, 25, 18, 15 and 9, in the Heath family.

Workman injured

Roscoe Gleason, 18, suffered head and spinal injury while working on a construction job Thursday when a fire escape weight fell upon him.

Dramatic rescue try in water

Man swims with broken legs but saves hunter

CLEVELAND, Ohio—Alphonso Woodall, a 36-year-old daredevil stuntman with two broken legs, threw aside his crutches Tuesday night to dive into the cold and pounding waters of Lake Erie and save a hunter, near drowning after his boat had overturned.

A year ago Woodall flew across Lake Erie on a boat-towed kite.

Last March, while in California making motion pictures with his man-carrying kite, he was dashed against the ground and received two broken legs.

On Tuesday night he was hobbling along the shore of Lake Erie on crutches to exercise his injured legs when out of the darkness and over the sound of the waves he heard cries for help.

"God, somebody help me, I'm going under."

THE CRY was that of 30-year-old Louis Fabri, who was hanging onto an overturned outboard motor boat about 60 feet off shore.

Woodall hobbled to a telephone and called police. He took a rope from a boathouse and grabbed a life jacket from his car.

Calling for the drowning man to hang on to the overturned boat, he tied the rope about his own waist and gave the other end to a passerby.

He then dove into the lake and swam out to the overturned boat. He then tied the rope around Fabri and men on the shore hauled the pair to safely, but not before a heavy wave had pounded Woodall against a seawall, re-injuring his left leg.

FABRI, hospitalized, was described as in fair condition Wednesday, but suffering from shock and exposure.

Fabri and a companion, Eugene Harsch, 29, had gone on a duck hunting trip when rough waters overturned their boat.

Harsch was swept away, and Coast Guardsmen were still seeking his body on Thursday.

building he told the officers what had happened but they hesitated to attempt a capture because of the belief that the man might not only shoot himself but the hostages as well.

The problem of the capture was settled with startling abruptness when the sound of a shot rang out and police rushed to the third floor to find that the man had carried out his threat to shoot himself.

Before the man shot himself he ordered the hostages out of the room.

Anthony Atkins, 48, tried to talk the man out of killing himself after the gunman ordered him to leave the room and take the eight-year-old child down with him.

"He told me to get on downstairs and take that boy I faced a whole lot of police guns when I started down and I yelled, 'I'm not the man.'

"They told me to come on down with my hands up. We heard the shot before we got down."

Robert Blair, 20, who with 25-year-old Willie Boswell were routed from their bed on the second floor, said they fled to the third floor to find the gunman right behind them.

"First he made us get on the floor, then he ordered us out. I saw so many police guns when I started down I decided to go back and take a chance on him and his one gun. I was outside but when he shot himself I just knew I had been shot."

Summing up the terrifying morning, Mr. Wilson told the AFRO:

"As far as you could see there were policemen; it was raining like . . . outside and everybody there was scared to death."

NEWS & NOTES

By R. DELACY PETERS

Three time-honored examples of invincibility have been Santa Claus, the New York Yankees and June, the favorite month of new brides.

The Yankee bubble burst with a vengeance this season and it appears—according to a report from a Biological Sciences group—that June is being seriously pressed as the favorite month for nuptial knot-tying. August looms as a strong threat and even September and November are coming up fast. August, September, November — whatever the month—we are aware of the fact that the institution Marriage imposes substantial financial responsibility. The future of a man and wife, the future of children depend on the financial foundation and structure created by this man and woman joined nuptially. One of the first steps in establishing this financial future should be to call the man from MUTUAL of BALTIMORE and discuss our plan for guaranteeing tomorrow's financial status.
